MUSIC * The origin of music is lost in antiquity, among civilised peoples it is probably to be traced to the ancient Egyptian priests, who employed this art in their religious rites and ceremonies From the Egyptians the Greeks and Romans derived their knowledge of music The ancient Hebrews probably took with them into Palestine some of the songs they had learned in Egypt The hymns used in the temple formed the basis of the melodies of the early Christian church, and from these hymns was formulated the first authoritative musical system St Ambrose, abp of Milan, 374, and Gregory the Great (pope, 590), may be regarded as the fathers of western church music Isidore, bp of Seville, 601, mentions harmony, in the modern sense of the word, in his "Sententiæ de Musica" Guido Arentino (died 1050), gave the names ut (do), re, mi, fa, sol, la, to the notes now universally used, si was subsequently added by Le Maire The foundation of counterpoint was laid by Johannes Ockenheim, or Okeghem (1420–1513), and his pupil, Josquin des Prés (1450–1521), this art attained its perfection under Orlando di Lasso and Palestrina (the pupil of Claude Gondimel (1510–72), the founder of the Roman school), at the end of the 16th century The compositions of Monteverde (1568–1643) mark the rise of the new school of harmony, which gradually spread throughout Europe, including among its masters Bach and Handel The aria was introduced by Alessandro Scarlatti (1659–1725), the founder of the Neapolitan school Opera seria had its inception about 1580 by the Florence Academy, a group of amateurs living in Florence, who met at the house of count Bardi, a Florentine nobleman, with the object of promoting the closer union of poetry and music by the revival of the musical declamation of the ancient Greeks The French grand opera school was founded, late in the 17th century, by J B Zully (1633–87), who composed many operas, ballets, occasional pieces and some church music Since the middle of the 18th century Germany has held the highest place in music, its many exponents including Beethoven, Weber, Sphor, and Mendelssohn The later German school had its origin in the 19th century, and claims as its starting-point Beethoven's ninth symphony, in which music and poetry form a perfect whole, Wagner and Lutz, "tone poets," have been the chief exponents of this school, "the music of the future" Among the composers of sonatas and allied works are Beethoven, Mozart, Haydn, Schubert, Chopin, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Brahms, Liszt, and Dvorák Constanzo Festa, whose Te Deum has been sung on the election of every pope since his time, was one of the creators of the madrigal Prior to 1600, the chief music in England was masses, ballads, and madrigals, but dramatic music was much cultivated from that time About the end of James I's reign, a music professorship was founded in the university of Oxford by Dr Wm Hychin, and the year 1710 was distinguished by the arrival in England of George Frederick Handel Mozart came to England in 1763, Joseph Haydn in 1791, and Carl Maria von Weber in 1825 "The Oxford History of Music," Vol IV, V, Feb 1903 The Polyphonic Period, by prof Wooldridge, published, 1902

MUSICAL PIRACY first commenced in 1896, when popular copyright songs were printed by unauthorised persons, and sold in the streets at twopence per sheet. Music publishers sustained heavy losses, and in 1902 piracy having assumed such enormous proportions the Musical Copyright Association was formed by the publishers. As a result of their efforts a bill was passed in the 1902 session of parliament—the Musical Copyright (summary proceedings) Act, 1902 This bill was, to an extent, inoperative, because whilst it enabled publishers to seize pirated music it was shorn of its two most important provisions—the penalty and the search warrant clauses In 1903 a bill to amend the 1902 act passed the lords, but was blocked in the commons by Mr Caldwell, and on December 15, 1903, a committee was appointed by the home secretary to inquire into the subject of music piracy As a result another bill was drafted, but was "talked out' of the house of commons by Mr Caldwell, who was a member of the committee A further effort to legislate on the subject was made in 1905, but again it met with failure At the end of that year a man named Willetts known as the "King of the Pirates, and others, were arrested and charged with conspiracy to print and publish copyright music It was given in evidence that millions of copies of pirated music had been seized by the police, and in the end Willetts was convicted and sentenced to nine months imprisonment Others received lighter sentences.

NAVAL SALUTE TO THE BRITISH FLAG began in Alfred's reign, and though sometimes disputed, may be said to have been continued ever since The Dutch agreed to strike to the English colours in the British seas, in 1672 The honour of the flag salute at sea was also formally assented to by France in 1704, although it had been long previously exacted by England, see Flag and Salutes at Sea.

NAVAL UNIFORMS. The first notice of the establishment of a uniform in the British naval service, which we have met with, occurs in the Jacobite's Journal of 5 March, 1748, under the head of "Domestic News, in these terms —"An order is said to be issued, requiring all his majesty's sea officers, from the admiral down to the midshipman, to wear a uniformity of clothing, for which purpose pattern coats for dress suits and frocks for each rank of officers are lodged at the Navy-office, and at the several dockyards for their inspection' This is corroborated by the Gazette of 13 July, 1757, when the first alteration in the uniform took place, and in which a reference is made to the order of 1748, alluded to in the journal above mentioned, and which in fact is the year when a naval uniform was first established James I had indeed granted, by warrant of 6 April, 1609, to six of his principal masters of the navy, "liverie coats of fine red cloth." The warrant is stated to have been drawn verbatim from one signed by queen Elizabeth, but which had not been acted upon by reason of her death. This curious document is in the British Museum but king James's limited red livery is supposed to have been soon discontinued —Quarterly Review An act respecting them was passed in 1894

NAVY PAY OFFICE, organised in 1644, was abolished in 1836, when the army and navy pay departments were consolidated in the Paymaster General's office

NEBULÆ, the luminous cloudlike mist visible to the naked eye in some constellations, such as Orion, in others only by powerful telescope, much studied by astronomers, and formerly considered to be clusters of stars Halley gave a list of 6 nebulæ, with a theory, in 1716 Messier, in 1784, gave 103 Sir Wm Herschel discovered more than 2,500, and sir John Herschel more than 2,000, 7,840 known up to 1887, Dr Dreyer's index catalogue gives 1,529, published total, 9,369, 1895 Nebulæ proper are classified as annular, elliptic, spiral, planetary, and nebulous Their spectrum consists usually of a few bright lines indicative of their gaseous structure

The Nebular Hypothesis put forth by Laplace in his "Systeme du Monde, 1796, supposed that the solar system was evolved mechanically from a vast diffused revolving nebula, and that nebulæ were the early stages in the formation of planets and their satellites, by cooling, condensation, and contraction This theory was adopted by sir William Herschel, and though at first opposed, is now generally accepted in a modified form Mr Lassell scrutinized the dumb bell nebula in Orion, and reported that the bright parts did not appear to be stars, Oct 1860 Dr Wm Huggins reported his analyses of certain nebulæ by their spectra, and believed them to be gaseous, 1865

CHARTIST RIOTS —About 10,000 chartists (which see), from the neighbouring mines, armed with guns, pikes, &c, arrived at Newport, 4 Nov 1839 They divided themselves into two bodies—one, under the command of Mr John Frost, an ex magistrate, proceeded down the principal street, whilst the other, headed by his son, took the direction of Stow hill They met in front of the Westgate hotel, where the magistrates were assembled with about 30 soldiers of the 45th regiment, and several special constables The rioters broke the windows and fired on the inmates, by which the mayor, Mr (afterwards sir Thomas) Phillips, and several other persons were wounded The soldiers returned the fire, and dispersed the mob, which fled, leaving about 20 dead, and others wounded. A detachment of the 10th royal hussars arrived from Bristol, and the town became tranquil.

* During the races, on 22 March, 1683, Newmarket was nearly destroyed by an accidental fire, which occasioned the hasty departure of the company then assembled, including the king, the queen, the duke of York, the royal attendants, and many of the nobility and to this disaster historians have ascribed the failure of the Rye house plot, the object of which was said to be the assassination of the king and his brother on the road from Newmarket to London, if the period of their journey had not been thus anticipated, see Rye House Plot.

Frost was apprehended on the following day, together with his printer, and other influential persons among the chartists He and others were tried and sentenced to death (afterwards commuted to transportation) Jan 1840
An amnesty was granted them, 3 May, and they returned to England Sept. 1856 declared war against him, 28 Feb 1856, the other states of central America soon followed the example, and a sanguinary struggle ensued, lasting till May, 1857 On 25 Nov 1856, Walker totally burnt Granada, being unable to defend it, and removed the seat of government to Rivas This place he surrendered to gen Mora on 1 May, 1857, on the intervention of capt. Davis, of the St Mary's, U S. Himself, his staff, and 260 men were conveyed in that vessel to New Orleans, where they were received with great enthusiasm. On 25 Nov, 1857, he again invaded Nicaragua, landing at Punta Arenas with 400 men, but on 8 Dec. was compelled to surrender to capt. Paulding, U S, and was conveyed to New York. He escaped punishment by nolle prosequi (2 June, 1858) but capt. Paulding was tried for exceeding orders, and blamed—yet excused by president Buchanan. On 5 Aug 1860, Walker landed near Truxillo, Honduras, and took the fort on the 6th. On the 7th he proclaimed that he made war on the government, not on the people of Honduras. On being summoned to surrender his booty by capt. Salmon, R.N, of the Icarus, he refused, and fled. He was pursued, caught, given up to the Honduras government, tried, and shot (12 Sept.). His followers were dismissed. Grey Town was surrendered to Nicaragua in 1860.

NITRE, see Saltpetre

NITRIC ACID, a compound of nitrogen and oxygen, formerly called aqua fortis, is said to have been first obtained in a separate state by Raymond Lully, an alchemist, about 1287, but we are indebted to Cavendish, Priestley, and Lavoisier for our present knowledge of its properties H Cavendish demonstrated the nature of this acid in 1785 Nitrous acid was discovered by Scheele about 1774 Nitrous gas was accidentally discovered by dr Hales, Nitrous oxide gas (laughing gas) was discovered by dr Priestley in 1776 The use of this gas as an anæsthetic, recommended by H Davey in 1800, was begun in America (by Mr Wells, a dentist), 1844, in Paris, 1866, in London, 31 March, 1868, ingenious apparatus having been invented for its application

NITROGEN or AZOTE (from the Greek a, no, and zao or ζω, I live), an irrespirable elementary gas, and an important element in food, discovered by Rutherford about 1772 Before 1777, Scheele separated the oxygen of the air from the nitrogen, and almost simultaneously with Lavoisier discovered that the atmosphere is a mixture of these two gases Nitrogen combined with hydrogen forms the volatile alkali ammonia, so freely given off by decomposing animal and vegetable bodies See Air, 1894 Prof Hermann Hellriegel (born 1831) demonstrated in 1886 the power of leguminous plants to fix free nitrogen through the agency of microbes in their root nodules whereby the soil is much enriched Clover gives up to the soil that which wheat requires He died 24 Sept 1895

NITRO-GLYCERINE (also called NITROLEUM), an intensely explosive amber-like fluid, discovered by Sobrero in 1847, is produced by adding glycerine (in successive small quantities) to a mixture of one part of nitric acid and two parts of sulphuric acid Alfred Nobel, a Swede, first attempted its application as an explosive agent in 1864 It has caused several most disastrous accidents, with great loss of life In attempting to bury some nitro-glycerine in the town moor at Newcastle-on-Tyne, 17 Dec 1867, an explosion took place, and seven persons lost their lives, including Mr Mawson, the sheriff, and Mr Bryson, town surveyor, see Dynamite Mr Alfred Nobel's nitro-glycerine manufactory, near Stockholm, blown up, 15 persons killed, many injured, 10 June, 1868 An act prohibiting its importation for a time, and regulating its transmission, was passed in 1869, and repealed by the Explosives act of 1875 Secret manufacture discovered, see Birmingham, 1883

NORTH SEA, INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY The proposal of the tsar that the dispute between Great Britain and Russia arising out of the North Sea outrage (see England, 22 Oct., 1904, et seq) should be submitted to an international commission of inquiry on the basis of the Hague convention, was accepted by the British government, 28 Oct The members comprising the commission were vice-adm sir L. Beaumont (Gt. Britain), vice-adm Dubasoff (Russia), rear-adm Davis (United States), adm. baron von Spaun (Austria-Hungary), adm Fournier (France) The first meeting of the commission was held in Paris, 22 Nov., when adm. Fournier was elected president. Final sitting held 25 Feb, 1905, report of the commission read by adm Fournier The majority of the commissioners were unable to determine on what object the ships fired, but the commissioners unanimously recognised that the trawlers committed no hostile act, and the majority were of opinion that as there was no torpedo boat either among the trawlers or on the spot, the fire opened by adm Rozhdestvensky was not justifiable The firing on the starboard side seemed to the majority of the commissioners to have lasted longer than appeared necessary The commissioners recognised that there was at the close of the firing sufficient uncertainty as to the danger incurred by the ships to decide the admiral to proceed on his way, but the majority regret that he did not inform the authorities, when passing through the Straits of Dover, that the trawlers required assistance In closing their report the commissioners declared that their appreciations formulated therein were not in their spirit of a nature to cast any discredit either on the military value or the sentiments of humanity of admiral Rozhdestvensky and of the personnel of his squadron Count Benckendorff, Russian ambassador, paid to lord Lansdowne, 9 March, 1905, the sum of 65,000*l*, the amount of the indemnity due to the Hull fishermen, assessed by adm. sir Cyprian Bridge and Mr Butler Aspinall, appointed by the Board of Trade to inquire into the matter of compensation The amount claimed by the fishermen was 103,830*l*

ORANGEMEN The "Battle of the Diamond," 21 Sept 1795 (see Diamond), and the treachery experienced by the Protestants on that occasion, convinced them they would become an easy prey to the Roman Catholics, from their small numbers, unless they associated for their defence, and consequently the Orange Society was formed in 1795. The first Orange lodge was formed in Armagh, but the name of Orangemen already existed An Orange lodge was formed in Dublin, the members published a declaration of their principles (the maintenance of church and state under the house of Brunswick) in Jan 1798 After 1813 Orangeism declined, but revived again in 1827, when the duke of Cumberland became grand-master, and it is stated that in 1836 there were 145,000 Orangemen in England, and 125,000 in Ireland After a parliamentary inquiry Orange clubs were broken up in conformity with resolutions of the house of commons, but were revived in 1845—1889 In Oct 1857, the lord chancellor of Ireland ordered that justices of the peace should not belong to Orange clubs The Orangemen in Canada were greatly excited during the visit of the prince of Wales in Sept 1860 Mr Wm Johnston, a grand-master, convicted of violating the Party Processions act, was elected M P for Belfast, Nov 1869 See Belfast The Orangemen vigorously oppose the home rule movement, see Ulster, 1892–3

OXUS (the Persian and Turkish Djihoun, local name, Amou Darya), a river of Central Asia, supposed to have changed its course before 1000 A D, and to have resumed its ancient bed in 1878 The Oxus navigated as far as Faizabad Kali (Afghan frontier) by the Russians under adm Baturin, reported, 11 Dec 1894

OXYGEN, a gas (named from the Greek oxus, sharp, as being generally found in acids), is the most abundant of all substances, constituting about one-third of the solid earth, and forming about nine-tenths of water and one-fifth of the atmosphere It was first separated from red oxide of mercury by Priestley, 1 Aug 1774, and by Scheele, who was ignorant of Priestley's discovery, in 1775 It is a supporter of animal life (in respiration), and of combustion An oxygen gas company was announced in Dec 1864, its object being the cheap manufacture of oxygen for its application to the production of perfect combustion in lamps, stoves, furnaces, &c It is now largely produced with about 5 per cent of inert nitrogen by the Brin method from atmospheric air (1893) Oxygen was liquefied by Raoul Pictet at Geneva (pressure, 320 atmospheres, temp 140° below zero Cent.), 22 Dec 1877 See Ozone

Professor Dewar obtained 2 cubic centimètres ($\frac{1}{10}$ of a fluid oz.) of liquid oxygen by means of liquid ethylene (the illuminating part of coal gas), temp 140 below zero Cent. (by Wroblewski and Olzewski's method), at the Royal Institution, London, in the presence of the prince and princess of Wales, 26 June, 1884. He exhibited for the first time some solid oxygen in the form of snow (temperature −200° Cent. −400° Fahr.), produced by placing liquid oxygen in a partial vacuum, at the Royal Institution 27 May, 1886

Professor Dewar exhibited between 300 to 400 centimètres liquid oxygen at the Faraday Centenary, 26 June, 1891 The feeble magnetism of oxygen, demonstrated by Faraday, was shown by Professor Dewar to be greatly increased when reduced to the liquid state by a temperature of 180° below zero centigrade, announced 10 Dec. 1891 Some liquid oxygen placed in the magnetic field sprang to the poles and adhered to them till evaporated, this was publicly exhibited by the professor at the Royal Institution, 10 June, 1892 Several pints of liquid oxygen and liquid air were then produced in the presence of the audience

At a meeting of the Royal Institution, 20 Jan 1893, prof Dewar exhibited some of the remarkable properties of liquid oxygen and air, and he showed how the liquid state could be maintained longer by surrounding it with a very high vacuum Prof Dewar reported to the Royal society that he had obtained solid air in the form of ice, a mysterious body, 9 March, 1893 Further researches reported, 22 Jan 1897

Prof Dewar was awarded the Rumford medal of the Royal society in 1894

A statue of Priestley, by F J Williamson at Birmingham, was unveiled by professor T H Huxley, 1 Aug 1874, the centenary of the discovery of oxygen This was also celebrated at Northumberland, Pennsylvania, where he was buried, Feb. 1804 The following telegram was sent 31 July "The brethren at the grave to the brethren at the home of Priestley send greeting on this centennial anniversary of the birth of chemistry"

A method of obtaining oxygen from air, devised and patented by M Margis, of Paris The principle is that of dialysis, or diffusion under pressure, Sept. 1882. See Gas (liquefaction)

By the explosion of a cylinder of compressed oxygen, the carrier was killed, 15 March, 1895

OXYGEN HOME, 2, Fitzroy square, London, founded for the treatment of ulcers and wounds by oxygen gas, about 1896, the oxygen is supposed to turn the toxins or poisons secreted by certain micro organisms into oxy toxins or antidotes, continued success reported, 10 May, 1899

OZOKERIT, a mineral hydro-carbon found in Moldavia and Wallachia From it is distilled a substance suitable for making candles, introduced in the autumn of 1871

OZONE (from the Greek ozein, to yield an odour), was discovered by Schonbein, of Basel, in 1840, when experimenting with the then newly-invented battery of sir Wm Grove, and was recognised by him successively as a minute constituent of the oxygen gas resulting from the electrolysis of water effected by a current of high tension, of air or oxygen through which electric discharges have taken place, and of air in which moist phosphorus has been undergoing slow oxidation

Marignac determined the action of ozone on various substances to be due to their oxidation 1845
Ozonometers constructed 1858
M Schonbein announced his discovery of another modification of oxygen, which he termed antozone hitherto found only in the compound state (in peroxides of sodium, potassium, &c) 1859
The French Academy of Sciences appointed a committee of eminent philosophers to inquire into the nature and relations of ozone 4 Dec 1865
Andrews and Tait demonstrated ozone to be a condensed form of oxygen 1860, ,,
This further established by Soret and Brodie, by quantitative reactions (Odling suggested and Brodie proved ozone to be 3 parts of oxygen compressed into the space of 2) 1872
Ozone, generated by a current produced by Wilde's magneto electric machine, employed to bleach sugar by Edward Beane's patent Aug 1868
Liquefied by Hautefeuille and Chappuis Oct 1880

PARK'S TRAVELS Mungo Park set sail on his first voyage to Africa, under the patronage of the African society, to trace the source of the river Niger, 22 May, 1795, and returned 22 Dec 1797 after having fruitlessly encountered great danger, He again sailed from Portsmouth on his second voyage, 30 Jan. 1805, appointed to a new expedition by government It is stated that his party fired on the natives when resisted, and that he was killed at Broussa on the Niger, Nov 1805 His "Travels in Africa" were published in 1799.

PARLIAMENT (from the French parlement, discourse) derives its origin from the Saxon general assemblies, called Wittenagemot. The name was applied to the assemblies of the state under Louis VII of France, about the middle of the 12th century, but it is said not to have appeared in our law till its mention in the statute of Westminster I., 3 Edw. I., 1272 and yet Coke declared in his Institutes, and spoke to the same effect, when speaker (1592), that this name was used even in the time of Edward the Confessor, 1041. The first clear account we have of the representatives of the people forming a house of commons; was in the 43rd Hen. III. 1258, when it was settled by the statutes of Oxford, that twelve persons should be chosen to represent the commons in the three parliaments, which, by the sixth statute, were to be held yearly. Burton's Annals The general representation by knights, citizens, and burgesses, took place 49 Hen. III. 1265. Dugdale's Summons to Parliament, edit 1685; see Commons and Lords The power and jurisdiction of parliament are so transcendent and absolute, that it cannot be confined, either for causes or persons, within any bounds. It hath sovereign and uncontrollable authority in making and repealing laws It can regulate or new-model the succession to the crown (as was done in the reigns of Henry VIII and William III) It can alter and establish the religion of the country, as was done in the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth Sir Edward Coke * The ninth edition of May's "Practical Treatise on Parliament" was published in 1883, tenth edition, with many changes by sir Richard Palgrave, published Dec 1893, Mr G Barnett Smith's elaborate "History of the English Parliament" was published Nov 1892, see Triennial and Septennial Return of the names of members of parliament from the earliest period to the present time, ordered by the house of commons, 4 May, 1876, and 9 March, 1877 Part I. (1213-1702), published 1879 See Reform and Local Parliaments

It is singular that the French language should still be used

* Termed the "Palace of Westminster" The first contract for the embankment of the river was taken in 1837, by Messrs. Lee this embankment, faced with granite is 886 feet in length and projected into the river in a line with the inner side of the third pier of old Westminster bridge Sir Charles Barry (born 1795, died 1860) was the architect of the sumptuous pile of buildings raised since 1840. The whole stands on a bed of concrete twelve feet thick, to the east it has a front of about 1000 feet, and covers an area of nine statute acres. It contains 1100 apartments, 100 staircases, and two miles of passages or corridors. The great Victoria tower at the south-west extremity is 346 feet in height, and towers of less magnitude crown other portions of the building The great clock in the clock tower was built 1859 by the firm of Dent from the designs of the late lord Grimthorpe. The cost was 4,080*l*, the bells increasing the total to 11,934*l*. The dials are 22½ ft. in diameter hour hands 11 ft. long, minute hands 14 ft distance between each minute on the dials 14 ins. The only larger dial in the world is at Mechlin church—40 ft. wide; but there is no minute-hand, which makes an enormous difference in the power required to wind the clock. The clock reports its own rate to Greenwich by electricity twice a day The average error is under 2 seconds a day. 118th to 128th sitting Sir Henry James address for the Times 31 Oct -22 Nov ,,

The report of the commissioners was laid before parliament, 13 Feb 1890 The following is an abridgment of their conclusions —I That the respondent members of parliament collectively were not guilty of conspiring for the absolute independence of Ireland as a separate nation but that some of them (Messrs M Harris, Dillon, W O Brien, W Redmond, O Connor, J Condon, and J J O Kelly), together with Mr Davitt, established the Land League mainly for that purpose II That the respondents [44] did conspire to promote agrarian agitation the non payment of rents, and the expulsion of the landlords (styled the English garrison). III That they acquitted Mr Parnell and others of the charge of insincerity in their denunciations of the Phœnix Park murders, and affirmed the fac simile letter to be a forgery IV They found that the respondents did disseminate the Irish World and other newspapers, intending to incite to sedition and other crimes V That the charges of incitement to crime, except by intimidation, and of payments for that purpose, were not proved VI They found that the respondents did not denounce the system of intimidation, though they knew its effects, and VII That they defended persons charged with agrarian crime, and supported their families, but it was not proved that they subscribed for testimonials for, or were intimately associated with, notorious criminals, or aided their escape by payments VIII That they found that the respondents made payments to compensate persons injured in the commission of crime. IX That the respondents did invite and obtain the assurance and co-operation of the Physical Force Party in America, including the Clan-na-Gael, and did not repudiate the action of that party

[Certain allegations against Mr Parnell were declared not proved]

The report adopted with thanks, by the commons, after 7 days' debate, 3–11 March, by the lords (without a division), 21 March, 1890. Mr Glad stone's amendment rejected by 339 to 268

PENNY. The ancient silver penny was the first silver coin struck in England, and the only one current among the Anglo-Saxons. The penny until the reign of Edward I was struck with a cross, so deeply indented that it might be easily parted into two for halfpence, and into four for farthings, and hence these names. Copper penny and two-penny pieces were coined by Boulton and Watt, at Soho, Birmingham, in 1797, and were accounted the finest of our copper currency, see Coins, &c —PENNY-POST; see Post-offices. — THE PENNY CYCLOPÆDIA in 1833 (supplements in 1845 and 1858) The PENNY RECEIPT stamp was appointed in 1853 (postage stamps authorised to be used for receipts after 1 June, 1881), and in 1858 a penny stamp was directed to be placed on bankers' cheques.—PENNY BANKS (in 1861 about 200) were established about 1850 They have become numerous, and in 1878 were authorised to invest their funds —PENNY READINGS, for the working classes, became general in 1859 Carpenter's "Penny Readings," published in 1865-7 "Penny Poets," &c , Mr W T Stead began the series with Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome," &c., price one penny, May, 1895

PENTAMETER VERSE (five feet), first used about the 7th century B C, see Elegy

PENTATEUCH The name (Greek pentateukos, whence Pentateuch) was applied by Origin, one of the greatest of the Greek fathers (185-254), to the first five books of the Old Testament, of which Moses was the traditional author, Joshua is by modern critics included among these earlier writings, the six books being styled the Hexateuch The authorship of the Pentateuch by Moses, and of the book bearing the name of Joshua, was, until the 19th century, generally accepted by the Christian Church Modern criticism, although differing on the questions of age and structure, is unanimous in the opinion that the Pentateuch is composed from documents of various dates and authorship Discrepancies, as in the double narrative of the Creation (Gen i-ii 4, and Gen ii 5 et seq), the statement (Gen xxxvi 31) that "these are the kings that reigned over the land of Edom before there reigned any king over the children of Israel," passages reflecting the prophetic mode of thought of the prophetic writings, and those indicating the interests and ideas of the priesthood, led to the inference that the Pentateuch was compiled from various sources This found expression in the views of some mediæval Jewish scholars, as Ibn Ezra, of Roman Catholics, as Andreas du Maes (16th cent), and by philosophers, as Spinoza (17th cent) Jean Astruc, a Belgian physician (1753), may be regarded as the pioneer of modern criticism on the subject He distinguished two great sources—A the Elohist, and B the Jehovist, and 10 smaller writings, the compilation of these he attributed, however, to Moses (His hypothesis was introduced into Germany by Eichhorn) Investigations of the documents and hypotheses founded on them were carried on by Eichhorn, Ilgen, Geddes, De Wette, Bleek, Delitzsch, Ewald, Schrader, Hupfeld, Kuenen, Wellhausen, and other scholars, giving rise to the "Older Document Hypothesis," the "Fragment Hypothesis," the "Supplement Hypothesis," the "Crystallization Hypothesis," and the "Modern Document Hypothesis," which regards the Pentateuch as composed of 4 principal elements P the Priestly Code, the older Elohist (the Grundschrift of Wellhausen), E the second Elohist, J the Jahwist, and D the Deuteronomist, designed by some critics A, B, C, D respectively Scholars differ as to the relative age of the Jahwist and Elohist documents The Deuteronomist, who composed the law-book found in the reign of Josiah, king of Judah, 621 B C, is third in point of time, the Priestly Code is regarded as the latest of these writings, and is post-exilic See Kuenen's "Historico-critical Inquiry into the Origin and Composition of the Hexateuch," Driver's "Literature of the Old Testament," G A Smith's "Modern Criticism and the Preaching of the Old Testament," Cheyne's "Founders of Old Testament Criticism," Wellhausen's "De Komposition des Hexateuchs"

PHILOSOPHY (love of wisdom), the knowledge of the reason of things (distinguished from history, the knowledge of facts, and from mathematics, the knowledge of the quantity of things)—the hypothesis or system upon which natural effects are explained Locke Pythagoras first adopted the name of philosopher (such men having been previously called sages) about 528 B C Philosophers were expelled from Rome, and their schools suppressed, by Domitian, A D 83 Philosophy is now divided into —1 Moral or Ethical, 2 Intellectual, 3 Natural or Physical

MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL PHILOSOPHY

Ancient Schools.—The Vedas (which see) contain what is now considered to be the most ancient moral philosophy, the source of later systems, about the sixth or seventh century, B C (professor Max Müller, March, 1894) Pythagorean, about 500 B C, Platonic (the academy), by Plato, 374, Peripatetic (the Lyceum), by Aristotle, 334 Sceptic, by Pyrrho, 334, Cynic by Diogenes, 330, Epicurean by Epicurus, 306, Stoic, by Zeno, 290 Middle Academy, by Arcesilaus, 278, New Academy, by Carneades, 160, New Platonists (who attempted to combine Platonism with Christianity) Ammonius Saccas, died A D 243, Plotinus, died about 270, Porphyry, died about 305, Jamblichus, died about 333, Julian the emperor, died 363.

Modern Systems.—Nominal, Jean Roscellin, about 1092, Abelard, &c, Rational, Bacon, about 1624, Cartesian, Descartes, about 1560 Reflective or Perceptive, Locke, 1690, Idealistic, Berkeley, 1710, Elective, Leibnitz, 1710 Common Sense, Reid, 1750-70, Transcendental, Kant, Hamilton, &c., 1770-1860, Scientific Fichte, 1800-14, Absolute Identity, Schelling, 1800-20 Absolute Idealism, Hegel, 1810-30 Utilitarian, Bentham, Mill, &c. 1790-1873, Positive, Comte, 1830 Realism and Evolutionary Materialism prevalent, Darwin, Herbert Spencer s, &c 1873 "System of Synthetic Philosophy," 10 vols, 1860-96 (died 8 Dec 1903) Mr Howard Collin's "Epitome," 4th edition, published, autumn, 1897 [Prof Wm Wallace, of Oxford, died 19 Feb 1897] See Ethics

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY

Greek and Latin —Thales, about 600 B C Pythagoras, 590, Aristotle and Plato, 350 Euclid, 300 Archimedes, 287 Hipparchus, 150 Lucretius, about 100 Julius Cæsar, 50 Ptolemy, A D 150.
Middle Ages —Arabians Ben Musa, 800 Alhazen, &c, 1100. Gerbert, Decimals, 959 Roger Bacon, Opus Majus, 1266.

PHIPPS' EXPEDITION The hon captain Phipps (afterwards lord Mulgrave) sailed from England in command of the Sea-Horse and Carcase ships, to make discoveries, as near as possible to the North Pole In August 1773, he was for nine days environed with barriers of ice, in the Frozen Ocean, north of Spitzbergen, 80° 48' N lat A brisk wind in two or three days accomplished their deliverance They returned to England without having made any discoveries, 20 Sept 1773 Nelson was coxswain to the second in command

PHLOGISTON, a term employed by Stahl to designate the hypothetical matter or principle of fire, "the inflammable principle" of bishop Watson, near the close of the 17th century The chemical theory based upon it was refuted by Lavoisier, 1790, who substituted for it the theory of oxygenation

PHOCIS, a state in Northern Greece. The Phocians seized Delphi 357 B C, and commenced the second Sacred War They were opposed by Thebes and other states, and were utterly subdued by Philip II of Macedon in 346 By the excavations of the British school of archæology at Abæ the remains of two ancient temples of Apollo, with relics of bronzes, inscriptions, &c, and at Hyampolis, a shrine of Artemis (Diana), &c, were discovered, reported, 30 Aug 1894

PHŒNICIA, on the sea coast of Syria The natives were the most eminent navigators and traders of antiquity, their cities or allied states being Tyre, Sidon, Berytus, Tripoli, Byblos, and Ptolemais, or Acre From the 19th to the 13th centuries before Christ, they established colonies on the shores or isles of the Mediterranean—Carthage, Hippo, Utica, Gades, and Panormus, and they are said to have visited the British Isles Phœnicia was conquered by Cyrus, 537 B C , by Alexander, 332, by the Romans, 47, and after partaking of the fortunes of Palestine, was added to the Ottoman empire, A D 1516 See Sidon and Tyre

PHŒNIX CLUBS, of a treasonable character, were formed in Ireland in 1858 They met at night to drill Several persons were arrested and tried in March, 1859, at Tralee , but the jury could not agree on their verdict. Daniel Sullivan was condemned to penal servitude for ten years, April, 1859 Eventually some of the prisoners pleaded guilty, and were discharged on being bound over to keep the peace

PHŒNIX PARK. A beautiful park, 1,327 acres, in Dublin , for the murders here see Ireland, 1882-3, 1896

PHONÆIDOSCOPE, an instrument for observing the colour-figures of liquid films under the action of sonorous vibrations, being a visible demonstration of the vibratory and molecular motion of a telephone plate , invented by Mr Sedley Taylor, 1877 , manufactured by S C Tisley & Co , London, 1878

PHONO-CINEMA, a combination of the phonograph and cinematograph, which preserves the face, voice and gestures of living beings, displayed at the Paris exhibition, June et seq 1900

PHONOGRAPH, a machine proposed to be attached to pianofortes and other keyed instruments, by which any music that is played may be written down on blank paper, since it rules and prints the notes simultaneously It was patented by Mr Fenby, 13 June, 1863 The motive-power is electro-magnetism Machines with a similar object were projected by Mr Creedd in 1847 , Mr J F Unger in 1774 , and by Mr Carreyre in 1827 See Telephonograph

A new phonograph by Thomas Alva Edison, electrician of New Jersey, was announced Dec 1877
Linear indentations are made by means of a pin in a sheet of tinfoil by speaking or singing , and from these casts may be taken When these are placed upon the diaphragm of a telephone connected with revolving apparatus, the sounds may be reproduced with a weirdlike effect. Improved by Mr Shelford Bidwell, 1879 See Telephone
A greatly improved instrument by Mr Edison adapted for postal communication, announced, 21 Nov 1887 , successful experiments reported, 12 May, 1888
Professor Graham Bell's graphophone, a modification of Edison's phonograph, was announced Nov 1887
Mr Emile Berliner (of Washington) announced his gramophone, a modification of Leon Scott's phonautograph Nov ,,
The phonograph and graphophone were both exhibited to the British Association at Bath Sept. 1888
Exhibitions of Mr Edison's greatly improved phonograph, considered perfect in the record, reproduction and preservation of sounds of all kinds (wax is used in place of tinfoil) Nov 1888 et seq
Mr Edison receives phonograms from the duke of Cambridge, Mr Gladstone, and others Jan 1889
Mr Edison's talking dolls, which utter about 30 words, by means of a concealed phonograph and clockwork, were exhibited at the Savoy Hotel, Westminster, 25 July , Edison's phonographic toy company announced July, 1890
Mr Edison adapts his phonograph to a water motor as well as electricity reported Sept. 1890
The pope, by Mr Moriarty, transmits a phonogram, containing a message, to the president of the United States N A. 20 March, 1893
Many improvements made, and others in progress , almost perfect results obtained, and immense number of instruments in use 1905

PHONOGRAPHY (from the Greek phonē, sound), suggested by Franklin, 1768 The Phonetic society, whose object was to render our mode of writing and printing more consonant to sound, was established, 1 March, 1843, sir W. C Trevelyan, president, and Mr Isaac Pitman, secretary, the latter being the inventor of the system which was made known in 1837, knighted, May, 1894, died, aged 84, 22 Jan 1897 Among other works published by the promoters of the system, was the "Phonetic News," in 1849 Phonography has been adopted for European and oriental languages, 1887 et seq "Phonographic Quarterly Review," published, Nov 1894, see Visible Speech

"Pickwick Papers' in shorthand, first of a series, published by Mr Pitman 1 May, 1883
Script Phonography, a simplified system of shorthand, combining the manual movement of long hand with the connection of vowels and consonants in their natural order, by Thos Stratford Malone 2 Nov 1885
Messrs Pitman first publish in phonography the New Testament from engraved plates 8 Oct. 1886
First Phonographic journal, published 1 Jan. 1887
Sol fa system in shorthand first published 5 Feb ,,
The book of Common Prayer, and a National "Phonographic Library begun in April, ,,

PHONOPORE, an arrangement of telegraph wires to facilitate transmission of sound, by checking the influence of adjoining wires, the invention of Mr C Langdon Davies, announced, May, 1886 See Telephones The system was stated to have worked successfully on the South Eastern railway between London and Folkestone, Feb 1887, the Midland railway, and others, 1889-92

PHONOSCOPE, an apparatus for testing the quality of musical strings, invented by Dr Rudolph Koenig, and exhibited at the International Exhibition in 1862 He died, aged 68, 2 Oct 1901.

Mr Edmunds' phonoscope, exhibited to the British Association, Aug 1878, is an instrument for producing figures and light from the vibrations of sound.
The name phonoscope is given to apparatus used by M M G Dumeny in photographing the lips of a speaker and so combining the images thus produced that they may be understood by a deaf mute, June, 1892 See Photography, 1891

PHOSPHOR-BRONZE, an alloy of copper, tin, and phosphorus, invented by Messrs Montefiore-Levi and Kunzel, of Belgium, in 1867 It is very hard, ductile, and elastic, with a colour resembling gold

PHOSPHORESCENCE The property possessed by some bodies of retaining luminosity after exposure to light observed by the ancients, especially noticed by Vincenzo Cascariolo (1602), Boyle, Canton, Wilson, and others, and specially studied by Edmond Becquerel, and Balmain See Luminous Paint, Air (footnote)

PHOSPHORUS was discovered in 1667, by Brandt, of Hamburg, who procured it from urine. The discovery was prosecuted by John Kunkel, a Saxon chemist, about 1670, and by the hon. R. Boyle about the same time Nouv Dict Phosphorus said is first mentioned in 1743, but is said to have been known earlier Gahn pointed out its existence in bones in 1769, and Scheele devised a process for extracting it Canton's phosphorus is so called from its discoverer, 1768 Phosphoretted hydrogen was discovered by Gengembre in 1812 The consumption of phosphorus has immensely increased since the manufacture of lucifer matches In 1845, Schrotter, of Vienna, discovered allotropic or amorphous phosphorus, which ignites more slowly and is less unwholesome in working than ordinary phosphorus

Mr S A. Rosenthal and dr S J von Komocki succeed in preparing matches without yellow phosphorus, reported Sept 1898

PHOTOGRAPHY The action of light on chloride of silver was known as early as the 16th century The phenomenon was studied by Scheele (1777), Senebier (1790), Ritter and Wollaston (1801) From the results of these investigations, experiments were made by Thos Wedgwood and Humphry Davy, in the Royal Institution, London, which were published in its Journal, 1802 Wedgwood may be regarded as the first photographer His paper was entitled "an account of a method of copying paintings upon glass, and of making profiles by the agency of light upon nitrate of silver"

Further discoveries were made by Niépce in 1814, and sir J Herschel in 1819.

Louis J M Daguerre commenced his experiments in 1824 and in 1826 joined Joseph Nicéphore Niépce, and worked with him till the death of the latter in 1833. The production of Daguerreotype plates was announced in Jan 1839 and the French chamber of deputies granted a pension to Daguerre and to Niépce s son Isidore

In 1839 Mr Henry Fox Talbot first published his mode of multiplying photographic impressions by producing a negative photograph (i e, with the light and shades reversed) from which any number of positive copies may be obtained His patent for producing the Talbotype or Calotype (on paper) is dated Feb 1841

In 1851, collodion (which see) was applied to photography by Mr F Archer

Herr Franz Veress of Klausenburg, Transylvania, photographs colours on glass and paper, specimens are exhibited at the Photographic Institute at Vienna, March, 1890

The Photographic Society of London was established in 1852 (royal, 1894) It publishes a journal. On 22 Dec 1852 774 specimens of photography were exhibited at the rooms of the Society of Arts, Adelphi 42nd annual exhibition, very successful, 25 Sept et seq 1897; congress held, New gallery, Regent-street, 19 May, 1903

Presidential address of gen Waterhouse to the Royal Photographic society reviewed the work accomplished by photography during the past half century Oct ,

PHOTOHELIOGRAPH, an apparatus for registering the position of the sun's spots by means of clockwork and photography erected at the suggestion of sir John Herschel at Kew observatory about 1857 It was used by Mr Warren de la Rue to photograph the disc of the sun during the eclipse of 18 July, 1860

PHOTOGALVANOGRAPHY, the art of producing engravings by the action of light and electricity The earliest specimens were produced by Nicéphore Niépce, and presented by him in 1827 to the great botanist, Robert Brown Great advances have since been made in this art by MM Niepce de St Victor (who published a treatise on it in 1856), Vitry, W R Grove, H Fox Talbot, &c In 1852 Paul Pretsch patented a process which he called 'Photogalvanography

PHOTOGLYPHIC ENGRAVING (a process by which the light actually etches a picture on a plate that may be and has been printed from) was patented by Mr Fox Talbot in 1858, and is described and exemplified in the Photographic News, 9 and 16 Sept. 1859, a specimen being given in the latter number

PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY (a process by which photographs are transferred to zinc plates which may be printed from) was devised by sir Henry James, chief of the Ordnance Survey, and made known in 1860. By it maps, charts, and engravings may be printed at a small cost

PHOTO SCULPTURE M Villeme's employment of photographs in the formation of sculpture was announced in 1863

Messrs Goupil's process of Photogravure, rivalling mezzo tint, reported highly successful fine pictures reproduced, Feb 1884

See Kinematograph and Kinetoscope

PHOTOMETER (light measurer), one was constructed by Dr W Ritchie in 1825 Many improvements have been made recently in photometry See under Stars

Mr A Vernon Harcourt's new holophotometer highly approved June, 1888

Stellar Photometry, the measurement of the light of the stars, has been much studied by astronomers, especially by sir John Herschel, prof Argelander, prof C Pritchard and others Mr W J Dibdin, in his "Guide to the measurement of light published in 1889, describes his application of terrestrial photometry to stellar light

PHOTOPHONE In this apparatus, constructed by professor Graham Bell and Mr Sumner Tainter of Washington, in 1880, a thin plane mirror is thrown into vibration by the voice, a beam of light is reflected from this mirror and received at a distance by a cell of the metal selenium, when, by arrangement, this is connected with a telephone, the sounds are reproduced

PHOTOSPHERE, see Sun, note

PHOTOTACHOMETER, an instrument for measuring the velocity of light, invented by professor Simon Newcomb of Washington, 1879-80

PHOTOTHERAPY, the treatment of disease by light, successfully applied by prof Finsen, of Copenhagen, in treatment of lupus, 1893 The Finsen light was first introduced into this country in May, 1900 Queen Alexandra presented the first lamp to the London hospital, and the first patients were treated on 29 May, 1900 The Finsen light treatment is used solely for lupus See Tuberculosis, 1901

PHRENOLOGY, see Craniology

PHRYGIA (now Karamania), a province in Asia Minor, became part of the Persian empire in 537 B C, and partook of its changes After their defeat of Antiochus the Great, king of Syria, 190 B C, the Romans added Phrygia to the kingdom of Pergamus, which was bequeathed to them by Attalus III, the last king, 133 B C

PHYLLOXERA, see Vine

PHYSIC appears to have been first practised by the Egyptian priests Pythagoras endeavoured to explain the philosophy of disease and the action of medicine, about 529 B C Hippocrates, the father of medicine, flourished about 422 B C, and Galen, born A D 131, was the oracle of medical science About 980 Avicenna, an Arab, wrote a system of medicine Dr R Quain's Dictionary of Medicine, published 1882 3rd edition issued 1902 "The System of Medicine," consisting of contributions by eminent physicians and surgeons, edited by sir J Russell Reynolds, in 5 vols, published 1866-75 A "System of medicine," by many writers, edited by dr Clifford Allbutt, vol I, June 1896, vol III, 1898 See Medical

The dogmatic age of medicine lasted till the Reformation, when it was attacked by Paracelsus (1493 1541), and Vesalius (1514-64) Since 1800 medical practice has been completely transformed by physiological and chemical research

The discovery of the circulation of the blood, by Dr. Harvey, furnished an entirely new system of physiological and pathological speculation, 1628 See Medical and Societies

PHYSICIAN TO THE KING —John, the king's chaplain and physician (afterwards bishop of Bath and Wells), mentioned 1090.

The earliest mandate or warrant for the attendance of a physician at court is dated 1454, and 33 Henry VI, a reign fertile in the patronage which was afforded to practitioners in medicine but no appointment existed which can justly be called physician to the royal person By this warrant the king, with the consent of his privy council, deputed to three physicians and two surgeons the regulation of his diet, and the administration of such medicines and remedies as might be sufficient for his cure, without any allusion to the previous existence or permanency of the office which they were authorised for a time to fill, or to a remuneration for their services —Life of Linacre.

Miss Garrett (afterwards Mrs Anderson) licensed at Apothecaries' hall, London, to practise medicine, 28 Sept 1865

At a meeting of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, 3 May, 1869 it was resolved that the "Royal Society of Medicine (including the various sections) be founded the resolution was affirmed, 22 Feb 1870, but in 1871 the project dropped

School of Medicine for Women in London (council Professors Burdon Sanderson and Huxley, Mrs Garrett Anderson, M D, Mrs Blackwell, M D, and others), opened, Oct. 1874

Registration of medical women, permitted by Medical act, 39 & 40 Vict c. 41, 11 Aug 1876.

Queen Victoria laid the foundation of the Medical Examination hall on the Victoria embankment, 24 March, 1886

The curriculum for medical students changed from 4 to 5 years, begins Oct 1893

PHYSICS, see under Philosophy, Natural

PHYSIOGNOMY, a science which affirms that the dispositions of mankind may be discovered from the features of the face The origin of the term is referred to Aristotle, and Cicero was attached to the science It became a fashionable study from the beginning of the 16th century, and in the 18th century, the essays of Le Cat and Pernethy led to the modern system

J K Lavater, who endeavoured to raise physiognomy to the rank of a science, published his celebrated work "Physiognomische Fragmente, 1775–78, of which an English translation by Holcroft was published in 1793 The subject was considered by C R. Darwin in his work "Expression of the emotions in Man and Animals," 1872, and by Mantegazza in his "Physiognomy and Expression," 1890

PHYSIOLOGY is that part of physics which treats of the inner constitution of animals and plants, and the several functions and operations of all their organs and tissues The works of Müller, Milne-Edwards, Huxley, Carpenter, Virchow, Brown-Séquard, Helmholtz, Ludwig, Du Bois-Reymond, Salomon Stricker Rutherford and sir John Bucknill, are much celebrated, and Todd's "Cyclopædia of Physiology" (1836–59) is a library in itself Physiological Society, in London, founded by Dr Burdon-Sanderson (bart. 1899) and others, early in 1876, see Anatomy, Biology, Morphology Royal Institution International congresses of physiology have been held since 1889

PIANETTE, a small upright piano introduced by Bord of Paris in 1857

PIANOFORTE.* The invention is attributed to Cristofalli (or Cristofori), an Italian, J. C. Schröter, a German, and Marius, a Frenchman, early in the 18th century. The strings are struck by small hammers, and not by quills, as in harpsichords Schroter is said to have presented a model of his invention to the court of Saxony, in 1717, and G Silberman manufactured pianofortes with considerable success in 1772 Pianofortes were made in London by M. Zumpie, a German, 1766, and have been since greatly improved by Clementi, Broadwood, Collard, Kirkman, Erard, Pleyel, and others

Upright pianos, first made in this country, were suggested by Isaac Hawkins in 1800, and Thomas Loud, in 1802 Wm Southwell patented "cabinet pianos" in 1807, superseded, from about 1840, by the cottage, piccolo, and other pianos

A keyed instrument at Modena was named "piano e forte," 1598

A "stone pianoforte," formed of a series of flints and other stones of various sizes, collected in France and arranged by M. Baudre, was played on by him at the Royal Institution, on 16 March, 1866

* The Campanile was erected to contain bells, and stands in a square close to the cathedral. It is built entirely of white marble, and is a cylinder of eight stories, each adorned with a round of columns, rising one above another It inclines so far on one side from the perpendicular, that in dropping a plummet from the top, which is 188 feet in height, it falls sixteen feet from the base. Some thought this was done purposely by the architect, others attributed it to an accidental subsidence of the foundation. From this tower Galileo made his observation on gravitation (about 1635).

60,000 persons perished of the plague at Marseilles and neighbourhood, brought in ship from the Levant, 1720

One of the most awful plagues that ever raged, prevailed in Syria, 1760. Abbé Mariti.

In Persia, a fatal pestilence, which carried off 80,000 of the inhabitants of Bassora, 1773.

In Egypt, about 800,000 persons died of plague, 1792.

In Barbary, 3000 died daily and at last 247,000 perished, 1799, in the east, 1800, 1840, 1873, many deaths in Bagdad, &c., April-May, 1876.

In Spain and at Gibraltar immense numbers were carried off by a pestilent disease in 1804 and 1805.

Again at Gibraltar, an epidemic fever much resembling the plague, caused great mortality, 1828.

The Asiatic cholera (see Cholera) made its first appearance in England, at Sunderland, 26 Oct. 1831 in Scotland, at Haddington, 23 Dec. same year, and in Ireland, at Belfast, 14 March, 1832

The cholera again visited England, &c., 1848 and 1849 (see Cholera).

The cholera raged at Smyrna and Constantinople, and appeared in Paris, Marseilles, Naples, July Dec. 1865

A great cattle plague (which see) in England, resembling typhus, near London, begins June, 1865.

A new, and hitherto an incurable disease, named black death, on account of purple blotches coming out on the skin, appeared in Dublin many persons of all ranks died a few hours after the seizure. March et seq. 1866.

Plague in India, Bombay and elsewhere, 600,000 deaths, Jan –Aug. 1903.

Plague in the Punjab 130,000 deaths, March–April, 1903

Plague in China many deaths at Niuchwang, reported Sept 1903

Rats proved to be a means of spreading plague, 185,982 killed in Thames docks, &c., during 1902, 249,718 killed up to 1 Nov. 1903

Plague in Mauritius many deaths, 3 Sept.–Nov 1903; 170 deaths, 24 Nov –17 Dec. 1903

Plague in India chiefly Bombay, Bengal, the N W. Provinces and the Punjab, weekly average early months of 1904, about 18,000, rising to 40,527 for the week ending 19 March, highest record, 47,599, for week ending 9 April, 46,812 week ending 16 April, maintaining this level, more or less, until 14 May (35,413), number drops from 29,484, 28 May, to 11,910, 9 July, rising to 9,914, 3 Sept., 15,904, 29 Oct., declines to 15,197, 12 Nov 1904

Plague in India in Bombay, N W Presidency, and the Punjab, in a less degree in Burma and other parts of India. Weekly mortality in Jan. about 20,000, reaching, by steady increase, to a total of 57,702, 1 April drops to 4,000–5,000, 30 June, and to 1,080 weekly for all India, 1 Aug, rises to 3,000, mid Oct. 1905

Cases of plague in England in Jan. and June; a Lascar seaman, of the s.s. Crewe Hall, being attacked in the first instance, in the latter case, a youth, serving as cook on board ship, attacked in Manchester, at Leith a labourer admitted into hospital for supposed enteric fever, 5 May, mother and child, who recovered (the father died), also admitted, 10 May, 1905

Plague in Chili, and some cases at Aden, Hong-kong, Queensland, and S Africa, during 1905

PLAIN-SONG, see Chanting.

PLAN OF CAMPAIGN (see Ireland), Oct. 1886.

By this plan the tenant of a farm was to pay his rent to the National League instead of to the landlord, and was to be supported if evicted. It was condemned by the pope, 20 April, 1888, given up by many tenants throughout the country, and disavowed by Mr Parnell and others, 1890-1. The plan given up by many on the Woodford estate, Galway, Oct. 1891

Mr. Dillon stated before the Evicted Tenants commission that the total amount received from all sources for evicted tenants was 234,431*l.* 4 Jan. 1893.

PLANE. A true plane, most successfully obtained by sir Joseph Whitworth. Fine specimens exhibited at the Royal Institution in 1873.

PLANETARIUM, see Orrery.

PLANETS. Jupiter was known as a planet to the Chinese and the Chaldeans, and inserted in a chart of the heavens, made about 600 B.C., and in which 1460 stars are accurately described; this chart is said to be in the national library at Paris. See Jupiter, Mars, Saturn. We now know eight primary planets, termed major; Mercury, Venus, the Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune; and secondary or minor, situated between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. The numerical order differs in the lists of English, German, and French astronomers. In the French and German lists, Aglaia to Pandora are numbered 47 to 55; Meletè is 56.

Uranus, formerly called Georgium Sidus and Herschel; discovered by W. Herschel (see Georgium Sidus) . . . . . 13 March, 1781

Neptune, discovered by Galle (in consequence of the calculations of Le Verrier) (see Neptune), 23 Sept. 1846. It had been theoretically discovered by professor J. Couch Adams of Cambridge . . 1845

Vulcan (between Mercury and the Sun), said to be discovered by M Lescarbault, a physician (not seen since), 26 March, 1859, and its discovery is now generally doubted, said to have been seen by Watson during the solar eclipse (doubted by Peters) . . . . . 29, 30 July, 1878

Between five and six hundred minor planets have been discovered since 1 Jan. 1801 In recent years this work has been greatly aided by photography

During 1902 43 small planets were discovered. The minor planets are very small, being in general only a few miles in diameter. They are divided into three groups (Mars group, Chief group, and Jupiter group) according to their mean velocities

The rapid discovery of planetoids by photography, especially by Wolf and Charlois, in recent years, has caused much confusion in records, 1892–1903.

PLANING-MACHINE. One for wood was constructed by Bramah, about 1802; and one for iron by Joseph Clement in 1825.

PLANTAGENET,* HOUSE OF, to which belonged fourteen English kings, from Henry II., 1154, to Richard III., 1485, see England, Kings.

PLANTATIONS, see Trade.

PLASSEY, in Bengal, India, the site of a battle fought between the British under Clive and the Hindoos under Surajah Dowlah, 23 June, 1757; 68,000 men were vanquished by 1000 British and about 2000 sepoys. The victory laid the foundation of our empire in India.

PLASTER OF PARIS. Gypsum, sulphate of lime, used for moulds, statuary, &c., first found at Montmartre, near Paris, whence its name. The method of taking likenesses by its use was first discovered by Andrea del Verrochio, about 1466.

* Fulke Martel, earl of Anjou, having contrived the death of his nephew, the earl of Brittany, in order to succeed to the earldom, his confessor sent him, in atonement for the murder, to Jerusalem, attended by only two servants, one of whom was to lead him by a halter to the Holy Sepulchre, the other to strip and whip him there, like a common malefactor. Broom, in French genet, in Latin genista, being the only tough, pliant shrub in Palestine, the noble criminal was smartly scourged with it, and from this instrument of his chastisement he was called Planta-genista, or Plantagenet; other accounts are given. Skinner and Mistray.

PLATA, LA, see Argentine Republic.

PLATÆA (Bœotia, N. Greece), site of the battle between Mardonius, commander of the army of Xerxes of Persia, and Pausanias, commander of the Lacedæmonians and Athenians, 22 Sept. 479 B.C.; the same day as the battle of Mycale. Of 300,000 Persians scarce 3000 escaped with their lives. The Grecian army, about 110,000, lost but few men. The Greeks obtained immense plunder, and were henceforth delivered from the fear of Persian invasions. Platæa, as an ally of Athens, was destroyed by the Thebans, 372; and rebuilt by Philip II. after his victory at Chæronea, 338.

PLATE. In England, plate, with the exception of spoons, was prohibited in public-houses by statute 8 Will. III. (1696). The celebrated Plate act passed in May, 1756. This act was repealed in 1780. The act laying a stamp-duty upon plate passed in 1784; see Goldsmiths' Company. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 96 (1854), gold wares were allowed to be manufactured at a lower standard; but a later act excepted marriage rings.—The art of covering baser metals with a thin plate of silver, either for use or for ornament (PLATING), said to have been invented by a Birmingham spur-maker, who began with making the branches of a pair of spurs hollow, and filling the hollow with a slender rod of steel. He continued to make the hollow larger and the iron thicker, till at last he merely coated the iron spur with silver; see Electrotype.

Mr Wilfred Joseph Cripps' "Old English Plate," a valuable work, containing the researches of Mr O Morgan, published, 1878. His "Old French Plate," 1880.

Duty on silver plate to be reduced gradually till abolished, from 1 June, 1881; abolished 17 April, 1890.

"The Corporation Plate of England and Wales" (illustrated), by Mr. Jewitt and W. H. St. John Hope, published, 1895.

Elizabethan salt-cellar realised 3000*l.*, at Christie's, 11 Dec. 1902.

PLATE-WAYS, on ordinary roads for waggons carrying goods, proposed at Liverpool about 1880, to supersede railways for cheapness; not adopted.

PLATFORM, see Public Meetings.

PLATINUM, the heaviest of all the metals, except iridium. The name originated with the Spaniards on account of its silvery colour; Plata signifying silver. It was found in the auriferous sand of the river Pinto, in South America, and was unknown in Europe until 1741, when don Antonio Ulloa announced its existence in the narrative of his voyage to Peru. Greig. In its ore have been found the metals palladium, rhodium, osmium, iridium, and ruthenium (which see). Platinum was rendered malleable and ductile by Dr. Wm. Hyde Wollaston, whose processes are described in the Royal Society's Bakerian lecture for 1829. He died in 1828, having, it is said, gained 30,000*l.* by his inventions. In 1859, M. H. Ste.-Claire Deville made known a new method of obtaining platinum from its ore, in great abundance and purity; and at the international exhibition of 1862 was shown a mass worth 3840*l.*, weighing 266½ lb., of a metal hitherto considered infusible, obtained by his process, employing the oxy-hydrogen flame. See Philosophical Lamp.

Dodé's process for coating iron with platinum to prevent rust, shown at Johnson & Matthey's, 11 Jan. 1879.

Platinotypes, photographic reproductions of pictures, by a peculiar process by Mr. F. Hollyer, specimens exhibited in the Dudley Gallery, Oct. 1892.

PLATONIC PHILOSOPHY, the most popular of all systems (see Philosophy). Plato's dialogues have been termed "Philosophy backed by example." He was a disciple of Socrates, 409 B.C., and died 347. The leading feature of his mind was comprehensiveness. The Cambridge Platonists included Whichcote, Cudworth, John Smith, Henry More.

Professor Jowett's popular translation of "Plato's Dialogues" published in 1871; 3rd edition, 1893.

PLATONIC YEAR, the period of time which the equinoxes take to finish their revolution, at the end of which the stars and constellations have the same place with regard to the equinoxes that they had at first. Tycho Brahe says that this year or period requires 25,816 common years to complete it; Ricciolus computes it at 25,920; and Cassini at 24,800; at the end of which time some imagined that there would be a total and natural renovation of the whole creation.

PLATTSBURG. A British expedition against this place, a town of New York, on Lake Champlain, was designed under general sir George Prevost, but was abandoned after the naval force of England had suffered a defeat in an engagement with the Americans, 11 Sept. 1814, when the British squadron in Lake Champlain was captured; see United States.

PLAY-GROUNDS. In 1858 a society was established by the earl of Shaftesbury and other benevolent persons to provide play-grounds for the recreation of adults and the children of the humble classes. Ground was liberally offered by the government, and by the marquis of Westminster and others; and in 1859 an act of parliament was passed to facilitate grants of lands for this purpose, for which part of Smithfield was to be reserved. The scheme was not successful.

The Metropolitan Public Garden, Boulevard, and Playground association formed by lord Brabazon (aft. earl of Meath) and others in 1882 has done good service in the east of London.

The London Playing-fields association founded 1890; very active in obtaining places.

Hackney marsh (337 acres), purchased by the London county council and others as a playground for east London, opened by sir John Hutton, 21 July, 1894.

PLAYS, see Drama and Theatres.

PLEADINGS. In the early courts of judicature in England, pleadings were made in the Saxon language; and in Norman-French from the period of the conquest in 1066 until 1362. Pleadings were ordered to be in English by 36 Edward III. 1362, and Cromwell extended the rule to all legal proceedings 1650. In English law the proceedings are the mutual statements of the plaintiff's cause of action and the defendant's ground of defence.

PLEBEIANS, Plebes, or Plebs, the commons of Rome, as distinguished from the Patricians; see Rome, 494-366 B.C.

PLEBISCITUM, a term given to a law passed by the comitia tributa, an assembly of the Roman people in their tribes, first established in 491 B.C. The term has been revived in France and Italy, and applied to Universal Suffrage (which see).

PLETHYSMOGRAPH, an apparatus for detecting the state of the mind by observing the relations of the circulation of the blood from the heart to the brain, invented by M. Mosso, of Turin, 1882.

PLEVNA, Bulgaria, 27 miles N.N.W. of Nicopolis; near the river Vid; the site of very fierce conflicts during the Russo-Turkish war, 1877.

Occupied by the Russians, 6 July, but retaken by Osman Pacha, 18 July, and held by him after severe combats, with Schildner-Schuldner, 19, 20 July; with Krudener . . . 29-31 July, 1877

The Russians lost about 2000 killed, 4000 wounded. The Russian attack was considered rash, like that at Balaclava, and a disastrous check.

Osman Pacha, reduced by want of supplies, desperately endeavours to break out at night, 9 Dec.; surrounded and defeated with great slaughter; surrenders unconditionally (30,000 prisoners, 128 officers, 100 guns) . . . . 10 Dec. ,, PLOTS, see Conspiracies and Rebellions.

PLOUGH. "Thou shalt not plough with an ox and an ass together." Deut. xxii. 10 (1451 B.C.). The Roman plough is minutely described by Virgil, about 31 B.C. Engines to plough grounds, whether inland or upland, were patented by David Ramsay and Thomas Wildgoose, in 1618; and many improvements in ploughs have been patented since. The application of steam power to ploughing was patented by John Upton in 1837, and by others since, more especially by lord Willoughby D'Eresby, the marquis of Tweeddale, and the earl of Caithness; see Steam-Plough. Petrol motor-ploughs are now in use.

PLOUGH MONDAY. in January, the first Monday after the Epiphany. It received the appellation from its having been fixed upon by our forefathers as the day upon which they returned to the duties of agriculture after enjoying the festivities of Christmas. Ashe. On Plough Monday, too, the ploughmen of the north country used to draw a plough from door to door and beg plough money to drink. Bailey.

On Plough Monday, the lord mayor of London holds annually at Guildhall a grand court of wardmote, at which the election of the common council and other officers on St. Thomas' day, 21 Dec., is confirmed.

PLUM. We have two native plums; our finer kinds came from Italy and Flanders about 1522. The Diospyros Lotus, the date plum, was brought from Barbary, before 1596; the Pishamin plum, Diospyros virginiana, from America, before 1629. Formerly damsons, apricots, and peaches went by this name, as raisins do to this day.

PLUMBAGO, see Graphite.

PLUMBERS. The company is dated 1611. A bill for their registration introduced into the commons in 1894; withdrawn, 15 Aug. 1894; passed, 10 March, 1902.

PLURALITIES. Clergymen have been restrained from holding more than one benefice by several statutes; the first being 21 Henry VIII. 1529. In 1838 an act was passed prohibiting the holding of more than two benefices except they were at a distance less than ten miles; and the law on this subject was still further amended in 1850, 1855, and 1885, provisions being made for the amalgamation of neighbouring benefices. See Electors.

PLURAL NUMBER, see We.

PLUS (+) AND MINUS (—). Professor De Morgan attributes these signs to either Christopher Rudolf, who published a book on algebra about 1522, or Michael Stifelius, about 1544.

PLYMOUTH, a fortified seaport in Devonshire, originally Sutton, was incorporated as Plymouth in 1439. It was in 1588 the rendezvous of the English fleet of 120 sail under Howard, Drake, &c., which pursued the Spanish armada. The fine hotel and assembly-rooms were burnt 6 Jan. 1863; loss about 50,000*l.* The National Association for Social Science met here, Sept. 1872. See Armada, 1888, 1890, Breakwater, and Population.

PLYMOUTH BRETHREN, a body of Christians calling themselves "the Brethren," first appeared at Plymouth about 1830. In 1851 they had 132 places of worship in England and Wales. They object to national churches as too latitudinarian, and to other dissenters as too sectarian. They receive into communion all who confess Christ, and own the Holy Ghost as his vicar. Their doctrines agree with those of most evangelical protestant churches, but they recognise no order of ministers. Mr. Darby, regarded as their founder, afterwards separated from them with some adherents.

PNEUMATIC DESPATCH COMPANY, to convey letters and parcels through tubes by means of atmospheric pressure and a vacuum. The company's act was passed 13 Aug. 1859, and tubes were laid down in Threadneedle-street on 12 Sept. 1860; and on 20 Aug. 1861; successful experiments were performed at Battersea. In 1862 tubes were laid down from the Euston railway station to the N.W. post-office in Camden-town, and on 21 Feb. 1863, the conveyance of the mail-bags began. In Oct. 1865, tubes had been laid down between Euston railway and Holborn; and on 7 Nov. several persons travelled in them. Engineer, Mr. Rammell. The company stopped through insufficient support, 1876. A pneumatic tube by Siemens, employed to transmit telegraphic messages, began about Jan. 1871.

PNEUMATIC LOOM, in which compressed air is the motive power, invented by Mr. Harrison, was exhibited in London in Dec. 1864. A company was formed to bring it into general use. Pneumatic tyre company, see Velocipede, 1896.

PNEUMATICS, the science which treats of the mechanical properties of air and gases; see Air and Atmospheric Railways.

PODESTA (from potestas, power), an Italian governor, afterwards a judge; one with supreme authority was appointed at Milan by the emperor Frederick I., when he took the city in 1158.

PODOLL (Bohemia), the site of a severe conflict between the Austrians and a part of the army of prince Frederick Charles of Prussia, 26 June, 1866. The Prussians had the advantage.

PODOSCAPHE, see Canoe.

POET-LAUREATE. Selden could not trace the precise origin of this office.

Warton, in his History of English Poetry, states that in the reign of Henry III. there was a Versificator Regis, to whom an annual stipend was first paid of 100s.
Chaucer, on his return from abroad, assumed the title of poet-laureate; and in the twelfth year of Richard II., 1389, he obtained a grant of an annual allowance of wine.
In the reign of Edward IV., John Kay was laureate; Andrew Bernard was laureate, temp. Henry VII., and John Skelton, temp Henry VIII.
James I. in 1615 granted to his laureate a yearly pension of 100 marks, and in 1630, this stipend was augmented by letters-patent of Charles I. to 100*l.* per annum, with an additional grant of one tierce of Canary Spanish wine to be taken out of the king's store of wine yearly. We believe that on Southey's appointment the tierce of Canary wine was commuted for 27*l.*
Laurence Eusden commenced a series of Birth-Day and New Year's Odes, which continued till the death of Pye, in 1813.
On the death of Warton its abolition was recommended by Gibbon, whose elegant compliment on the occasion still more forcibly applied on Wordsworth's death, in 1850—"This is the best time for not filling up the office, when the prince is a man of virtue, and the poet just departed was a man of genius."

POETRY. The song of Moses on the deliverance of the Israelites, and their passage through the Red Sea, 1491 B.C. (Exodus xv.). Ancient Egyptian poetry still extant. Orpheus of Thrace was deemed the inventor of poetry amongst the Greeks; see Epics, Odes, Satire, Comedy, Tragedy, Sonnets, Ballads, Hymns, and Verse. Mr. Courthope's "History of English Poetry," vol. I., published, May, 1895. Vol. II., June, 1897.

POICTIERS (W. France), near which was fought the battle between Edward the Black Prince and John, king of France, in which the English arms triumphed, 19 Sept. 1356. The standard of France was overthrown, many of her nobility slain, and her king was taken prisoner, and brought to London; see Tours and Vougié.

POISONING. A number of Roman ladies formed a conspiracy and poisoned their husbands. A female slave denounced 170 of them to Fabius Maximus, who ordered them to be publicly executed, 331 B.C. It was said that this was the first public knowledge they had of poisoning at Rome. Poisoning was made petty treason in England, and was punished by boiling to death (of which there are some remarkable instances), 23 Henry VIII. 1531; see Boiling to death. The frequency of cases of poisoning by means of arsenic, in England, caused the British legislature to pass a law renderng the sale of arsenic difficult (14 Vict. c. 13, 6 June, 1851). The sale of poison is now regulated by the Pharmacy act of 1868. Additional restrictions by act passed in 1885. The Poisoned Grain Prohibition Act passed 28 July, 1863.

A deadly poison, freely administered by Italians in the seventeenth century, was called aqua tofana, from the name of the woman Tofania, who made and sold it in small flat vials. She carried on this traffic for half a century, and eluded the police, but, on being taken, confessed that she had been a party in poisoning 600 people. Numerous persons were implicated by her, and many of them were publicly executed. All Italy was thrown into a ferment, and many fled, and some persons of distinction, on conviction, were strangled in prison. It appeared to have been chiefly used by married women who were tired of their husbands. Four or six drops were a fatal dose; but the effect was not sudden, and therefore not suspected. It was as clear as water, but the chemists have not agreed about its real composition. A proclamation of the pope described it as aquafortis distilled into arsenic, and others considered it as a solution of crystallised arsenic.

Between 1666 and 1676, the marchioness de Brinvilliers poisoned her father and two brothers and many others. She was executed, 16 July, 1676.

W Palmer was executed in 1856, and Miss M. Smith tried in 1857, for poisoning: see Trials. Catherine Wilson, a noted poisoner, was executed on 20 Oct. 1862. Edward William Pritchard, M.D., was executed at Glasgow, 28 July, 1865, for the slow murder of his wife and her mother by antimony.

Nov 1898, 17 persons died at Bradford through eating sweetmeats in which arsenic had been mixed by mistake. Mr Hodgson, a chemist, was tried for homicide, and acquitted.

Weltmann, a bookbinder at Posen, poisoned 4 wives and 2 children, about 1859.

Christiana Edmunds, of Brighton, was convicted of murdering a child by poisoned sweetmeats; other persons barely escaped (sentence remitted on the ground of insanity), 16 Jan. 1872.

Mary Ann Cotton, imprisoned Oct. 1872, suspected of poisoning 16 persons, principally children; convicted of poisoning her child, 7 March; executed at Durham, 24 March, 1873.

* On 22 Feb. 1846, an Austrian force under general Collin, which had entered Cracow on the approach of armed bands of peasantry, was attacked and driven out of the town. A provisional government was then proclaimed by the insurgents, and two days afterwards they crossed the Vistula, expecting to be joined by the peasantry of Gallicia, who were solicited by the nobles and clergy to strike a blow in the cause of liberty. The Austrian government, in order to prevent this junction, excited in the peasantry a suspicion of the motives of the nobles, and offered a reward for every noble delivered up, alive or dead: a general massacre of the nobility and clergy in the circle of Tarnow followed: the insurgents from Cracow were defeated at Gdow, whence they retreated to Podgorze, a suburb of Cracow; here they were attacked by general Collin, and driven into Cracow on the 27th of February. The forces of the three powers then began to concentrate on Cracow; the people in the town opened negotiations with the Austrians about a surrender, and while these were going on a Russian corps entered the town without resistance, and soon afterwards the revolution was at an end.

POLE STAR or POLAR STAR, a star of the second magnitude, the last in the tail of the constellation called the Little Bear. As its nearness to the North Pole causes it never to set to those in the northern hemisphere, it is called the seaman's guide. Two stars in the constellation Ursa Major, or Great Bear, are called pointers to the Polar star. The discovery of the Pole star is ascribed by the Chinese to their emperor, Hong-ti, the grandson (they say) of Noah, who reigned and flourished 1970 B.C. Univ. Hist. Spectroscopic observations at Lick observatory prove the star to be a triple system, i.e., a binary, with a revolution of about 4 days, moving round a third more distant star, Sept. 1899.

System of identification by finger marks, to supersede anthropometry, authorized by the secretary of state justified by its practical working. New arrangements made from 1 July, 1902, whereby all persons convicted of certain offences in summary courts, and sentenced to more than one month's imprisonment, in addition to those convicted at all quarter sessions and assizes, are thus registered. During 1902 1,722 identifications made by this method, as against 462 in 1900 when anthropometry alone was used. 5,155 (2,616 metropolitan police, 2,539 provincial police) in 1904.

POLICIES OF ASSURANCE ACT, passed 20 Aug. 1867; see Insurance.

POLITICAL ECONOMY, the science which has for its object the improvement of the condition of mankind, and the promotion of civilisation, wealth, and happiness; was considered by Plato, Xenophon, and Aristotle. Its history in this country may be dated from the publication of sir Wm. Petty's "Treatise on Taxes," 1662, and "Political Arithmetic," 1691; Dr. Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," 1776. The works of J. S. Mill, M'Culloch, Malthus, Ricardo, Carey, Jevons, Sidgwick, Marshall, and Fawcett are celebrated. A professorship of political economy was established at Oxford by Mr. Henry Drummond, M.P., 1825; and at Cambridge, first by Mr. G. Pryme, in 1828; but regularly established by the university in 1863, Henry Fawcett (blind) being the first professor.

Archbishop Whately endowed a professorship at Trinity college, Dublin; Isaac Butt first professor 1832
The Political Economy club, London, founded in 1821, by Thos. Tooke and others, to propagate free trade principles, kept the hundredth anniversary of the publication of Smith's "Wealth of Nations" . . . . . 31 May, 1876
Mr. R. H. Inglis Palgrave's "Dictionary of Political Economy," published 1891 et seq.
Imaginary systems: Plato's "Republic;" he died 347 B.C. Sir T. More's "Utopia" 1548; sir P. Sidney's "Arcadia," 1590; James Harrington's "Oceana," 1656; Wm. Morris's "News from Nowhere," 1891; and E. Bellamy's "Looking Backwards," 1888.

POLITICAL OFFICES PENSIONS ACT passed 9 Aug. 1869.

POLITICAL UNIONS were formed in England in 1831 to carry the Reform Bill; the most important was that of Birmingham.

POLITICIANS. A politician is described as a man well versed in policy, or the well regulating and governing of a state or kingdom; a wise and cunning man. A man of artifice; one of deep contrivance. South. The term was first used in France about 1569. A new faction appeared, known by the name of Politicians, headed by the duc d'Alençon and the Montmorencies, and strengthened by the accession of the Huguenots in 1574. The duke was arrested and the Montmorencies sent to the Bastille.

POLKA, a dance said to have been invented between 1830 and 1834 in Bohemia, and to have obtained its name in Prague in 1835. It became very popular, and was introduced into England about 1844.

POLL ACT passed in Ireland by the Junto of the Pale, putting a price upon the heads of certain Irish; the earl of Desmond being then deputy, 5 Edward IV. 1465. This act long endured, see Ireland, 1465.

POLLENTIA (Piedmont, N. Italy), the site of a great victory of Stilicho, the Imperial general, over Alaric the Goth, 29 March, 403.

POLL-TAX or CAPITATION TAX, existed among the ancient Romans. It was first levied in England in 1380; and occasioned the rebellion of Wat Tyler (see Tyler), 1381. It was again levied in 1513. By the 18th Charles II. every subject was assessed by the head, viz., a duke 100*l.*, a marquis 80*l.*, a baronet 30*l.*, a knight 20*l.*, an esquire 10*l.*, and every single private person 12*d.*, 1667. This grievous impost was abolished by William III. 1689.

POLLUTION OF RIVERS, see Rivers.

POLO, the game of ball termed hockey played on horseback, became popular in England in 1872, having been introduced from India. Games were played by lancers and life-guards at Woolwich, 16, 19 July, 1872. A polo club was formed, and international contests held. Polo is said to have been an old Russian game, mentioned 1492 under the name of Chûgăn, as brought from Persia. English beat the Americans, 3 games out of 4, June, 1902.

POLOTSK (Russia). The French under marshal Oudinot were here defeated by the Russians under general Wittgenstein, 30 and 31 July, 1812; the next day, the Russians were defeated. After several smaller actions with various results, Polotsk was stormed by the Russians, and retaken Oct. 1812.

POLTOWA, see Pultowa.

POLYGAMY, &c., was permitted among the early nations, and now by Mahometans and Mormons (which see). In Media, it was a reproach to a man to have less than seven wives. Among the Romans, Marc Antony is mentioned as the first who took two wives. The practice was forbidden by Arcadius, 394. The emperor Charles V. punished polygamy with death. In England, by stat. 1 James I. 1603, it was made felony, with benefit of clergy. It was formerly punished with transportation, but now by imprisonment or penal servitude; see Marriages. Abolished in the United States, 23 March, 1882.—POLYANDRY (where one woman has several husbands) is permitted in some eastern countries, the children having equal rights.

POLYGLOT, from two Greek words denoting "many languages," is chiefly applied to editions of the Bible in several languages.

Gutenberg published a polyglot psalter, 1516.

1. The Complutensian Polyglot, in six vols. folio, was printed at Alcala (Complutensis), in Spain, 1502-14; the first edition published in 1522, at the expense of the celebrated cardinal Ximenes, costing 250,000 ducats. Six hundred copies of it were printed; three on vellum. Count MacCarthy, of Toulouse, paid 483*l.* for one of these copies at the Pinelli sale.
2. The Polyglot, printed at Antwerp, by Montanus, 8 vols. folio, in 1559-69, at the expense of Philip II. of Spain.
3. Printed at Paris, by Le Jay, in 10 vols. folio, 1628-45.
4. Edited by Bryan Walton, in 6 vols. folio, 1653-7. Copies of all four are in the library of the British and Foreign Bible Society.
5. Edited by Dr. Samuel Lee, published by S. Bagster, 1 vol. folio, 1831.
6. Hexaglot Bible: begun by Henry Cohn; completed by the rev Edwd R. De Levante and others, 6 vols. 4to, 1874.

POLYNESIA, a name recently given to the isles in the great Pacific Ocean, see Hawaii, Otaheite, Sandwich Islands, Fiji Isles, &c. These islands have been classified as Micronesia, Melanesia, and East Polynesia. The Polynesian society, Wellington, New Zealand, was founded in 1892. The archipelago explored by Mr. Fred. W. Christian, 1890-98.

POLYOLBION, a poetical description of the tracts, rivers, mountains, forests, &c. of Great Britain, with historical details, by Michael Drayton, published 1606-22; a new edition, 3 vols., by the rev. Richard Hooper, was published 1876.

POLYPES, also named Hydræ (many-footed animals), on account of their property of reproducing themselves when cut in pieces, every part soon becoming a perfect animal; first discovered by Leeuwenboek, and described by him in the Philosophical Trans. 1703. The polypes are of the order Zoophytes, and are partly animal and vegetable.

POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, ROYAL, Regent-street, London, was erected by Thompson in 1838, opened 6 Aug. 1839, and enlarged in 1848. It contained a hall of manufactures with machines worked by steam-power, lecture theatres, &c., diving-bell, electric machine, &c. Timbs. The institution did not prosper commercially, and its decline was hastened by the fall of a staircase on 3 Jan. 1859, when one person was killed and many injured. The institution was closed in May, 1859, but was re-opened by a new company on 12 Nov. 1860; see Ecole Polytechnique. Professor Pepper, the director for many years, resigned in 1872; returned, 1878. The classes were formed into a college, which was inaugurated by the earl of Shaftesbury, 7 Oct. 1872. Polytechnic institution announced to be closed on 27 Aug. 1881; affairs wound up. Plant sold for about 2000*l.* 23 March, 1882. In 1882 it was occupied by the Polytechnic young men's christian institute, principally by the instrumentality of Mr. Quintin Hogg (suffocated by fumes in a geyser bath, 17 Jan. 1903), for educational purposes, with about 2000 members; over 17,000, Jan. 1903.

POMEGRANATE TREE (Punica Granatum) was brought to England from Spain before 1584.

POMERANIA, a Prussian province, N. Germany, was held by the Poles, 980, and by Denmark, 1210; made an independent duchy, 1479; and divided between Sweden and Brandenburg, 1648. The Swedish part, awarded to Denmark in 1814, was given up to Prussia for Lauenburg, 1815; see Denmark; Wrestes, 1878.

POMPEII (S. Italy), an ancient city of Campania, was partly demolished by an earthquake in A.D. 63. It was afterwards rebuilt, but was overwhelmed by an eruption of Vesuvius, accompanied by an earthquake, on the night of 24 Aug. 79. The principal citizens were then assembled in an amphitheatre where public spectacles were exhibited. The ashes buried the whole city and covered the surrounding country. After a lapse of fifteen centuries, a countryman, as he was turning up the ground, found a bronze figure; and this discovery led to further search, which brought numerous other objects to light, and at length the city was uncovered. The part first cleared was supposed to be the main street, 1750. The kings of Naples greatly aided in exploring Pompeii, and the Italian government resumed the work in 1863. Many discoveries since.

A commemorative meeting of antiquaries and philosophers met at Pompeii, 23 Sept. 1879.

POMPEY'S PILLAR stands about three-quarters of a mile from Alexandria, between the city and the lake Mareotis. The shaft is fluted, and the capital ornamented with palm-leaves; the whole, which is highly polished, composed of three pieces, and of the Corinthian order. The column measures, according to some, 94 feet; to others 141, and even 160 feet; but of its origin, name, use, and age, nothing is certain.

It is generally believed that the column has no reference to Pompey, to whom a mark of honour was, nevertheless, set up somewhere about this part. One supposes the edifice was dedicated to Vespasian, another to Severus; and Mr. Clarke, from a half-effaced inscription on the base, considered that Adrian is the person honoured; while many assert, from the same inscription, that it is dedicated "to Diocletian Augustus, most adorable emperor, tutelar deity of Alexandria."

PONDICHERRY (S.E. India), on the Coromandel coast, the chief of the French possessions in India. Area 115 square miles. Population 174,456. It was first settled by the French in 1674. It was taken from them by the Dutch in 1693, restored 1697; town besieged by the English, 1748; taken by them, Jan. 1761; restored, 1763; again taken, Oct. 1778; restored in 1783; taken 23 Aug. 1793, and in 1803; restored, 1815. Prosperous state of the colony reported Jan. 1889. Population, town of Pondicherry, 45,583.

PONDOLAND, the coast between Cape Colony and Natal, S. Africa; the British protectorate was proclaimed and notified, 6 Jan. 1885.

PONT-À-CHIN, see Espierres.

PONT-À-NOYELLES. At this place, near Amiens, took place a fierce indecisive conflict, lasting from 11 A.M. to 6 P.M., between the Germans under Manteuffel and the French army of the north under Faidherbe, 23 Dec. 1870. Both sides claimed a victory; the French general asserted that he remained master of the field.

PONTEFRACT (formerly Pomfret) (S. York). At the castle (built 1080), Richard II. was confined and murdered, 10 Feb. 1400. Some writers assert that Richard escaped and died in Scotland. In this castle also, the earl Rivers, lord Grey, sir Thomas Vaughan, and sir Richard Haut or Hause, were put to death by order of the duke of Gloucester, then protector of England (afterwards Richard III.), about 26 June, 1483. The castle, which had stood four sieges, was dismantled in 1649. The first parliamentary election by ballot took place here, 15 Aug. 1872, very quietly. It lost one of its two members in 1885. Population, 1881, 8,798; 1891, 9,702; 1901, 13,398.

PONTIFFS (Latin Pontifices), the highest Roman sacerdotal order, established by Numa. The college first consisted of 4 patricians, with a chief (Pontifex Maximus); to these 4 plebeians were added, by the Ogulnian law, 300 B.C. Sylla increased the number to 15 (8 majores, 7 minores), (81), and Julius Cæsar to 16. T. Coruncanius, a plebeian, obtained this office, 254 B.C.

PONTUS, in Asia Minor, seems to have been a portion of Cappadocia, and received its name from its vicinity to the Pontus Euxinus. Artabazus was made king of Pontus by Darius Hystaspes in the 4th century B.C. His successors were mere satraps of the kings of Persia.

POONAH, a province, S.W. India, formerly the seat of the power of the peishwa of the Mahrattas, 1749. It was captured by Wellesley from Holkar, 19 April, 1803, for Bajee Rao, who had claimed British protection. Bajee resigned his office, 3 June, 1818, for a pension. See Bombay, 1897.

POOR. The poor of England, till the time of Henry VIII., subsisted as the poor of Ireland until 1838, entirely upon private benevolence. By statute 23 Edw. III. 1349, it was enacted that none should give alms to a beggar able to work. By the common law, the poor were to be sustained by "parsons, rectors of the church, and parishioners, so that none should die for default of sustenance;" and by 15 Rich. II. impropriators were obliged to distribute a yearly sum to the poor; but no compulsory law was enacted till the 27th Hen. VIII. 1535. The origin of the present POOR LAW is referred to the 43rd of Elizabeth, 1601, by which overseers were appointed for parishes. See Settlement, Act of.

POOR CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY,

for providing food, clothing, &c., established 1887.

POOR KNIGHTS OF WINDSOR, or ALMS KNIGHTS. Soon after his institution of the order of the Garter, Edward III. founded this charity, for the provision of 24 (afterwards 26) poor persons eminent for military services. Edward IV. discharged the college from the support of the alms-knights, but Elizabeth re-established the charity for 13 knights, 1559. King William IV. changed the name to the "Military Knights of Windsor," in consequence of their all having held commissions in the army, Sept. 1833.—The "Naval Knights of Windsor" are maintained on a distinct foundation, under the bequest of Samuel Travers, 1724. The corporation was established in 1708. An act making lieutenants and widowers eligible was passed in 1867. Alterations made by act passed in 1885. An act to dissolve the corporation was passed in 1892.

POPE (from the Greek Pappas and Papa, a father or grandfather), considered by Romanists to be the visible chief of the church, the vicar of Jesus Christ, and the successor of St. Peter. He styles himself "servant of the servants of God." The title pope was formerly given to all bishops. It was first adopted by Hyginus, 139; and pope Boniface III. induced Phocas, emperor of the east, to confine it to the prelates of Rome, 606. By the connivance of Phocas also, the pope's supremacy over the Christian church was established; see Italy, Reformation, and Rome, Modern.

PORCELAIN, see Pottery.

PORPHYROGENITUS, "born in the purple," a term applied to emperors of the east, born while their fathers were reigning.

PORT ARTHUR, China See Corea, Nov. 1894; Russia, 1898 and 1904-5, also Russo-Japanese War, 1904-5 Surrender of Port Arthur to the Japanese by the Russian garrison, 2 Jan. 1905.

PORT BRETON, an isle near New Caledonia, South Pacific.

In 1877 the marquis Du Breil de Rays purchased of the king Maragano a quantity of land on which to found a colony. Glowing prospectuses were issued in France, a company was formed, and, the scheme being favoured by the legitimists, a large number of shares were purchased and much money received Other speculating companies were formed, and colonial government officers nominated. In spite of warning and prohibition several vessels sailed in 1879 with emigrants to meet with misery, disease, and, to a large extent, with death A few who had been landed in New Caledonia got back to France and published an account of their sufferings. The marquis and some of his associates were brought to trial 27 Nov. 1883, he was sentenced to four years' imprisonment and a fine of 3000 francs, his associates to shorter imprisonment, 2 Jan. 1884; on appeal, sentence confirmed, 14 March, 1884.

PORTE, or SUBLIME PORTE, official name of the court of the sultan of Turkey. Mostasem, the last of the Abbaside caliphs (1243-58), fixed in the threshold of the principal entrance to his palace at Bagdad a piece of the black stone adored at Mecca, and thus this entrance became the "porte" by eminence, and the title of his court. The sultans, successors of the caliphs, assumed the title. —Bouillet.

PORTEOUS MOB. Capt. Porteous, at Edinburgh, on 15 April, 1736, commanded the guard at the execution of Wilson, a smuggler, who had saved the life of a fellow criminal, by springing upon the soldiers around them, and by main force keeping them back, while his companion fled. This excited great commiseration, and the spectators pelted the guard with stones. Fearing a rescue, Porteous ordered his men to fire upon the mob, and seventeen persons were killed or wounded. He was found guilty of murder, 22 June, 1736; but the queen granted him a reprieve (the king being then in Hanover). The people, at night, broke open the prison, took out Porteous, and hanged him on a dyer's sign-post, in the Grass-market, 7 Sept. 1736. None of the rioters were ever detected.

PORTER. Dr. Ashe says that this malt liquor obtained its appellation on account of its having been drunk by porters in the city of London, about 1730. The number of licensed brewers in 1850, in England, was 2257; in Scotland, 154; and in Ireland, 96—total, 2507. On 17 Oct. 1814, at Meux's brewhouse two large vats of porter burst, destroying neighbouring houses. Several lives were lost, and the loss was between 8000 and 9000 barrels.

PORTERAGE ACT, regulating the charge for porterage of small parcels, passed 1799.

The Fellowship of Free Porters established in London in the 13th century, with exclusive privileges, relating to grain, &c., much reduced by the act of parliament of 1872 and the construction of docks. The institution was gradually dying out. After urgent demands and much delay, the distribution of the accumulated funds and property amongst the members was ordered by the rulers, 12 Oct. 1893. The fellowship disbanded by the court of common council, June, 1894.
Final payment of assets, 10,379*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*, distributed to 495 members, 18 Dec. 1894.

PORT HAMILTON, see Corea.

PORT JACKSON (New South Wales), thirteen miles north of Botany Bay, was so named by capt. Cook in 1770; see Sydney. Here the duke of Edinburgh was shot by O'Farrell, a Fenian, 12 March, 1868, but soon recovered. The assassin was hanged, 21 April.

PORTLAND ADMINISTRATIONS. The first was the "coalition ministry," of which William Henry Cavendish, duke of Portland,* as first lord of the treasury, was the head. It obtained the name of the "coalition" ministry, and included lord North with Mr. Fox, formerly inveterate opponents. Formed 5 April, 1783; dissolved by Mr. Pitt's coming into power, Dec. same year.

PORTLAND CEMENT, first mentioned in a patent granted to Joseph Aspden, a bricklayer of Leeds, 1824. His son made the true cement at Northfleet. Its value as a building material was established by Mr. John Grant's tests, 1859-71. Portland cement concrete was used by Mr. E. A. Bernay in 1867.

PORTLAND ISLE (off Dorset), the English Gibraltar. Fortified before 1142. Portland castle was built by Henry VIII. about 1536. Off this peninsula a naval engagement commenced between the English and Dutch, 18 Feb 1653, which continued for three days. The English destroyed eleven Dutch men-of-war and thirty merchantmen. Van Tromp was admiral of the Dutch, and Blake of the English.—Here is found the noted freestone used for building our finest edifices. The Portland lights were erected 1716 and in 1789. The pier, with nearly half a mile square of land, was washed into the sea in Feb. 1792. Prince Albert laid the first stone of the Portland breakwater, 25 July, 1849, and the last stone was laid by the prince of Wales, 10 Aug. 1872. Mr. James Rendel, the first chief engineer, was succeeded on his death in 1856 by Mr. (aft. sir) John Coode. The breakwater and other harbour works cost 1,033,600*l.* exclusive of convict labour. The Portland prison was established in 1848. A mutiny among the convicts here in Sept. 1858, was promptly suppressed. The king visits the prison and Whitehead's torpedo works, 4 April, 1902.

PORTLAND (or BARBERINI) VASE. This beautiful specimen of Greek art (composed of a glass-like substance, with figures and devices raised on it in white enamel; height 10 inches; diameter in the broadest part, 7; with a handle on each side) was discovered about the middle of the 16th century, in a marble sarcophagus in a sepulchre at a place called Monte del Grano, about 2½ miles from Rome. The sepulchre was supposed to have been that of the Roman emperor, Alexander Severus (222-235), and his mother Mammæa, and the vase is supposed to have been the cinerary urn of one of these royal personages. It was placed in the palace of the Barberini family, at Rome, where it remained till 1770, when it was purchased by sir William Hamilton, from whose possession it passed to that of the duchess of Portland. 1787; at the sale of her effects, it is said to have been bought by the then duke of Portland, who, in 1810, deposited it (on loan) in the British museum. On 27 Feb. 1845, this vase was smashed to pieces with a stone by a man named William Lloyd; it was skilfully repaired, and is now shown to the public in a special room. Josiah Wedgwood made a mould of it, and took a number of casts.

PORT MAHON, see Minorca.

PORTO BELLO (S. America), discovered by Columbus, 2 Nov. 1502, was taken by Morgan the buccaneer in 1668, by the British under admiral Vernon, from the Spaniards, 21 Nov. 1739, and the fortifications destroyed. Before the abolition of the trade by the galleons, in 1748, it was the great mart for the rich commerce of Peru and Chili.

PORTO FERRAJO, capital of Elba (which see); built and fortified by Cosmo I., duke of Florence, in 1548. The fortifications were not finished till 1628, when Cosmo II. completed them with great magnificence, see France.

PORTO NOVO (S. India). Here sir Eyre Coote, with about 9500 men and 55 light field-pieces, skilfully defeated Hyder Ali, ruler of the Carnatic, with 80,000 men and some heavy cannon, 1 July, 1781. Hyder lost about 10,000, the British 587 killed and wounded.—PORTO NOVO, W. Africa, a French settlement on the coast of Dahomey, which see (1890 et seq.).

PORTO RICO, a West India island, belonging to Spain, discovered by Columbus in 1493. Attacks on it by Drake and Hawkins repulsed, 1595. Revolt suppressed, 1823. Slavery abolished, 23 March, 1873. Ceded to United States, 10 Dec. 1898; see Spanish American War. Fearful hurricane, many deaths, 7 Aug. 1899; see West Indies.

The formation of a "British Museum of Portraits" (photographs) was proposed by Mr. James Glaisher in 1864, and partly begun. The undertaking resumed mainly by the exertions of Mr. Glaisher and the Amateur Photographic association, and a collection of portraits deposited in the art department at South Kensington museum, July, 1891

PORTREEVE (derived from Saxon words signifying the governor of a port or harbour). The chief magistrate of London was originally so styled;

* Born 1738, became lord chamberlain, 1765, lord lieutenant of Ireland, 1782, premier, 1783; home secretary, 1794; lord president, 1801, premier again, 1807; died 1809, when Mr Spencer Perceval became premier.

but Richard I. appointed two bailiffs, and afterwards London had mayors. Camden; see Mayors.

PORT ROYAL (Nova Scotia), capital of the French colony, Acadie, founded in 1604; after having been taken and restored several times, it was finally acquired by the British in 1710, and named Annapolis.

PORT ROYAL (Jamaica), once a considerable town, was destroyed by earthquakes in 1602 and 1692; laid in ashes by fire in 1702; reduced to ruins by an inundation of the sea in 1722; and destroyed by a hurricane in 1774. After these calamities, the custom-house and public offices were removed to Kingston. Port Royal was again greatly damaged by fire in 1750; by another awful storm in 1784; and by a devastating fire in July, 1815; in 1850 it suffered by cholera.

PORT ROYAL DES CHAMPS (near Paris) was a French Cistercian convent, founded by Odo, bishop of Paris, at the wish of king Philip Augustus, 1204. Having fallen into decay, it was revived and reformed in 1608 by Angelica Arnauld. In 1625 the increased community removed to Paris. The Port Royal des Champs, in 1656, became the retreat of the Arnaulds, Tillemont, Pascal, Lancelot, and other eminent Jansenists, who devoted themselves to education, and produced the Port Royal grammars, logic, and other works. This institution was condemned by the pope in 1709, and the buildings were pulled down, and tombs desecrated, by the order of Louis XIV., in 1710. The Port Royal at Paris was suppressed, with other monasteries, in 1790.

PORTUGAL, the ancient Lusitania. The present name is derived from Porto Callo, the original appellation of Oporto. After a nine years' struggle, under Viriathes, a brave able leader, the Lusitanians submitted to the Roman arms about 137 B.C. Portugal underwent the same changes as Spain on the fall of the Roman empire. There are in Portugal two universities, that of Coimbra, founded in 1308, and the smaller one of Evora, founded in 1533. Lisbon, the capital (pop. 1900, 365,009), has its royal academy, and the small town of Thomar has an academy of sciences; but in general literature is at a low ebb in Portugal. The poet Camoens, called the Virgil of his country, and author of the Lusiad (1569), translated into English by Mickle, was a native of Lisbon. The constitution, granted in 1826, was revised in 1852. Population of the kingdom and colonies, 1900 kingdom, 5,016,267; colonies (Madeira and Azores), 406,865; revenue (estimated), 1902–3, 12,203,000*l*.; expenditure, 12,415,000*l*.; imports, 1904, 17,812,000*l*., exports, 10,900,000*l*.

POSITIVE PHILOSOPHY set forth by Auguste Comte, an eminent mathematician, born 19 Jan 1798; died at Paris, 5 Sept. 1857, succeeded by M. Pierre Laffitte as director of positivism; died, aged 80, early Jan. 1903. M. P. Emile Littré, the great French philologist, ardently embraced the system, and published "De la Philosophie Positive," in 1845.—See Calendar.

Comte's "Cours de Philosophie Positive," published 1830-42, "Système de Politique Positive, ou Traite de Sociologie, instituant la Religion de l'Humanite (l'amour pour principe, l'ordre pour base, et le progrès pour but)," 1851-4

It professes to base itself wholly on positive facts or observed phenomena, and rejects all metaphysical conceptions, which it considers negatives, having nothing real or true in them, and dispenses with the science of mind It sets aside theology and metaphysics as two merely preliminary stages in life, and abandons all search after causes and essences of things, and restricts itself to the observation and classification of phenomena and the discovery of their laws Comte asserted that Europe had now arrived at the third stage of its progress

Positivism does not recognise the supernatural or the future state.

"The Church of Humanity" is a modified form of positivism, described by Mr Richard Congreve, an ardent comtist (Pall Mall Gazette, 17 Jan 1884); he died, aged 81, 5 July, 1899

POTASSIUM, a remarkable metal, discovered by Humphry Davy, who first succeeded in separating it from its oxide, potash, by means of a powerful voltaic battery, in the laboratory of the Royal Institution, London, about 19 Oct. 1807; and also the metals Sodium from soda, Calcium from lime, &c. The alkalies and earths had been previously regarded as simple substances. Potassium ignites on contact with moisture.

POTATOES, natives of Chili and Peru, generally considered to have been brought to England from Santa Fé, in America, by sir John Hawkins, 1565. Others ascribe their introduction to sir Francis Drake, in 1580; their general introduction, 1592. Their first culture in Ireland is referred to sir Walter Raleigh, who had large estates in that country, about Youghal, in the county of Cork. It is said that potatoes were not known in Flanders until 1620. A fine kind of potato was first brought from America by Mr. Howard, who cultivated it at Cardington, near Bedford, 1765; and its culture became general soon after. The failure of the potato crop in Ireland, several years, especially in 1846, caused famine, to which succeeded pestilent disease of which multitudes died; among them many priests and physicians. Parliament voted ten millions sterling; and several countries of Europe, and the United States of America, forwarded provisions and other succours; see Ireland. In 1868 it was reported that in England and Wales 500,000 acres, and in Ireland 1,000,000 acres, were under cultivation for potatoes. Potato disease prevailed greatly in England, autumn of 1872. In consequence the value of potatoes imported in 1872 was 1,654,240*l.*; in 1871, only 225,732*l.*; in 1877, 7,964,840 cwt., value, 2,348,749*l.*; in 1883, 5,149,509 cwt., value 1,585,260*l.*; in 1887, 2,763,357 cwt.; in 1890, 1,940,100 cwt.; in 1900, 8,910,932 cwt.; in 1902, 5,697,090 cwt., value, 1,589,432*l.*; in 1904, 9,993,965 cwt., value 2,437,971*l.* Temporary alarm respecting the American Colorado beetle or bug, autumn, 1876. Acres cultivated for potatoes in Great Britain in 1867, 492,217; 1871, 627,691; 1877, 512,471; 1883, 543,455; in 1887, 559,052; in POYNINGS' LAW, named after sir Edward Poynings, lord deputy of Ireland at the time of its passing, at Drogheda, 13 Sept. 1494. By this law all legislation in the Irish parliament was confined to matters first approved of by the king and the English council. The act was repealed, together with the English Declaratory act of the 6th of Geo. I. and other obnoxious Irish statutes, April, 1782.

PRÆMONSTRATENSIAN ORDER, or WHITE CANONS, founded in 1120 by Norbert, a monk, at Pré Montré, near Laon. Its first house in England was founded by Peter de Gousla or Gousel, at Newsham, in Lincolnshire, 1143—Tanner; according to others in 1146. The order spread widely through England soon after. The house at Newsham was dedicated to St. Mary and St. Martial.—Lewis.

PRÆMUNIRE, LAW OF. This law (which obtained its name from the first two words "Præmoneri," or "Præmunire facias," "Cause to be forewarned," which is applied to any offence in the way of contempt of the sovereign or his government) derived its origin from the aggressive power of the pope in England. The offence introduced a foreign power into the land, and created an imperium in imperio. The first statute of Præmunire was enacted 35 Edward I. 1306.—Coke. The pope bestowed most of the bishoprics, abbeys, &c., before they were void, upon favourites, on pretence of providing the church with better qualified successors before the vacancies occurred. To put a stop to these encroachments, Edward III. enacted a statute in 1353. The statute commonly referred to as the statute of Præmunire is the 16th of Richard II. 1392. Several similar enactments followed. The assertion that parliament is independent of the sovereign was declared a præmunire. 1661.

PRÆTORIAN GUARDS, instituted by the emperor Augustus (13 B.C.), their numbers enlarged by Tiberius, Vitellius, and their successors. At first supporters of the imperial tyrants, they eventually became their masters, actually putting up the diadem for sale (as in March, 193 A.D., when it was bought by Didius Julianus). They committed many atrocities, and were finally disbanded by Constantine in 312.

PRÆTORS, Roman magistrates, afterwards termed consuls (which see), were elected at the establishment of the republic, 509 B.C. In 366 the prætor urbanus was appointed for the city, and the prætor peregrinus for foreigners, 246 B.C. Two prætors were appointed for the provinces, 227, and two more, 197. Sylla, the dictator, added two, and Julius Cæsar increased the number to 10, which afterwards became 16. After this, their number fluctuated, being sometimes 18, 16, or 12, till, in the decline of the empire, their dignity decreased, and their numbers were reduced to three.

PRAGA, a suburb of Warsaw, where a bloody battle was fought, 4 Nov. 1794; 30,000 Poles were killed by the Russian general Suwarrow. Near here, on 25 Feb. 1831, the Poles, commanded by Skrznecki, defeated the Russians, under general Chemsar, who lost 4000 killed and wounded, 6000 prisoners, and 12 pieces of cannon.

PRAGMATIC SANCTION, an ordinance relating to church and state affairs. The ordinances of the kings of France are thus called; in one the rights of the Gallican church were asserted against the usurpation of the pope in the choice of bishops, by Charles VII. in 1438. The Pragmatic Sanction for settling the empire of Germany in the house of Austria, 1439. The emperor Charles VI. published the Pragmatic Sanction, whereby, in default of male issue, his daughters should succeed in preference to the daughters of his brother Joseph I., 19 April, 1713; and he settled his dominions on his daughter Maria Theresa, in conformity thereto, 1723. She succeeded in Oct. 1740; but it gave rise to a war, in which most of the powers of Europe were engaged, and which lasted till 1748.

PRAGUE, the capital of Bohemia (which see). The old city was founded about 759; the new city rebuilt in 1348 by the emperor Charles IV., who made it his capital and erected a university. Prague has suffered much by war. Population, 1880, 162,323; 1890, 184,109; 1900, 389,741.

PRASLIN MURDER. The duchesse de Choiseul-Praslin was murdered by her husband, the duc de Praslin, at his own house, in Paris, 17 Aug. 1847. She was the only daughter of the celebrated marshal Sebastiani, the mother of nine children, and in her forty-first year. Circumstances were so managed by him as to give it the appearance of being the act of another. During the arrangements for the trial, the duke took poison.

PRAYER-BOOK, see Common Prayer. The Prayer-book and Homily Society, London, was founded in 1812.

Prayer-book Revision Society, established 1854, for promoting a revision of the book of common prayer, and such liturgical reforms in the church of England as in the opinion of the society would strengthen its Protestant and scriptural character.

PRAYERS. "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord" (Gen. iv. 26), 3875 B.C. The mode of praying with the face to the east was instituted by pope Boniface II. A.D. 532. Prayers for the dead, first introduced into the Christian church about 190, are advocated by some ministers of the English church. Prayers addressed to the Virgin Mary and to the saints are said to have been introduced by pope Gregory, 593. See Liturgies.

PREBENDARY, a clergyman attached to a cathedral or collegiate church, who receives an income termed prebenda for officiating at stated times. The office slightly differs from that of a canon.

PRECEDENCE was established in very early ages, and was amongst the laws of Justinian. In England the order of precedency was regulated chiefly by two statutes, 31 Hen. VIII 1539, and 1 Geo. I. 1714.

PRECEPTORS, COLLEGE OF, Bloomsbury, London, established in 1846, and incorporated by royal charter 28 March, 1849, for promoting sound learning, especially among the middle classes, by the instruction of teachers, and by the examination of pupils at stated times.

Professorship (the first in England) of the science and art of education, instituted, 1873.
New building in Bloomsbury Square opened by the prince of Wales, 30 March, 1887.

PREDESTINATION (Ephes. i.). The doctrine concerning this is defined in the seventeenth article of the Church of England (Ephes. i. and Romans ix.). It was maintained by St. Augustin, and opposed by Pelagius, in the early part of the 5th century. In later times it has been maintained by the Augustinians, Jansenists, the church of Scotland, and many dissenters (termed Calvinistic), and opposed by the Dominicans, Jesuits, and dissenters (termed Arminian), especially by the Wesleyan methodists.

PREFERENTIAL TARIFFS.

PREHISTORIC ARCHÆOLOGY began in Sweden, and first systematised by Mr. Nillson. Daniel Wilson's "Archæology and Pre-historic Annals of Scotland," published 1851. An international congress for treating prehistorical subjects met at Neuchâtel in 1866, and at Paris in 1867. At the third meeting at Norwich, Aug. 1868, it assumed the name of "International Congress for Prehistoric Archæology," and published its transactions in 1869. A meeting was held at Stockholm 7-14 Aug. 1874. See Barrows, Man, Ancient Monuments and Lake Dwellings.

Sir John Lubbock divides prehistoric archæology into four great epochs, 1. The Drift or Palæolithic or old stone age, 2. The Neolithic or polished stone age, 3 The Bronze age; 4 The Iron age, when bronze was superseded.

PRE-RAPHAELITE SCHOOL, a name given about 1850, to J. E. Millais, Wm. Holman Hunt, D. G. Rossetti, and other artists, who opposed the routine conventionality of academic teaching, and resolved to study nature as it appeared to them, and not as it appeared in the antique. For a short time they published "The Germ, or Art and Poetry," beginning in 1850. Their works have been much criticised, but their influence has been beneficial. Their principles were much advocated by the great art-critic, John Ruskin.

PREROGATIVE COURT, in which formerly all wills were proved, and all administrations taken, which belonged to the archbishop of Canterbury by his prerogative, a judge being appointed by him to decide disputes.* Appeals from this court, previously to the pope, were commanded to be made to the king in chancery, 1533; to the privy council in 1830-2. This court was abolished, and the Probate Court established in 1857. Sir John Dodson, the last judge, died in 1858.

PREROGATIVE, ROYAL. In England the sovereign is the supreme magistrate, and it is a maxim that he can do no wrong. He is the head of the established church, of the army and navy, and the fountain of office, honour, and privilege, but is subject to the laws, unless exempted by name. The royal prerogatives were greatly exceeded by several despotic sovereigns, such as Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I. Elizabeth used the phrase "We, of our Royal prerogative, which we will not have argued or brought in question" (1591). James I. told his parliament "that as it was blasphemy to question what the Almighty could do of His power, so it was sedition to inquire what a king could do by virtue of his prerogative." These extreme doctrines were nullified by the revolution of 1688, and the exercise of the prerogative is now virtually subject to parliament; see Lords.

* The records date from 1383; but the testamentary jurisdiction from that year to 1433 was exercised by the court of arches. Then abp. Stafford transferred it to a new court; president, the commissary of the prerogative court of Canterbury. There was also a prerogative court of the archbishop of York.

PRESBURG, the ancient capital of Hungary, where the diets were held and the kings crowned. On 26 Dec. 1805, a treaty was signed between France and Austria, by which the ancient states of Venice were ceded to Italy; the principality of Eichstadt, part of the bishopric of Passau, the city of Augsburg, the Tyrol, all the possessions of Austria in Suabia, in Brisgau, and Ortenau, were transferred to the elector of Bavaria, and the duke of Würtemberg, who, as well as the duke of Baden, were then created kings by Napoleon. The independence of the Helvetic republic was also stipulated. A new iron and stone railway and passenger bridge over the Danube was inaugurated by the emperor, 30 Dec. 1890. Population, 1890, 52,444; 1900, 61,861.

PRESBYTERIANS are so called from their maintaining that the government of the church appointed in the New Testament was by presbyteries, or association of ministers and ruling elders, equal in power, office, and in order. "The elders (Greek, presbyteros) I exhort, who am also an elder (sympresbyteros)." 1 Peter v. 1. Presbyterianism was accepted by parliament in place of episcopacy in England in 1648, but set aside at the restoration in 1660. It became the established form of church government in Scotland in 1696. Its tenets were embodied in the formulary of faith said to have been composed by John Knox, in 1560, which was approved by the parliament, and ratified, 1567, and finally settled by an act of the Scottish senate, 1696, afterwards secured by the treaty of union with England in 1707. The first Presbyterian meeting-house in England was established at Wandsworth, Surrey, 20 Nov. 1572.

PRESS ASSOCIATION (a company "limited") was established by the newspaper proprietors of London and the provinces, at a meeting at Manchester, 29 June, 1868, to make arrangements to enable them to avail themselves of the increased facilities for the speedy transmission of news afforded by the post office, in consequence of the purchase of the rights of all the telegraph companies, authorised by the Telegraph Act of 1868. The organisation of the association was completed at a meeting in London, 3 March, 1869. The Provincial Newspaper Society, out of which it sprang, was founded in 1836, and became the Newspaper Society in 1889. Since 1868 the number of good daily provincial newspapers, containing the latest news of the world, has very greatly increased. Foreign press association registered as a society, March, 1898.

PRESS, LIBERTY OF THE The imprimatur "let it be printed" was much used on the title-pages of books printed in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The liberty of the press was severely restrained, and the number of master-printers in London and Westminster limited by the Star Chamber, 13 Charles I., July 1, 1637. John Milton published his noble work, "Areopagitica, or, a Speech for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing," 1644 See Fourth Estate.

"Disorders in printing" were repressed by the parliament in 1643 and 1649, and by Charles II. 1662

PRESTON (Lancashire). Near here Cromwell totally defeated the royalists under sir Marmaduke Langdale, 17 Aug. 1648. Preston was taken in 1715 by the Scotch insurgents, under Forster, who proclaimed king James VII. They were defeated in a battle on 12, 13 Nov. by generals Willes and Carpenter, who with the royal army invested Preston on all sides. The Scots laid down their arms, and their nobles and leaders were secured; some were shot as deserters, and others sent to London pinioned and bound together, to intimidate their party.—The stoppage of the cotton manufacture in 1861 and 1862, through the civil war in America, occasioned great suffering in Preston. Population, 1901, 115,055.

"The Preston guild Merchant festival," said to have been instituted in Saxon times, recorded as beginning 1328, and to have been kept once in 20 years regularly since 1562, was duly celebrated in Sept. 1862, Sept. 1882, and Sept. 1902

PRIDE'S PURGE. On the 6th Dec 1648, colonel Pride, with two regiments, surrounded the house of parliament, and seizing in the passage forty-one members of the Presbyterian party, sent them to a low room, then called hell. Above 160 other members were excluded, and none admitted but the most furious of the Independents. The privileged members were named the Rump parliament, which was dismissed by Cromwell, 20 April, 1653.

PRIENE, one of the twelve cities of the Ionian league in Asia Minor. The temple of Minerva Polias, founded here by Alexander the Great, and the work of Pythios, was excavated by Mr. R. P. Pullan, for the Dilettanti Society, in 1868-9

PRIEST (derived from presbyteros, elder), in the English church the minister who presides over the public worship. In Gen xiv. 18, Melchizedek king of Salem is termed "priest of the most high God." (1913 B.C.; see Hebrews vii.) The Greek hiereus, like the Jewish priest, had a sacrificial character, which idea of the priesthood is still maintained by the Romanists and those who favour their views. Among the Jews, the priests assumed their office at the age of thirty years. The dignity of high or chief priest was fixed in Aaron's family, 1491 B.C. After the captivity of Babylon, the civil government and the crown were superadded to the high priesthood; it was the peculiar privilege of the high priest, that he could be prosecuted in no court but that of the great Sanhedrim. The heathens had their arch-flamen or high priest, resembling the Christian archbishop. For "Priest in Absolution," see Holy Cross.

PRIMER. A book so named from the Romish book of devotions, and formerly set forth or published by authority, as the first book children should publicly learn or read in schools, containing prayers and portions of the scripture. Primers were printed 1535, 1539. Henry VIII. issued a prayer-book called a "primer" in 1545. The three were published by Dr. Burton in 1834.

PRIMITIVE CULTURE, see Civilisation.

PRIMOGENITURE, RIGHT OF. A usage brought down from the earliest times. The first-born in the patriarchal ages had a superiority over his brethren, and in the absence of his father was priest to the family. In some parts of England, by the ancient customs of gavel-kind and borough-English, primogeniture was superseded It came in with the feudal law, 3 Will. I 1068. The rights of primogeniture abolished in France, 1790. "Primogeniture," by Mr. Evelyn Cecil, published Feb. 1895.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE, formed in 1884 in memory of the late lord Beaconsfield (with whom the primrose is said to have been a favourite flower) and in support of conservative principles. He died 19 April, 1881, and the anniversary of that day is termed "Primrose Day," when the flower is generally worn by his admirers, and his statue in Parliament-square decorated.

The league, which began with under a thousand members, was declared to consist of 810,228 knights, dames, and associates, with 1,992 "habitations" on 20 May, 1889, 1,733,696 members, 2 475 habitations . 1905

PRINCESS ALICE, an iron saloon steamer, belonging to the London steamboat company, while carrying, it is supposed, above 900 persons, principally women and children, on their return from Sheerness, was immediately sunk by collision with the Bywell Castle, a large iron screw steamer, about 7.40 p m. on Tuesday, 3 Sept. 1878, in the Thames, in Gallion's reach, about a mile below Woolwich arsenal. About 200 persons were saved, but of these about 16 died afterwards. About 640 bodies were recovered and buried; many at Woolwich.

The Princess Alice was 851 tons gross; 219 ft. 4 in. long; 30 ft. 2 in. broad; 8 ft. 4 in deep. Engines, 140 horse power, by Caird, of Glasgow Capt. Wm. Grinstead (lost), with 6 sailors, 2 engineers, 3 firemen, 6 stewards, and 5 boys.

The Bywell Castle, 1376 tons gross; 254 ft. 3 in. long; 32 ft 1 in. broad; 19 ft. 6 in. deep. Engines, 120 horse power Owners, Hall Brothers, London Captain Thomas Harrison.

Mansion House Relief Fund opened, 5 Sept.; 38,246*l.* 2*s* 6*d* received; final meeting, 30 Dec. 1878.

Board of Trade Inquiry.—Result: Officers of Bywell Castle and Princess Alice not considered responsible for the accident, but some were censured for carelessness, 28 Oct. Decision. "that the cause of the casualty was the breach of Rule 29 of the Thames Conservancy Regulations, by the Princess Alice not porting her helm when she came end on to the Bywell Castle, a vessel coming in the opposite direction." Report dated 6 Nov. 1878

Coroner's Inquest —Verdict "Bywell Castle did not take necessary precautions in time, of easing, &c.; Princess Alice contributed to the collision by not stopping her engines and going astern, &c.", 14 Nov 1878.

An action for damage against owners of Bywell Castle in Admiralty division began 27 Nov., decision that both vessels were to blame, 11 Dec 1878, decision on appeal that the Princess Alice was solely to blame, 15 July, 1879.

PRINTERS' PENSION SOCIETY (now termed "Printers' Corporation"), founded 1827; chartered, 1865; almshouses instituted, 1841; orphan schools have been set up.

PRINTING. Block printing is said to have been invented by the Chinese about 593 A.D., movable types made in the 10th century. The honour of first printing with single types in Europe has been appropriated to Mentz, Strasburg, Haarlem, Venice, Rome, Florence, Basle, and Augsburg; but the names of the three first only are entitled to attention; the early history is very doubtful, and the subject of much controversy; see Press.

Adrian Junius awards the honour of the invention to Laurenzes John Koster, of Haarlem, "who printed with blocks, a book of images and letters, Speculum Humanæ Salvationis, and compounded an ink more viscous and tenacious than common ink, which blotted, about 1438"
[The leaves of this book, being printed on one side only, were afterwards pasted together]
[In 1859, Mr Samuel Leigh Sotheby issued an elaborate work compiled by his father and himself, entitled "Principia Typographica," containing fac-similes, &c, of the block-books of the 15th century, and Mr J Russell Smith published a fac-simile of the Biblia Pauperum, a very early block-book]
John Fust established a printing-office at Mentz, and printed the Tractatus Petri Hispani . 1442
John Gutenberg invented cut metal types, and used them in printing the earliest edition of the Latin bible (termed the Mazarin, from the discovery of a copy in the cardinal's library) at Mentz . 1450-55
[At the sale of the Perkins library, 6 June, 1873, a copy of this bible on vellum sold for 3400*l*, one on paper sold for 2690*l*; a copy belonging to sir John Thorold, of Syston-park, sold for 390*l*. 13 Dec. 1884; a copy belonging to the earl of Crawford sold for 2650*l*., 15 June, 1887; lord Hopetoun's copy sold for 2000*l*., 25 Feb. 1889.]

Alexander Mackie's type-composing machine in use at his office in Warrington, and at Messrs Clay's, London, in 1871. It was said to be able to set up 4 columns of the Times in an hour

Linotype.—An American composing and distributing machine, in which type matrices are employed instead of type. The manipulator brings letters, points, and spaces together in one line of the galley; this is passed into a casting-box, and a solid line of type is produced in stereo metal; this is repeated till the galley is full. An English company was formed in 1889. Machines improved yearly, and many thousands are now (1905) in use

Miss Emily Faithfull established the Victoria printing-office in Great Coram-street, London, in which female compositors are employed, 1860; the "Englishwoman's Journal" printed there Aug 1861; appointed printer and publisher in ordinary to her Majesty, June, 1862, died . June, 1895

Mr. William Blades, learned printer, printed facsimiles of several of Caxton's works, 1858 et seq. "Life of Caxton," 1861–3, and 1877, and other valuable works connected with printing; born, 1824; died . . . . . 27 April, 1890

PRINTING-MACHINES.—William Nicholson, editor of the Philosophical Journal, first projected (1790-1), but Mr Konig first contrived and constructed a working printing machine, which began with producing the Times of 28 Nov. 1814, a memorable day in the annals of typography

In 1818, Mr. E. Cowper patented improvements †

Konig's machine printed 1800 an hour on one side. Cowper's improvements increased this number to 4200. This was raised to 15,000, by Mr Applegath's machine, which printed the Times

Hoe's American machine, introduced into London 1858, prints 20,000 an hour

Marinoul's machine at Paris said to print 36,000 an hour, Dec. 1868.

Walter press, invented for the Times by J. C Macdonald and Mr. Calverley, between 1862-9, prints about 17,000 an hour perfected; 1872.

American Campbell press said to print 50,000 sheets perfected in an hour, Feb. 1876.

Ingram web rotary machine, invented by Mr. (later sir) W. J. Ingram, M.P., for printing illustrated papers; first used to print Illustrated London News, 4 Oct. 1877.

* Romish Service-books, used at Salisbury, by the devout called Pies (Pica, Latin), as is supposed from the different colour of the text and rubric. Our printing-type Pica is called Cicero by foreign printers.—Wheatley.

† In 1817 was published Blumenbach's Physiology by Elliotson, the first book printed by machinery. The machine employed was König's, one which printed both sides in one operation at the rate of 900 sheets an hour (1816).

PRINTING IN COLOURS was first commenced by the employment of several blocks, to imitate the initial letters in MSS. (for instance, the Mentz Psalter of Fust, 1455, which has a letter in three colours) Imitations of chiaroscuro soon followed ("Repose in Egypt," engraving on wood after Louis Cranach, in 1519, in Germany; others by Ugo da Carpi, in Italy, 1518).

J. B. Jackson (1720-54) attempted, without success, to imitate water-colour drawings and to print paper-hangings

About 1783, John Skippe, an amateur, printed some chiaroscuros.

In 1819-22, Mr. William Savage produced his remarkable work, "Hints on Colour Printing," illustrated by imitations of chiaroscuro, and of coloured drawings, giving details of the processes employed.

In 1836, Mr George Baxter produced beautiful specimens of Picture-Printing, and took out a patent, which expired in 1855. In some of the illustrations to the "Pictorial Album" (1836), he employed twenty different blocks.

It has been applied to Lithography (hence Chromolithography).

In 1849, Mr G. C Leighton produced imitations of water-colour drawings, by means of modifications and improvements of Savage's processes. In 1851 he commenced colour-printing by machinery, and has since availed himself of aqua-tinted plates, and also of electrotyped silver and copper surfaces to obtain purity of colour as well as durability; Mr Leighton died, 8 May, 1895.

The large coloured prints of the Illustrated London News were first issued in Dec 1856.

Mr. E Meyerstein explained his process of printing many colours at one impression (stenochromy), Society of Arts, 13 Dec. 1870

Mr Ivan Orloff's colour-printing machine, multi-coloured designs produced by one operation; one set up in London, July, 1899.

Mr Carl Hentschel's three-colour process popular, 1905.

Printing surfaces Vulcanised india-rubber was first employed for this purpose by Mr. John Leighton, F.S.A., about 1862, and patented in the name of Alfred Leighton, 1864. The application is much used for hand-stamps for books, &c

Mr. Fred Wicks' type-casting machine (cheap), reported Times, 19 Nov. 1896, adopted 1900.

International exhibition of printing at Stationers' hall, London opened by the lord mayor, 14 Oct. 1889; another at the Agricultural-hall, 30 April, 1904.

PRIORIES, at first dependent on the great abbeys, are mentioned in 722 in England; see Abbeys, and Monasteries Alien priories were seized by the king (Edward I.) in 1285, and in succeeding reigns on the breaking out of war with France; but were usually restored on the conclusion of peace. These priories were dissolved, and their estates vested in the crown, 3 Henry V. 1414.—Rymer's Fœdera.

BORSTAL SCHEME.—This scheme for dealing with male criminals between the ages of 16 and 21 had its inception in the suggestion made in 1894 by the departmental committee on prisons (Mr Herbert Gladstone, chairman) "that the most determined effort should be made to lay hold of these incipient criminals, and to prevent them by strong restraint and rational treatment from recruiting the criminal class" The scheme was tentatively tried at Bedford prison in 1900, and from thence transferred to Borstal, where it came into more active operation, Oct. 1902. In outline the scheme works on the basis of the "indeterminate' sentence, the magistrate fixing the maximum sentence, discretion being allowed the governor, chaplain, and medical officer, acting as a committee, to reconsider the term, should the conduct of the prisoner warrant such reconsideration. The probationer at the end of the first 6 months of his sentence appears before the committee, and his case is thoroughly examined, and if it appears that he is likely to really benefit by his release the prisoner is remitted a part of his sentence. Moral and religious influences are brought to bear upon each prisoner, and habits of industry and the cultivation of self-respect inculcated and encouraged Various trades are taught, and recreations within the limits of discipline are permitted The governor, Mr. A. G Weston, in his report for 1902–3 to the prison commissioners, states "The progress made in the several trades here can only be understood by those living with them, who can watch day by day the general improvements, both in tone, demeanour, and ability; indeed they become a living study of human nature. Considering the character of the youths and the element from which most of them have received their early training, it is very striking that under proper care they can be brought to their bearings in so short a time.' The visiting committee in its report (1903–4) states that out of a total of 209 youths received only in three cases was it necessary to transfer a juvenile adult back to the local prison as incorrigible The period of 6 months' imprisonment being in the opinion of the prison commissioners too short a period for any lasting impression to be made on criminal character, they have decided to transfer to Borstal only cases of 12 months' sentence and upwards Of 76 cases dealt with on discharge of lads, all of whom but 6 had previously been convicted the majority more than once—no less than 36 have been satisfactory In 1904 an association was formed to help the prisoners at Borstal on their discharge, and to supervise their future career The principle of the Borstal scheme, "hard work, strict discipline, tempered by contrivances of reward, encouragement and hope, is acted upon in some of the states of America, at Elmira, and at Concord

PRIVATE BILLS, see Acts of Parliament.

PRIVATEER, a ship belonging to private individuals, sailing with a licence (termed a Letter of Marque), granted by a government in time of war, to seize and plunder the ships of the enemy. The practice, said to have been adopted by Edward I against the Portuguese in 1295, was general during the war between Spain and the Netherlands in the 17th century, and during the last French war. Privateering was abolished by the great sovereigns of Europe by treaty, 30 March, 1856. The United States government refused to agree unless the right of blockade was also given up. The British government declined this, asserting "that the system of commercial blockade was essential to its naval supremacy" On 17 April, 1861, Jefferson Davis, president of the southern confederacy, announced his intention of issuing letters of marque, and on the 19th president Lincoln proclaimed that all southern privateers should be treated as pirates. This decree was not carried out. see United States All the great powers forbade privateering during the American civil war (which see). By the treaty of Washington privateering was prohibited, and April, 1898, in relation to the Spanish-American war, a Spanish decree maintains liberty of action

PRIVY COUNCIL. A council said to have been instituted by Alfred, 895 The number of the council was about twelve when it discharged the functions of state, now confined to the members of the cabinet; but it had become of unwieldy amount before 1679, in which year it was remodelled upon sir William Temple's plan, and reduced to thirty members. Anthony Ashley, earl of Shaftesbury, being president. The number is now unlimited. To attempt the life of a privy councillor in the execution of his office was made capital, occasioned by Guiscard's stabbing Mr. Harley while the latter was examining him on a charge of high treason, 9 Anne, 1711.

"The Proceedings and Ordinances of the Privy Council of England from 10 Richard II. to 33 Hen VIII., edited by sir H. Nicolas, 7 vols.' were published by the record commissioners, 1834 7.

The "Acts of the Privy Council," edited by Mr. J. R. Dasent, beginning with 1542, Vols. I.—IX., issued in 1890 4; Vol XVI 1897.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—In lieu of the Court of Delegates, for appeals from the lord chancellors of Great Britain and of Ireland in cases of lunacy—from the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts of England, and the Vice-Admiralty courts abroad—from the Warden of the Stannaries, the courts of the Isle of Man, and other islands, and the Colonial courts, &c., fixed by statute 3 & 4 Will IV., c. 41, 1833, amended by other acts in 1844, 1851, 1852

JUDGES.—The lord president, lord chancellor, master of the rolls, vice-chancellor, lords justices in appeal, lord chief justice of the queen's bench and common pleas, lord chief baron, judges of the courts of bankruptcy, probate, and admiralty, and others appointed by the queen In consequence of the increase of business, and consequent delay, the Crown was empowered to appoint four new judicial members of the committee, by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 91 (21 Aug 1871) The attorney-general, sir R Collier, was made a judge of the Common Pleas, 7 Nov., and a member of the judicial committee 22 Nov 1871.

These proceedings were considered contrary to the spirit of the act by several judges and the legal profession generally A vote of censure on the Gladstone ministry was negatived in the house of lords (89-87), 15 Feb; in the commons (268-241), 19 Feb 1872

Other changes were made by an act passed in 1876.

The addition of judges from the colonies authorized by an act passed 6 July, 1895.

PRIVY SEAL, THE LORD, the fifth great officer of state, has the custody of the privy seal, which he must not put to any grant, without good warrant under the king's signet. This seal is used by the king to all charters, grants, and pardons, signed by him before they come to the great seal. Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester, held this office in the reign of Henry VIII previously to 1523, when Cuthbert Tunstall, bishop of London, was appointed. The privy seal has been on some occasions in commission.—Beatson. See under Liverpool, Canning, Wellington, and succeeding Administrations.

PRIZE-FIGHTING, see Boxing.

PRIZE MONEY, arising from captures made from the enemy, was decreed by government to be divided into eight equal parts, and distributed by order of ranks, 17 April, 1793. The distribution of army prize-money is regulated by an act passed in 1832. Naval prize-money is now regulated by royal proclamation; the last, 19 May, 1866.

PROBABILITY, THEORY OF (termed by Butler, "the guide of life", by Laplace, "good sense reduced to calculation"), was originated by Pascal, and taken up by Fermat, in their correspondence in 1654.

Its object is "the determination of the number of ways in which an event may happen or fail, in order that we may judge whether the chances of its happening or failing are greater"—Jevons

It has been treated upon by the most eminent mathematicians, viz, the Bernoullis, De Moivre, D'Alembert, Euler Lagrange, Laplace, and Quetelet

Isaac Todhunter's copious "History of Probability," published 1865

PROBATE COURT, established in Aug. 1857 by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, which abolished all powers exercised by the ecclesiastical courts in the granting of probates of wills, &c; see Prerogative Court. The first judge appointed, 5 Jan 1858, was sir Cresswell Cresswell, who took his seat on 12 Jan. On his death, sir James P. Wilde (aft. lord Penzance) was appointed judge, 28 Aug. 1863, see Supreme Court. The president of the probate, divorce, and admiralty division, sir James Hannen (1872), succeeded by sir Charles P Butt, Jan. 1891 (died 25 May, 1892); sir Francis Henry Jeune, 30 May, 1892, resigns 28 Jan. 1905; lord St Helier (died 9 March, 1905); sir Gorell Barnes, 1 Feb 1905. By the Judicature Act of 1873, the probate, divorce, and admiralty courts were constituted the 5th division of the Supreme Court. A probate and matrimonial division of the high court of justice of Ireland was established by Judicature act, 1877. Probate is the exhibiting and proving a will before the proper authority. The probate registry is now at Somerset House.

Probate duties partly transferred to relieve local taxation by Local Government Act, 1888—amount received 1887–8, 4,596,620*l*. The duty was superseded in 1894 by the "estate duty," which see.

PROCEDURE RULES, see under Parliament 1882 and 1888, 1890.

PROCESSIONS ACT, 13 Vict. c. 2, passed 12 March, 1850, prohibited party processions, with banners, &c. It was repealed in 1872. Processions of workmen and others, for demonstrations in Hyde Park, prohibited in the great thoroughfares of London, by the police, 31 May, 1890, and since.

PROCLAMATIONS, ROYAL, "have only a binding force when grounded upon and to enforce the laws of the realm."—Coke. Henry VIII., in 1539, declared that they were as valid as acts of parliament. This was annulled, 1547.

The lord-lieutenant of Ireland has power by proclamation to place districts under the provisions of the Criminal Law Procedure acts, 1881 and 1887, which districts are then said to be proclaimed.

PROCONSUL, a Roman consul, whose tenure of office was extended beyond his legal term. Q. Publilius was the first proconsul appointed during the war with Parthenope, 327 B.C. The name was afterwards given to governors of provinces.

PROCTOR (from procurator), an office in ecclesiastical courts, corresponding to that of an attorney or solicitor in courts of common law. It was abolished by the Judicature act, 1873. The persons chosen to represent the clergy in convocation are termed proctors The university proctors enforce discipline.

PROFILES. The first profile taken, as recorded, was that of Antigonus, who, having but one eye, his likeness was so taken, 330 B.C.—Ashe. "Until the end of the 3rd century, I have not seen a Roman emperor with a full face, they were always painted or appeared in profile, which gives us the view of a head in a very majestic manner."—Addison.

PROGRESISTAS, a political party in Spain, headed by Espartero, duke of Victory, and latterly by general Prim. Since 1865 they adopted a policy of inaction in public affairs, by uniting with the unionists and republicans in Sept. 1868, the government were overthrown, see Spain.

A party in Servia and also in Portugal are termed Progressists

In England, since 1888 et seq, the radical party in county councils, the school board, parish councils, and similar bodies have been termed PROGRESSIVES, and their opponents MODERATES.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION. The scheme propounded by Mr. Thomas Hare in 1857, in a pamphlet on "Representation," and perfected in his "Treatise on the Election of Representatives," published in 1859, which was well received by Mr. J. Stuart Mill. A society to introduce this principle was formed in Feb 1884. It included sir John Lubbock (president), Mr. Leonard H. Courtney, and many other M P.'s.

It proposed that "in all cases where an elector is entitled to one vote only, to enable the elector to nominate more than one candidate to whom, under certain circumstances, that vote might be transferred in the manner indicated by the elector." Negatived by the commons, 134—31, 3 March, 1885.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT. By an act passed 12 Aug. 1867, the crown was enabled to issue a proclamation for the prorogation of parliament during the recess.

PROSECUTOR. By the Prosecution of Offences act, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22 (3 July, 1879), the appointment of a director of public prosecutions with assistants was enacted, somewhat resembling officers in Scotland and Ireland. It came into operation 1 Jan. 1880. John Blossett Maule appointed director of public prosecutions, Dec. 1879; succeeded by sir Augustus Stephenson, 1884; succeeded by the hon. Hamilton Cuffe, now earl of Desart, Oct. 1894.

A committee reported the plan to be a failure, and recommended changes, June; act amended, 1884. 521 prosecutions; 451 convictions in 1893; 449 in 1900.

A public prosecutor, "procureur du roi," in France, is mentioned in the 14th century; replaced by "accusateur publique" (elected), 1791; by "commissaire national," 1793; "procureur" restored by Napoleon I.

PROTECTION OF LIFE AND PROPERTY ACT (for part of Ireland), passed 16 June, 1871; another, 3 March, 1881. See Ireland.

PROTECTIONISTS, that section of the conservative party which opposed the repeal of the corn laws, and which separated from sir Robert Peel in 1846. The name was derived from a "Society for the Protection of Agriculture," of which the duke of Richmond was chairman, and which had been established to counteract the efforts of the Anti-Corn Law League, 17 Feb. 1844. Lord George Bentinck was the head of the party from 1840 till his death, 21 Sept. 1848. The Derby administration not proposing the restoration of the corn-laws, the above society was dissolved, 7 Feb. 1853.—The protection of native manufactures has been maintained in the United States since 1868, and in France, Germany, Italy, and other countries. See France, March, 1887, England, 1903-5; United States, Oct. 1890. President Cleveland condemned protection, 4 March 1893: Mr. McKinley, a protectionist, elected president of U.S.N.A. 3 Nov. 1896. [He firmly refused to be styled king, as solicited by the parliament, Feb.-May, 1657.] Of Richard Cromwell began 3 Sept. 1658, and ended by his resignation, 25 May, 1659, see England.

PROTEIN, from the Greek (prōteion, principal), a chemical term introduced by Mulder about 1844, for the basis of albumen, fibrin, and casein.

PROTESTANT REFORMATION SOCIETY, established 1820; it employs missionaries and readers.

PROTESTANTS. The emperor Charles V. called a diet at Spires in 1529, to request aid from the German princes against the Turks, and to devise means for allaying the religious disputes which then raged owing to Luther's opposition to the Roman catholic clergy. Against a decree of this diet, to support the doctrines of the church of Rome, six Lutheran princes, with the deputies of thirteen imperial towns, formally and solemnly protested, 19 April, 1529. Hence the term protestants was given to the followers of Luther; it afterwards included Calvinists, and other sects separated from the see of Rome. The six protesting princes were. John, elector of Saxony; George, margrave of Brandenburg; Ernest and Francis, the dukes of Lunenburg; the landgrave of Hesse; and the prince of Anhalt; these were joined by the citizens of Strasburg, Nuremberg, Ulm, Constance, Heilbron, and seven other cities; see Lutheranism, Calvinism, Huguenots, Germany, Church of England, &c.

PROVENCE (the Roman Provincia), S. E. France, was made a kingdom by the emperor Lothaire for his son Charles. It afterwards became part of the kingdom of Arles as a feudal fief, and was re-united to the German empire in 1032 by Conrad II. On the fall of the Hohenstaufens it was acquired by Charles of Anjou, who married the heiress of the count in 1245, and became king of Naples, in 1268; and was held by his successors till its annexation to France by Charles VIII. in 1487.

PROVERBS. The book of Proverbs by Solomon is dated about 1000 B.C. The latter part was collected by order of Hezekiah, about 700 B.C. Ray's collection of English proverbs appeared in 1672, and Bohn's general collection in 1857. Martin F. Tupper's "Proverbial Philosophy" first appeared in 1839. Alfred Henderson's "Latin Proverbs," 1869. A society for the Revision of Proverbs existed in 1880.

PROXIES. Voting by proxy, an ancient privilege of the house of peers, was very frequently abused. In the reign of Charles II., when the duke of Buckingham sometimes brought 20 proxies in his pocket, it was ordered that no peer should bring more than two proxies. From 1830 to 1867, both inclusive, proxies were only called 73 times In conformity with the recommendation of a committee, a new "standing order" was adopted, 31 March, 1868, by which it was ordered "That the practice of calling for proxies on a division shall be discontinued."

PRUD'HOMMES, CONSEILS DE (from prudens homo, a prudent man), trade tribunals in France, composed of masters and workmen, were constituted to arbitrate on trade disputes in 1806 Similar bodies with this name existed as far back as 1452 at Marseilles, and at Lyons in 1464.

PRUSSIA. This country was anciently possessed by the Venedi. They were conquered by the Porussi, who inhabited the Riphæan mountains, and from these the country was called Borussia. The Porussi afterwards intermixed with the followers of the Teutonic knights, and latterly with the Poles. The constitution, established 31 Jan. 1850, was modified 30 April, 1851; 21 May, 5 June, 1852; 7 and 24 May, 1853: 10 June, 1854; 30 May, 1855; and 15 May, 1857. PUBLIC MEETINGS, for political purposes, were occasionally held in England in the latter part of the 17th century, but became very important in the reign of George III. The meetings in Devonshire in 1763 to protest against the Cider Tax, were very effective, and set an example speedily followed, with the warm approbation of Burke, Fox, and other statesmen. These meetings were prohibited by the Gagging acts, which see, passed in 1795; see Sedition. In the reign of George IV., the right of public meetings was fully assured, and they were very effectual in relation to the passing the Reform acts, the Repeal of the Corn Laws, and other important measures. See Hyde Park. The place on which the speakers stand is termed a "platform," corresponding to the Roman rostrum, and the French tribune. "The Platform," by Mr. H. Jephson, was published in 1792. The term "platform" is also applied to a set of political or religious opinions held by a party; such as the "platform of Geneva." Hooker.

PULTUSK (Russia), where a battle was fought between the Saxons, under their king Augustus, and the Swedes, under Charles XII., in which the former were signally defeated, 1 May, 1703. Here also the French under Napoleon fought the Russian and Prussian armies: both sides claimed the victory but it inclined in favour of the French, 26 Dec 1806.

PUMPS. Ctesibius of Alexandria is said to have invented pumps (with other hydraulic instruments), about 224 B.C., although the invention is ascribed to Danaus, at Lindus, 1485 B.C. Pumps were in general use in England, A.D. 1425. An inscription on the pump in front of the late Royal Exchange, London, stated that the well was sunk in 1282. The air-pump was invented by Otto Guericke in 1654, and improved by Boyle in 1657 see Air and Wells.

PUNCH, the puppet show, borrowed from the Italian Polichinello, is descended from a character well known in the theatres of ancient Rome. Fosbroke. The satirical weekly publication, Punch, or the London Charivari, was established by Henry Mayhew, Mark Lemon, Douglas Jerrold, Gilbert a' Beckett, and others: amongst its early contributors were Wm. M. Thackeray; Prof. E. Forbes, and other eminent writers; first published 17 July, 1841. Mark Lemon, the first editor, died 23 May, 1870; 2nd, Shirley Brooks, died 23 Feb. 1874; 3rd, Tom Taylor, died July, 1880; 4th, Francis Cowley Burnand, 1880-1906; 5th, Owen Seaman. Richard Doyle, who designed the wrapper, and was a frequent contributor, died 11 Dec. 1883; John Leech died 1864, and was succeeded by Mr. George Du Maurier, born in Paris, 6 March, 1834; died, 8 Oct. 1896. Mr. Percival Leigh, an early and long-continued contributor to Punch, died 24 Oct. 1889, aged 77. Charles Keene, artist, a contributor since 1850, died 4 Jan. 1891. Phil May, artist and clever caricaturist, died, aged 39, 5 Aug. 1903. John Tenniel, cartoonist, since 1851 (knt. 1893), resigns, Jan. 1901; succeeded by Linley Sambourne. Mr. Wm. Agnew, proprietor (bart. June, 1895). An interesting jubilee number of Punch was published 17 July, 1891. Mr. Wm. Hardwick Bradbury, born, 3 Dec. 1832, long printer of Punch, and of this volume, died, 13 Oct. 1892. "The history of Punch," by M. H. Spielmann, published autumn, 1895. Mr. Edwin James Milliken, contributor of the "'Arry papers," etc., died, aged 57, 26 Aug. 1897. "Punch's Holiday Book," edited by Mr. E. T. Reed, July, 1901. The king receives Mr. Burnand (knt. 26 June, 1902); accepts a copy of the Coronation number, 21 June, 1902. See Caricatures and Charivari.

PUNCTUATION. The Hebrew accents for punctuation are very ancient. The period (.) is the most ancient; the colon (:) was introduced about 1485; the comma (,) was first seen about 1521, and the semicolon (;) about 1570. In sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia" (1587), they all appear, as well as the note of interrogation (?), asterisk (*), and parentheses ( ).

PUNJAUB (N. W. Hindostan) was traversed by Alexander the Great, 327 B.C., by Tamerlane, A.D. 1398; by Mahmoud of Ghizni, about 1000. It was an independent state under Runjeet Singh, 1791-1839. Our wars with the Sikhs began here, 14 Dec. 1845, and were closed on 29 March, 1849, when the Punjaub was annexed; see India. The Punjaub has since greatly flourished, and on 1 Jan. 1859, was made a distinct presidency (to include the Sutlej states and the Delhi territory); see Durbar. The Sirhind canal (502 miles) opened by the viceroy, marquis of Ripon, 24 Nov. 1882. Local self-government bill passed 10 Oct 1883. Area, 97,209 sq. miles; population in 1881, 18,843,186; in 1891, 20,803,000; in 1901, 22,455,769. Capital, Lahore; population, 1901, 120,058.

[Dhuleep Singh (son of Runjeet Singh), born 1838, received a pension of 40,000*l*; he resided in England till 1886 when he sailed for India; in consequence of an indiscreet proclamation to the Sikhs he was stopped at Aden about 3 May, 1886. After his release he wandered about Europe; in May 1889 he married a European in Paris; his manifesto to the Sikhs, inciting them to rebellion, indignantly rejected with strong censure, Nov 1889. After severe illness, he expresses deep regret for his conduct, 27 July, and is pardoned by queen Victoria, 1 Aug. 1890; received by her at Grasse, 31 March, 1891; dies at Paris, 22 Oct. 1893.]

PURCHASE OF LAND, see under Land.

PURCHASE SYSTEM in the army. The payment of a present or gratuity for a commission was prohibited by William III., 1693; but in 1702 purchase was legally re-organised. In 1711 the sale of commissions was forbidden without the royal permission; in 1719-20 regulations were issued; and a fixed scale of prices was adopted in consequence of a commission in 1765. Large over-regulation payments continued to be paid. Commissions of inquiry were held frequently after 1858; and in 1871 the system was abolished, with compensation, by royal warrant, 20 July, 1871, the bill for the purpose having been rejected by the house of lords. For amounts paid, see under Army.

PURGATIVES of the mild species (aperients), particularly cassia, manna, and senna, are ascribed to Actuarius, a Greek physician, 1245.

PURGATORY, the middle place between heaven and hell, where, it is believed by the Roman catholics, the soul passes through the fire of purification before it enters the kingdom of God. The doctrine was known about 250; was introduced into the Roman church in the 5th century, and made a religious dogma by Gregory I., 590-604. It was first set forth by a council at Florence, 1439; enforced by the council of Trent, Dec. 1563; see Indulgences.

PURIFICATION, after childbirth, was ordained by the Jewish law, 1490 B.C. (Lev. xii.); see Churching. The feast of the purification was instituted, 542, in honour of the Virgin Mary's going to the temple. (Luke ii.) Pope Sergius I. ordered the procession with wax tapers, whence Candlemas-day.

PURITANS, the name first given, it is said, about 1564, to persons who aimed at greater purity of doctrine, holiness of living, and stricter discipline than others. They withdrew from the established church, professing to follow the word of God alone, and maintaining that the church retained many human inventions and popish superstitions; see Cathari, Nonconformists, and Presbyterianism.

PURLEY, see Diversions.

PURPLE, a mixed tinge of scarlet and blue, discovered at Tyre. It is said that Hercules Tyrius having observed his dog's lips to be stained, after eating a shell-fish named murex or purpura, was thereby led to invent the dye. Purple was anciently used by the princes and great men for their garments. It was restricted to the emperor by Justinian I. 532, and porphyrogenitus attached to the names of some emperors signifies "born to the purple."

PURVEYANCE, an ancient prerogative of the sovereigns of England of purchasing provisions,

&c., without the consent of the owners, led to much oppression. It was regulated by Magna Charta, 1215, and other statutes, and was only surrendered by Charles II. in 1660, for a compensation.

PUSEYISM, a name attached to the views of certain clergymen and lay members of the church of England, who proposed to restore the practice of the church of England to what they believed to be required by the language of her Liturgy and Rubrics, but which were considered by their opponents to be of a Romish tendency. The term was derived from the name of the professor of Hebrew at Oxford, Dr. Edwd. Pusey. The heads of houses of the university of Oxford passed resolutions censuring Dr. Pusey's attempts to renew practices which are now obsolete, 15 March, 1841; and his celebrated sermon was condemned by the same body, 30 May, 1843; he died 16 Sept. 1882; see Tractarians, and Ritualism.

PUTNEY, anciently Putilei and Putenheath, N.E. Surrey, on the Thames, opposite Fulham. A new granite bridge, founded by the prince of Wales (to replace the wooden one completed in 1729), 12 July, 1884. Opened by the prince, 29 May, 1886.

PYDNA (Macedon), where Perseus, the last king of Macedon, was defeated and made prisoner by the Romans, commanded by Æmilius Paulus, 22 June, 168 B.C.

PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT, about 75 in number, of various sizes, constructed for the preservation of mummies of the kings and their families.

The Stepped Pyramid of Sakkara is conjecturally assigned to Ouenephes of the first dynasty, see Egypt.
Three great pyramids are situated near Gizeh on the W bank of the Nile. The first or greatest, is said to have been erected as the tomb of Choofoo, fourth dynasty, the Cheops of Herodotus, dated by Brugsch, 3733-3666 B.C. Its height is said to have been originally 481 feet, and its base 774 square feet. The second pyramid is ascribed to Chafra, or Chephren, 3666-3633 B.C. The third pyramid is said to have been built by Menkaura or Mycerinus, 3633 B.C.
The pyramids have been visited and described by Belzoni, 1815; Vyse, 1836; C. Piazzi Smith, and others, see Egypt Exploration Fund.
Some of the eleven pyramids at Sakkara explored by M. Maspero, 1880 et seq.
At the battles of the Pyramids, Napoleon Bonaparte defeated the Mamelukes, and thereby conquered Lower Egypt, 13 and 21 July, 1798.

PYRENEES. After the battle of Vittoria (fought 21 June, 1813), Napoleon sent Soult to supersede Jourdan, with instructions to drive the allies across the Ebro; Soult retreated into France with a loss of more than 20,000 men, having been defeated by Wellington in a series of engagements from 25 July to 2 Aug. One at the Pyrenees on 28 July. A railway through the Pyrenees (from Bilbao to Miranda) was opened 21 Aug. 1862.—THE PEACE OF THE PYRENEES was concluded between France and Spain, by cardinal Mazarin, for the French king, and don Louis de Haro, on the part of Spain, in the island of Pheasants, on the Bidassoa. By this treaty Spain yielded Roussillon, Artois, and her right to Alsace; and France ceded her conquests in Catalonia, Italy, &c., and engaged not to assist Portugal, Nov. 1659.

PYROLETER, a mechanical and chemical apparatus for extinguishing fires, especially in ships, invented by Dr. Paton.

PYROMETER (fire-measurer), an apparatus employed to ascertain the temperature of furnaces &c., where thermometers cannot be employed. Muschenbroek's pyrometer (a metallic bar) was described by him in 1731. Improvements were made by Ellicott and others. Wedgwood employed clay cylinders, 1782-6. In 1830 professor Daniell received the Rumford medal for an excellent pyrometer made in 1821. Mr. Ericsson's pyrometer appeared in the Great Exhibition of 1851. (Eng Cyc.) Mr. (aft. sir) C. W. Siemens' electric pyrometer and those of Becquerel, and Le Châtelier are also in use.

PYROPHONE (Greek, pur, fire; phone, voice) a musical instrument, invented by M. Frédéric Kastner, of Paris. It consists of glass tubes of various lengths; the tones being produced by what are termed "singing flames." It is based upon the "chemical harmonicon." Keys are attached for playing, as in the piano. The invention was reported to the French Academy of Sciences, 17 March, 1873; exhibited at Vienna same year; and at the Society of Arts, 17 Feb. 1875. M. Kastner died aged 31, 6 April, 1882.

PYROXYLIN, the chemical name of Gun Cotton (which see).

PYRRHONISM, see Sceptics.

PYTHAGOREAN PHILOSOPHY. Pythagoras, of Samos, head of the Italic sect, flourished in the 6th century B.C. He is said to have taught the doctrine of metempsychosis, or transmigration of the soul from one body to another, forbidden his disciples to eat flesh and beans, invented the multiplication table, improved geometry, and taught the present system of astronomy.

PYTHIAN GAMES, in honour of Apollo, near the temple of Delphi, asserted to have been instituted by himself, in commemoration of his victory over the serpent, Python. Also said to have been established by Agamemnon, or Diomedes, or Amphictyon, or lastly, by the council of the Amphictyons, 1263 B.C. They lasted till 394.

PYX, the casket in which Catholic priests keep the consecrated wafer. In the ancient chapel of the pyx, at Westminster abbey, are deposited the standard pieces of gold and silver, under the joint custody of the lords of the treasury and the comptroller-general. The "trial of the pyx" signifies the verification by a jury of goldsmiths of the coins deposited in the pyx or chest by the master of the mint; this took place on 17 July, 1861, at the exchequer office, Old Palace-yard, in the presence of twelve privy councillors, twelve goldsmiths, and others, and on 15 Feb. 1870. This trial is said to have been ordered in the reign of Henry II., 1154-89; King James was present at one in 1611. The first annual trial of the pyx, appointed by the Coinage act of 1870, took place 18 July, 1871; new regulations issued, Feb. 1901.

Q.

QUACKERY, or medical imposture, is very ancient. Quack medicines were taxed in 1783 et seq. An inquest was held on the body of a young lady, Miss Cashin, whose physician, St. John Long, was afterwards tried for manslaughter, 21 Aug. 1830; he was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of 250*l.*, 30 Oct. following He was tried for manslaughter in the case of Mrs. Catherine Lloyd, and acquitted, 19 Feb. 1831. Dr. Vriès, "the black doctor," a professed cancer-curer, at Paris, was condemned to fifteen months' imprisonment as an impostor in Jan. 1860. Alabone v. Morton, see Trials, 8 July, 1893.

QUADRAGESIMA SUNDAY, first Sunday in Lent and 40th day before Good Friday, see Lent, and Quinquagesima.

QUADRANT, a mathematical instrument in the form of a quarter of a circle The solar quadrant was introduced about 290 B.C. The Arabian astronomers under the caliphs, in 995, had a quadrant of 21 feet 8 inches radius, and a sextant 59 feet 9 inches radius Davis's quadrant for measuring angles was produced about 1600, Hadley's quadrant about 1731, see Navigation.

QUADRILATERAL or QUADRANGLE, terms applied to four strong fortresses in N. Italy, long held by the Austrians, but surrendered to the Italians, Oct 1866;—Peschiera, on an island in the Mincio; Mantua on the Mincio; Verona and Legnago, both on the Adige; see Italy, Peschiera, &c.

The Turkish Quadrilateral was Shumla, Varna, Rustchuk, and Silistria, lost to the sultan by the treaty of Berlin, which established the autonomy of Bulgaria.

QUADRILLE, a dance (originally quadrille de contre danse, introduced into French ballets about 1745), in its present form became popular in France about 1804. It was introduced into this country about 1808 (Miss Berry), and promoted by the duke of Devonshire and others, in 1813. Rakes.

QUADRIVIUM, see Arts.

QUADRUPLE ALLIANCE. That between England, France, Austria and Holland (signed at London, 22 July, 1718), on the accession of the states of Holland, 8 Feb. 1719, guaranteed the succession of the reigning families of Great Britain and France, settled the partition of the Spanish monarchy, and led to war.

QUADRUPLE TREATY, concluded in London 22 April, 1834, by the representatives of Great Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal, guaranteed the possession of her throne to Isabella II., the young queen of Spain.

QUADRUPLEX TELEGRAPHY, see under Electricity.

QUÆSTORS (seekers). Two quæstores parricidii, public prosecutors, in cases of murder and other capital crimes, acted in Rome under the kings; two quæstores classici, who had the management of the public treasure; appointed about 484 B.C. The number of quæstors was raised from time to time, as circumstances demanded. Plebeians were first elected in 409 B.C. There were eight quæstors in 265. Sylla raised the number to twenty; Julius Cæsar to forty.

QUAKERS or SOCIETY OF FRIENDS, originally called Seekers, from their seeking the truth, and afterwards Friends (3 John, 14). Justice Bennet, of Derby, gave the society the name of Quakers in 1650, because George Fox (the founder) admonished him and those present to quake at the word of the Lord. This sect was commenced in England about 1646, by George Fox (then aged 22), who was joined by George Keith, William Penn, and Robert Barclay, of Ury, and others Fox rejected all religious ordinances, explained away the commands relative to baptism, &c., discarded the ordinary names of days and months, and used thee and thou for you, as more consonant with truth. He published a book of instructions for teachers and professors, and died 13 Jan. 1691. Sir H. Nicolas explains the Quaker calendar in his Chronology of History. The first meeting-house in London was in White Hart-court, Gracechurch-street. Headquarters of the Friends in England, Devonshire-house, 12, Bishopsgate-street Without, London, E.C. A numerous body of Friends called the Hicksites, from the name of their founder, Elias Hicks, exists in the United States, the Wilburite section in Pennsylvania are characterised by their adherence to the old-fashioned costume and mode of speech.

Their principles are contained in "Extracts of minutes" (from the beginning) published 1782; revised 1802, 1861, and 1883

The Quakers early suffered grievous persecutions. At Boston, U S, where the first Friends who arrived were females, they were cruelly scourged, and had their ears cut off, some put to death

In 1659 it was stated in parliament that 2000 Friends had endured sufferings and imprisonment in Newgate and 164 Friends offered themselves at this time, by name, to government, to be imprisoned in lieu of an equal number in danger (from confinement) of death. 1659

Fifty-five (out of 120 sentenced) were transported to America, by an order of council, 1664

The masters of vessels refusing to carry them for some months, an embargo was laid on West India ships, when a mercenary wretch was at length found for the service. The Friends would not walk on board, nor would the sailors hoist them into the vessel, and soldiers from the Tower were employed In 1665, the vessel sailed, but it was immediately captured by the Dutch, who liberated twenty-eight of the prisoners in Holland, the rest having died of the plague. Few reached America.

QUALIFICATION FOR OFFICE ABOLITION ACT, passed May, 1866, rendered it unnecessary to make and subscribe certain declarations.

QUARANTINE, the custom observed at Venice as early as 1127, whereby all merchants and others coming from the Levant were obliged to remain in the house of St. Lazarus, or the Lazaretto, forty days before they were admitted into the city. Various southern cities have now lazarettos; that of Venice is built in the water. In the times of plague, England and all other nations oblige those that come from the infected places to perform quarantine with their ships, &c., a longer or shorter time, as may be judged most safe. Quarantine acts were passed in 1753 and in 1825. The system was abolished in England by an act passed 1896, and the old quarantine men-of-war in the Solent were broken up. Quarantine established throughout Europe, in consequence of the bubonic plague at Bombay (which see), 16 Jan. 1897. By order of council, 10 Nov. 1866, foreign cattle were made subject to quarantine.

QUARRIES. An act was passed for their regulation in 1894. See Slate.

QUARTER SESSIONS established 25 Edw. III. 1350-1. Days of sitting appointed, 2 Hen. V. 1413. In 1830 it was enacted that quarter sessions of the peace should be held in the first whole weeks after 11 Oct., 28 Dec., 31 March, and 25 June. Further regulated, 1842, 1848, and 1858. Brewster Sessions are regulated by the Licensing Act 1902.

QUARTERLY REVIEW, the organ of the Tory party. The publication was proposed to Mr. George Canning, and his support solicited by Mr. John Murray, the publisher, in a letter dated 25 Sept. 1807, in opposition to the opinions of the Edinburgh Review. Mr. Murray was assisted by Walter Scott, Robert Southey, John Gibson Lockhart (editor 1825-53), J. W. Croker, and other eminent persons. It first appeared Feb. 1809, with William Gifford, the celebrated translator of "Juvenal" as editor. He died 31 Dec. 1826.

QUASI MODO, a name given to Low Sunday (the first Sunday after Easter) from the commencement of a hymn sung on that day.

QUATERNIONS, an important mathematical method or calculus, invented by Sir Wm. Rowan Hamilton, about 1843.

It is based upon the separation of multiplication from addition, and its fundamental idea is mental transference or motion by what he termed vectors. He attributed to addition motion from a point; to multiplication about a point. Four numbers are generally involved, hence the name quaternion. Hamilton's "Lectures on Quaternions," was published 1853: his "Elements," 1866. Other works by professors Kelland and Tait, published since.

QUATRE-BRAS (Belgium). Here on 16 June, 1815, two days before the battle of Waterloo, a battle was fought between the British and allied army under the duke of Brunswick, the prince of Orange, and sir Thomas Picton, and the French under marshal Ney. The British fought with remarkable intrepidity, notwithstanding their inferiority in number, and their fatigue through marching all the preceding night. The 42nd regiment (Royal Highlanders) suffered severely in pursuit of a French division by cuirassiers posted in ambush behind growing corn. The duke of Brunswick was killed.

QUENTIN, ST. (N. France). The duke of Savoy, with the army of Philip II of Spain, assisted by the English, defeated the French under the constable De Montmorency, at St. Quentin, 10 Aug. 1557. In fulfilment of a vow made before the engagement, the king built the monastery, palace, &c., the Escurial (which see). During the Franco-German war the army of the north, under Faidherbe, was defeated here by the Germans after seven hours' fighting, on 19 Jan. 1871; total loss about 15,000: the German loss about 3100.

QUERETARO (Mexico), was besieged and taken (through the treachery of Lopez) by the liberal general Escobedo, 15th May, 1867. The emperor Maximilian and his generals Miramon and Mejia, were taken prisoners, and after trial were shot 19 June following.

QUERN or HANDMILL, is probably the implement spoken of in Isaiah xlvii. 2, about 712 B.C. So-called Roman querns have been found in Yorkshire.

QUESNOY (N. France), was taken by the Austrians, 11 Sept. 1793, but was recovered by the French, 16 Aug. 1794. It surrendered to prince Frederick of the Netherlands, 29 June, 1815, after the battle of Waterloo.—It was here that cannon were first used, and called bombards. Hénault.

QUETTAH, see Beloochistan.

QUIBERON BAY (W. France). A British force landed here, Sept. 1746, but was repulsed. In the bay admiral Hawke gained a complete victory over the French admiral Conflans, and thus defeated the projected invasion of Great Britain, 20 Nov. 1759. Quiberon was taken by some French regiments in the pay of England, 3 July, 1795; but on 21 July, through treachery, the French republicans, under Hoche, retook it by surprise, and many emigrants were executed. About 900 of the troops, and nearly 1500 royalist inhabitants who had joined the regiments in the pay of Great Britain, effected their embarkation on board the ships.

QUICKSILVER, in its liquid state, mercury. Its use in refining silver was discovered, 1540. There are mines of it in various parts, the chief of which are at Almaden, in Spain, and at Idria, in Illyria; the latter, discovered by accident in 1497, for several years yielded 1200 tons. A mine was discovered at Ceylon in 1797; and at New Almaden and other places in California. Quicksilver was congealed in winter at St. Petersburg, in 1759. It was congealed in England by a chemical process, without snow or ice, by Mr. Walker, in 1787. Corrosive sublimate, a deadly poison, is a combination of mercury and chlorine; see Calomel.

QUICUNQUE VULT, see Athanasian Creed.

QUIETISM, the doctrine of Miguel Molinos, a Spaniard (1627-96), whose work, the "Spiritual Guide," published in 1675, was the foundation of a sect in France. He held that religion consisted in an internal silent meditation on the merits of Christ and the mercies of God. Madame de la Mothe-Guyon, a quietist, was imprisoned in the Bastille for her visions and prophecies, but released through the interest of Fénelon, archbishop of Cambray, between whom and Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, arose a controversy, 1697. Quietism was finally condemned by pope Innocent XII. in 1699. See Jansenists, Quakerism and Pietism.

QUILLS are said to have been first used for pens in 553; authorities say not before 635.

QUINCE, the Pyrus Cydonia, brought to this country from Austria, before 1573. The Japan quince, or Pyrus japonica, brought hither from Japan, 1796.

QUINDECEMVIRI, fifteen men, chosen to keep the Sybilline books. The number, originally two (duumviri), about 520 B.C., was increased to ten in 365 B.C., and afterwards (probably by Sylla) to fifteen, about 82 B.C. Julius Cæsar added one; but the precedent was not followed.

QUININE or QUINIA, an alkaloid (much used in medicine), discovered in 1820 by Pelletier and Caventou. It is a probable constituent of all genuine cinchona barks, especially of the yellow bark; see Jesuits' Bark. Artificial quinine was prepared (synthetically) by Mr. W. L. Scott, in Oct. 1865.—QUINOIDINE, see Fluorescence. John Eliot Howard, promoter of the cultivation of cinchona in India, and author of "Quinologia" (1862), died 22 Nov. 1883.

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY. The observation is said to have been appointed by Gregory the Great (pope, 590-604). The first Sunday in Lent having been termed Quadragesima, and the three weeks preceding having been appropriated to the gradual introduction of the Lent fast, the three Sundays of these weeks were called by names significant of their position in the calendar: and reckoning by decades (tenths), the Sunday preceding Quadragesima received its present name, Quinquagesima, the second Sexagesima, and the third Septuagesima.

QUINTILIANS, heretics in the 2nd century, the disciples of Montanus, who took their name from Quintilia, a lady whom he had deceived by his pretended sanctity, and whom they regarded as a prophetess. They made the eucharist of bread and cheese, and allowed women to be priests and bishops. Pardon.

QUIRINUS, a Sabine god, whose name was given to Romulus after his death. L. Papirius Cursor, general in the Roman army, first erected a sun-dial in the temple of Quirinus, from which time the days began to be divided into hours, 293 B.C. Aspin. The sun-dial was sometimes called the Quirinus, from the original place in which it was set up. Ashe. The Sabines who became Roman citizens were termed QUIRITES.

QUITO (capital of the republic of Equator), founded in 1534, was the scene of the measurement of a degree of the meridian, by the French and Spanish mathematicians, 1736-42. RACES, one of the ancient games of Greece. Horse-races were known in England in very early times. Fitz-Stephen, in the days of Henry II, mentions the delight taken by the citizens of London in the diversion. In James I.'s reign Croydon in the south, and Garterly in the north, were celebrated courses. Near York there were races, and the prize was a little golden bell, 1607. Camden. In the end of Charles I.'s reign, races were run at Hyde Park. Charles II. patronised them, and instead of bells, gave a silver bowl, or cup, value 100 guineas. William III. added to the plates (as did queen Anne), and founded an academy for riding.

RACK, an engine of torture, for extracting a confession from criminals, mentioned by Demosthenes, de Coronâ, B.C. 330, and in later times an instrument of the Inquisition. Lord Coke states from tradition that the duke of Exeter, in the reign of Henry VI., erected a rack of torture 1447 (thence called the duke of Exeter's daughter), now seen in the Tower. In the case of Felton, who murdered the duke of Buckingham, the judges of England protested against the proposal of the privy council to put the assassin to the rack, as contrary to the laws, 1628; the use of the rack was abolished 1640. See Ravaillac and Torture.

RACQUETS (Arabic ra'hat, "palm of the hand"). A game played in an open (now but seldom) or close court (60 ft. long, and 30 ft. wide and 40 ft. high, with high walls surrounding it, the floor being divided into two principal areas by the "short" line) with a bat resembling that used in tennis, and a small hard ball. 15 usually constitutes the game. Racquets first came into vogue during the early part of the 19th century, and Chas. Dickens refers to the game in "Pickwick" in connection with the Fleet prison, where insolvent debtors enlivened the monotony of their existence by playing this game against a single wall. In 1853, a racquet court was erected at Prince's Club, and since then courts have become common at the universities and public schools. On the sale of Prince's Club grounds in 1886, the Queen's Club, Kensington, became the headquarters of the game, and here the championship and the universities and public school matches take place. He died 1 Nov. 1714, leaving 40,000*l.* to the university of Oxford for the founding a library, the first stone of which was laid 17 May, 1737, and the edifice was opened 13 April, 1749 — The RADCLIFFE OBSERVATORY, Oxford, founded by the exertions of Dr. Hornsby, Savilian professor of astronomy, about 1771, was completed in 1794. The publication of the observations was commenced in 1842, by Mr. Manuel J. Johnson, the director, appointed in 1839. Radcliffe Infirmary opened in 1770; see Oxford, 1893.

RADIATION, see Heat.

RADICALS or "RADICAL REFORMERS," persons who professed to aim at procuring a thorough reformation in the government and policy of England, became prominent in 1816, when Hampden clubs were formed, of which sir Francis Burdett, lord Cochrane, major Cartwright, and William Cobbett were prominent members. Samuel Bamford's "Life of a Radical," published in 1842, gives much information; he died 13 April, 1872. Many radicals were severely punished, 1817-20. Wm. Harris's "History of the Radical Party," published early in 1885.—The "Radicals" in the United States were the party headed by Thaddeus Stevens, bitterly opposed to the policy of president Johnson, as too favourable to the subdued Southern States.

The Radical Programme, advocated by the rt. hon. Joseph Chamberlain, widely circulated, first appeared July 1885, in the Fortnightly Review; it included reform of the land laws, free education, increased local government, reform in taxation and finance, improvement of condition of agricultural labourers and of the poor, and religious equality and disestablishment of national churches.

Mr. C. C. Greville (Journal, 25 Aug. 1837) describes "Tory Radicals." Some politicians were so termed in 1885

RADIUM. This new and extremely rare metal is found in combination with chlorine and bromine, as radium chloride and radium bromide. It is obtained in very minute quantities from pitchblende after the metal uranium has been extracted. The principle of radio-activity was discovered by M. Becquerel, in Paris, in 1896, from the study of uranium, and Mme. Sklodowska Curie's investigation of this metal, when taking up the subject of radio-activity as the thesis for her doctorate degree, led to the discovery of radium. The discovery of the new metal was communicated by M. Curie to the Academy of Sciences, Paris, in March, 1903, and on 19 June of the same year M. Curie gave a demonstration of this new substance at the Royal Institution, London. Investigations of the properties and phenomena exhibited by radium have also been carried on by M. Becquerel, prof. E. Rutherford, sir William Ramsay, Mr. Soddy, prof. J. J. Thompson, sir William Crookes, and others. Radium possesses the extraordinary property of continually producing heat without combustion and spontaneously producing electricity, and maintains its own temperature, 1·5° Cent. above its surroundings. It gives off an emanation or gas which shines by its own light, resembling in appearance that of the glow-worm. This emanation, under the cold of liquid air, condenses and leaves behind a rare gas, helium, an element existing in the sun. It is supposed that radium is an element breaking up, and in its dissolution giving out energy. Three kinds of rays are continually in a state of radiation, and are known as the alpha, beta, and gamma rays. The alpha rays consist of atoms of matter, each 1 per cent. of the weight of a radium atom, projected with an enormous velocity, but these can be stopped by a thin sheet of metal; they are the projectiles which are rendered visible on a chemical screen, as the zinc sulphide in sir William Crookes' ingenious spintharioscope. The beta rays consist of flying or escaped electrons, atoms of atoms, many thousand times smaller than anything else known, and possess the power of penetrating most metals. The gamma rays, also very penetrating, are probably a variety of the X-rays. Radium has been detected in the deposit of the hot mineral waters of Bath and Buxton, pointing to its existence in considerable, but widely diffused, quantities in the interior of the earth. It is supposed that the element uranium is the parent of radium, and that lead is the last stage in the series of transformations. As a therapeutic agent, radium rays have been used in cases of cancer, lupus and other skin diseases, but with no very definite result; it appears, however, to have a bactericidal action in certain cases. Experiments made by M. Danysz, Feb. 1903 et seq., at the Pasteur Institute, on the action of radium on larvæ, demonstrated the power of the rays to suspend or modify functional developments. Experiments on various low forms of life have also been made by M. Bohn, at the biological laboratories of the Sorbonne, with remarkable results. M. and Mme. Curie, the discoverers of radium, were the recipients of various honours in recognition of their eminent services to scientific research. In 1905 prof. John B. Burke, of the Cavendish laboratory, Cambridge, by the exposure of a solution of gelatine to the action of bromide of radium, produced a thin pellicle, which gradually increased in depth; on microscopic examination it was found to be composed of corpuscles, to which the name of radiobes has been given. It has not, however, been proved that spontaneous generation has been produced by the action of radium. M. Curie was killed in a street accident in Paris in April, 1906.

RAFFAELLE WARE, see Pottery.

RAGGED SCHOOLS, free schools for outcast destitute ragged children, set up in large towns. The instruction is based on the scriptures. John Pounds, a cobbler, of Portsmouth, who died in 1839, opened a school of this kind; and one was set up by Andrew Walker, in "Devil's Acre," Westminster, in 1839. Knight. They did not receive their name till 1844, when the "Ragged school union" was formed, principally by Mr. S. Starey and Mr. Wm. Locke (afterwards hon. secretary). The earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. In 1856 there were 150 Ragged school institutions Sunday ragged schools reported in London in 1867, 226; in 1898, 231; day schools, in 1867, 204; in 1878, 58; week evening schools, in 1867, 207, in 1878, 147; 44 industrial schools in 1898. Ragged school buildings were exempted from rates, 1869. The day schools have now been superseded by those established by the school board and educational authorities; but the Sunday and night schools, mothers' meetings, &c., are still maintained in very great efficiency (1905). Dr. Guthrie, a founder of ragged schools in Edinburgh, &c., died 24 Feb. 1873. The earl of Shaftesbury, an ardent supporter of the movement, died 1 Oct. 1885. Jubilee celebrated, 20 April, 1894. Annual meetings; the union was styled Shaftesbury society in May, 1898; total members 127,087, 1902. Diamond jubilee held at Queen's-hall, princess Louise distributes prizes, 1 May, 1905. See Shoeblack.

RAGMAN ROLL (said to derive its name from Ragimunde, a papal legate in Scotland) contains the records of the homage and fealty to Edward I., sworn to by the nobility and clergy of Scotland at Berwick in 1296. The original was given up to Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, in 1328, when his son David was contracted in marriage to the princess Joanna of England.

RAGUSA, a city on the Adriatic, on the south confines of Dalmatia, was taken by the Venetians, 1171, but became an independent republic, 1358. It suffered much by an earthquake, 1667; was taken by the French in 1806, and given up to Austria in 1814.

RAILWAYS. Short roads, in and about Newcastle, laid down by Mr. Beaumont, so early as 1602, are thus mentioned in 1676:—"The manner of the carriage is by laying rails of timber from the colliery to the river, exactly straight and parallel; and bulky carts are made with four rollers fitting those rails, whereby the carriage is so easy that one horse will draw down four or five chaldron of coals, and is an immense benefit to the coal merchants." Roger North. They were made of iron at Whitehaven, in 1738. See Gauges, Tramroads. For electric railways see Electricity.

RAINBOW. Its theory was developed by Kepler in 1611, and by René Descartes in 1629; see Spectrum.

RAIN-FALL. Mr. G. J. Symons printed a table of rain-fall in Britain for 140 years, 1726-1865, in the reports of the British Association in 1866; and another table in 1883 for the years 1866—1880. The wettest year was 1852, being 38 per cent. above the average; but 1872 was 58 per cent. He began to publish his "Annual Rainfall in the British Isles" in 1866-95. In 1867 he published, "Rain: How, When, Where, Why, it is Measured." It contains an attempt at a rainfall table of the world. Mr. Symons died, aged 62, 10 March, 1900.

Rainfall observers in Britain for the tables, 168 in 1860; about 2000 in 1888; 3,506 stations in U.K. in 1902.

[The wettest year recorded at Camden-square, London, observatory since 1858 is that of 1903. During 46 years, in 6 complete years the annual rainfall exceeded 30 in., the wettest year in London previously to 1903 being that of 1878; of the British Isles, that of 1872.]

RAIN-GAUGE, an apparatus consisting primarily of a funnel-shaped receiver and a glass graduated measure of a much smaller size, measuring the amount of rain collected in tenths and hundredths of an inch. Those chiefly in use are Symons', the improved Glaisher's, Fleming's, and Jagga's.

RAJPUTANA, an administrative territory, N.W. India, embracing 20 native states and the British district of Ajmere-Merwara (27,11 sq. mi.; population, 460,722). Total area, 132,461 sq. mi.; population in 1881, 10,268,392; 1891, 12,089,330; 1901, 9,723,301 The Rajputs, the predominant race, are a proud aristocracy. At the time of the Mahometan invasions in the 11th century, the Rajputs ruled over half-a-dozen strong states. From the end of the 16th to the middle of the 18th century, these states acknowledged the supremacy of the Mogul emperor of Delhi; they were next subjected by the Mahrattas, but became independent when these were crushed by the British, 1817 et seq., with whom they eventually became allies. The Rana of Jhalawar accused of misgovernment, etc., was deprived of full powers in 1887, reinvested, 1894.

RALEIGH'S CONSPIRACY, termed the Main Plot (which see).

"RALLIED" to republicanism, a name assumed by a party at the general election in France, Aug. 1893.

RAM, that portion of the bow of a battleship which projects below the water-line in the form of a beak, and designed by its momentum when striking a hostile vessel to crush in its side. The latest battleships, such as H.M.S. Dreadnought, constructed end of 1905, are being built without rams. The ram was first used during the American civil war, when the federal frigate Cumberland was sunk by the confederate ram Virginia, 1862. During the Austro-Italian war the Austrian ironclad Ferdinand Max sunk the Italian ironclad Re d'Italia at the battle of Lissa, 1866. In the war between Chile and Peru, the Peruvian battleship Huascar sunk the Chilian corvette Esmeralda, 1879. Accidents by collision between battleships have occurred.—The Vanguard was rammed and sunk by the Iron Duke, 1875; the Grosser Kurfürst by the König Wilhelm, 1878 (280 of the crew of the former were drowned); the Victoria by the Camperdown; Adm. Tryon and 400 men perished, 1893.

RAMADÁN, otherwise Ramadhám, Ramazán, the ninth month of the Mahometan year, in which is kept a strict fast in memory of the first revelation to Mahomet; the fast is followed by the short festival Bairam (which see). The Mahometan year is lunar, consisting of 354 days 21 hours, and in about 33 years the Ramadán passes through all the seasons.

RÂMÂYANA, the older of the two great Sanskrit epic poems, is said to have been written by the poet Valmiki, 5th cent. B.C. Its hero is Rama, an incarnation of Vishnu, as the son of the king of Oudh. The Râmâyana consists of 24,000 verses, divided in 7 books. A translation in English verse by R. T. H. Griffiths in 5 vols., published 1870-75.

RAMBOUILLET, a royal château, about 25 miles from Paris. Here Francis I. died 31 March, 1547; and here Charles X. abdicated, 2 Aug. 1830. After being owned by the count of Thoulouse and the duc de Penthièvre, it was bought by Louis XVI. 1778.

RAMILLIES (Belgium), the site of a brilliant victory gained by the English under the duke of Marlborough and the allies over the French commanded by the elector of Bavaria and the marshal de Villeroy, on Whitsunday, 23 May (o.s. 12), 1706. The French were soon seized with a panic, and a general rout ensued: about 4000 of the allied army were slain in the engagement. This accelerated the fall of Louvain, Brussels, &c.

RAMSGATE, Kent, a fishing village in the 17th century, became important through commerce after 1689, and is now a popular summer resort. The erection of the pier began in 1750; the harbour was formed by George Smeaton, 1780-95, and the lighthouse erected soon after. Iron promenade pier, 1881; handsome Roman Catholic church, built by the Pugins, the elder of whom resided here; Jewish synagogue and college erected by sir Moses Montefiore, also a resident. Ramsgate incorporated as a borough 1884. Frith's "Ramsgate Sands" painted 1854. Population, 1881, 22,683; 1891, 24,676; 1901, 27,693.

RANELAGH (near Chelsea), a public garden for concerts and dancing, occupying the grounds of Ranelagh House (built by Jones, earl of Ranelagh, about 1691), was opened with a breakfast, 5 April, 1742. The music for the orchestra was frequently composed by Dr. Arne. The gardens were closed, and the buildings taken down, in 1804. A sports club of the same name near Barnes is now, 1905, a popular and select social resort.

RANGES ACT, 1891. See under Commons.

RANGOON, maritime capital of the Burmese empire, built by Alompra, 1753, was taken by sir A. Campbell on 11 May, 1824. In Dec. 1826, it was ceded to the Burmese on condition of the payment of a sum of money, the reception of a British resident at Ava, and freedom of commerce. Oppression of the British merchants led to the second Burmese war, 1852. Rangoon was taken by storm by general Godwin, 14 April, and annexed to the British dominions in December. An English bishopric founded, 1877. Destructive fire for two days about 18 April, 1884. Foundation stone of Cathedral laid by lord Dufferin, viceroy, 24 Feb. 1886. Population, 1891, 180,324; 1901, 232,326. Fighting between the Mahometans and Hindoos during a festival suppressed by government; many deaths, 23-25 June, 1893. Memorial of the officers who fell in the war, 1885-90, unveiled by the viceroy, the marquis of Lansdowne, 20 Nov. 1893. Mr. Macgregor, a merchant, bequeaths 75,000*l.* to the city, Jan. 1903. See Burmah.

RAVENNA (on the Adriatic), a city of the Papal states, founded by Greek colonists, fell under the Roman power about 234 B.C. It was favoured and embellished by the emperors, and Honorius made it the capital of the Empire of the West about A.D. 404. In 568 it became the capital of an exarchate. It was subdued by the Lombards in 752, and their king, Astolphus, in 754 surrendered it to Pepin, king of France, who gave it to the pope Stephen, and thus laid the foundation of the temporal power of the holy see. On the 11th of April, 1512, a battle was fought between the French, under Gaston de Foix (duke of Nemours and nephew of Louis XII.), and the Spanish and Papal armies. De Foix perished in the moment of his victory, and his death closed the good fortune of the French in Italy. Ravenna became part of the kingdom of Italy in 1860.

REAPING-MACHINES. One was invented in this country early in last century, but failed from its intricacies. At the meeting of the British association at Dundee, Sept. 1867, the rev. Patrick Bell stated that he invented a reaping-machine in 1826, which was used in 1827; the principle being that on which the best machines are now constructed. On 15 Jan. 1868, he was presented with a valuable testimonial, and 1000*l* in money. McCormick's American machine was invented about 1831, and perfected in 1846, he received a gold medal from the jurors of the exhibition of 1851; and also at the Royal Agricultural society's competition at Bristol, 6 Aug 1878. The sheaves are bound by these reaping machines. Hussey's machine, also American, exhibited in 1851, was highly commended.

John Ridley, the inventor of the reaping machine largely used in Australia, died 28 Nov. 1887.

REASON was decreed to be worshipped as a goddess by the French republicans, 10 Nov. 1793, and was personified by an actress.—Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason" was published in 1794-5; Immanuel Kant's "Critique of Pure Reason," ("Kritik der reinen Vernunft"), 1781.

REFORMATION, THE. Efforts for the reformation of the church may be traced to the reign of Charlemagne, when Paulinus, bishop of Aquileia, employed his voice and pen to accomplish it. The principal reformers were Wickliffe, Huss, Jerome of Prague, Savonarola, Erasmus, Luther, Zuinglius, Tyndal, Calvin, Melanchthon, Cranmer, Latimer, Knox, and Browne. Luther thus characterised himself and his fellow reformers. "Res non Verba—Luther." "Verba non Res—Erasmus" "Res et Verba—Melanchthon." "Nec Verba nec Res—Carlstadt," see Wickliffites, Protestants, Calvinists, Lutherans, Presbyterianism, Wittenberg, &c. REGATTA. A public boat race, introduced into this country from Venice in 1775: and in that year one took place on the Thames.

REGENCY BILLS. One was passed 1751. One was proposed to parliament in consequence of the mental illness of George III., and debated 10 Dec. 1788. It was relinquished on his majesty's recovery, 26 Feb. 1789. The return of the malady led to the prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) being sworn in before the privy council as regent of the kingdom, 5 Feb. 1811. The Regency Bill providing for the administration of the government, should the crown descend to the princess Victoria while under eighteen years of age, passed 1 Will. IV., 23 Dec. 1830 A Regency Bill appointing prince Albert regent in the event of the demise of the queen, should her next lineal successor be under age; passed 4 Aug. 1840.

REGENTS, see Protectorates.

REGENT'S CANAL, begun at Paddington, where it joins a cut to the Grand Junction, passes under Maida-hill, continues its course by the Regent's-park to Islington, where another subterranean excavation, about three-quarters of a mile in length, was formed for its passage. It then proceeds by Hoxton, Hackney, Mile-end, to Limehouse, where it joins the Thames. The whole length of it is nine miles; it comprises twelve locks and thirty-seven bridges. Begun, 1812; opened 1 Aug. 1820. Great explosion of gunpowder (which see), 2 Oct. 1874. New bridge, near Gloucester gate, Regent's park, opened by the duke of Cambridge, 3 Aug. 1878. Regent's Canal and City Railway Co. act passed, 1882.

REGENT'S PARK, originally part of the grounds belonging to a palace of queen Elizabeth, near to the north end of Tottenham court-road, pulled down in 1791. Since 1600, the property was let to various persons, but the leases having expired it reverted to the crown, and in 1814 great improvements were commenced under the direction of Mr. Nash. The park consists of about 450 acres; within it are the gardens of the Zoological Society and the Royal Botanical Society During a frost on 15 Jan. 1867, the rotten ice of one of the lakes gave way, and about 200 persons were immersed, of whom above 40 perished. Addition of 20 acres made to the public park, 1883.

Joseph Rumbold was murdered near York Gate, 24 May. Eight youths, George Gallesly, 17, William Elvis, 16, Francis Cole, 18, Peter Lee, 17, William Joseph Graefe, 17, William Henshaw, 16, Charles Henry Govier, 16, and Michael Duling, 15, all described as labourers, were charged with the wilful murder, 1 Aug.; Gallesly was convicted; the rest acquitted of murder, 2 Aug, they pleaded guilty to minor charges, and were sentenced to various terms of penal servitude, 4 Aug. The evidence disclosed the existence of local bands of young roughs carrying on internecine warfare. Joseph Rumbold was not the intended victim; Gallesly reprieved, Aug. 1888.

REGENT STREET, London, W.; designed and executed by John Nash; authorised by act, 53 George III. 1813. The colonnades of the quadrant were removed in 1848.

REGGIO, see Rhegium.

REGICIDES, in English history, are the commissioners appointed to try king Charles I., 150 in number; of whom 70 acted, and 59 signed the death-warrant, Jan. 1649. Of these last, 29 were tried, and 10 executed: Harrison, 13 Oct.; Cook and Peters, 16 Oct.; Scott, Scroop, Clement, and Jones, 17 Oct.; Axtell and Hacker, 19 Oct. 1660. They asserted themselves to be martyrs. Others were imprisoned. See Assassinations.

REGISTERS. The registering of deeds and conveyances disposing of real estates was appointed to be effected in Yorkshire and in Middlesex, 2 Anne, 1703, et seq. Greater security was thus given to purchasers and mortgagees, and the value of estates increased in those counties. Wills have been for a series of years kept and registered, in London, at Doctors' Commons; see Wills. The registering of shipping in the Thames was commenced, 1786; and throughout England, 1787; and several acts and amendments of acts have since followed for keeping and improving registers.

The duties and payments of the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland and his deputy were regulated by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 44	1879

REGISTERS, PAROCHIAL, were established by Cromwell, lord Essex, by which the dates of births, marriages, and burials, became ascertainable, Sept. 1538. This measure was opposed by the people, who feared some new taxation. A stamp-tax was laid on registers in 1784. Laws for their better regulation were enacted in 1813 et seq. The great Registration act (introduced by lord John Russell), 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 86, passed 17 Aug. 1836, see Bills of Mortality, &c

RELIGION. "The feeling of reverence whic men entertain towards a Supreme Being or to an order of beings conceived by them as demanding reverence for the possession of superhuman contro over the destinies of man or the powers of nature more especially the recognition of God as an objec of worship, love, and obedience." There ar numerous classifications of religions. Hegel dis tributes them into religions of nature, religions o spirituality, and the absolute or Christian religion Professor Tiele's classification includes nature religions and ethical religions; the former comprehending animism, polytheism, anthropomorphic polytheism, &c.; the latter comprehending Confucianism, Taoism, Brahminism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Judaism, and Christianity. The science of religion comprises the psychology, the history of religions, and comparative theology Hume may be said to have initiated the study of religion as a process of mind and the factors which condition and determine its development in his "Natural History of Religion," 1759. During the 19th century the study of comparative religions was taken up and has made great progress in Germany, France, and England by the investigations of philosophers and scholars like Von Hartmann, Pfleiderer, Reveille, Kuenen, Renouf, Max Müller, Herbert Spencer, D'Alviella, De la Saussaye, Tylor, Lubbock (lord Avebury), Rhys, Davids, Rawlinson, Lang, and others.

The following table gives the latest distribution and percentages of the leading religions of the world according to Dr. H. Zeller, director of the Stuttgart Statistical Bureau:—

RENAISSANCE, a term applied to the revival of the study of classic literature and art in the 15th and 16th centuries, under the patronage of the Medici and others; see Painters, and Sculptors. Mr. John A. Symonds' "History of the Renaissance in Italy," with supplements, 7 vols., published 1875-86. He was born 1840 and died 19 April, 1893. "The Renaissance," vol. i. of the Cambridge Modern History, published Jan. 1903.

RENDSBURG (Holstein), was taken by the imperialists in 1627; by the Swedes in 1643; and by the Prussians and confederate troops in 1848. The first diet of Schleswig and Holstein met here 3 April, 1848. It was re-occupied by the Danes in 1852, and taken by the Prussians after a serious conflict, 21 July, 1864.

RENNES (capital of Brittany, N. W. France). Here was established by Henry II., in 1553, the parliament so celebrated for its independence, especially in its struggle with the court, 1788-89. On 20 May, 1788, it declared infamous every one who should take part in the cour plenière then proposed, but afterwards suppressed. Here took place the re-trial of the Dreyfus case (which see) 1899. Population in 1901, 74,006.

RENTS said to have been first made payable in money, instead of in kind, about 1135. Numerous statutes have been enacted in various reigns to define the relations and regulate the dealings between landlord and tenant. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106 (1845) regulates leases. By the act 8 Anne, 1709, no goods are removable from tenements under an execution until the rent shall have been paid to the landlord by the sheriff, 1709. The rental of England, including land, houses, and mines, was 6,000,000*l.* about the year 1600, and twelve years' purchase the value of land. About 1690, the rental amounted to 14,000,000*l.*, and the land was worth eighteen years' purchase. Davenant on the Revenues. The rental of the United Kingdom was estimated during the nineteenth century at 127,000,000*l.*; Great anti-rent agitation in Ireland, 1879, et seq.; see Land, Ireland, and Irish Land Act, 1903.

REPEAL OF THE UNION, IRELAND. An Irish association was formed with this object under the auspices of Mr. O'Connell, in 1829. See Home Rule and Ireland.

A proclamation of the lord lieutenant prohibited the meetings of a society "leagued for the purpose of procuring a repeal of the union, under the name of the Irish Society for Legal and Legislative Relief, or the Anti-Union Society" . 18 Oct. 1830
The commons, by a majority of 484, reject Mr O'Connell's motion for repeal . 27 April, 1834
A new association in 1841, 1842, and 1843 became more violent. Assemblies of the lower classes of the people were held in the last-named year, in various parts of Ireland, some of them amounting to 150,000 persons, and called "monster meetings."
A meeting to be held at Clontarf, on 8 Oct., 1843, was prevented by government, and Mr O'Connell and his chief associates were brought to trial for political conspiracy, 15 Jan. 1844, and convicted 12 Feb., but the sentence was reversed by the house of lords, 4 Sept.; see Trials
The association for the repeal of the union continued for some time under the direction of Mr. John O'Connell, but was little regarded.
The total "repeal rent" is said to have amounted to 134,379*l*

REPORTING. The publication of the debates in parliament is forbidden as a breach of privilege, but was virtually conceded, after a severe struggle, in 1771 * Reporters' galleries were erected in the houses of parliament after the fire of 1834. To the unfettered liberty of reporting we doubtless owe much of our freedom and good government; see under Law. By the verdict for the defendant in the case of Wason v. The Times (for libel) reports of parliamentary debates were decided to be privileged, Nov. 1868. For the attempted exclusion of reporters, see Parliament, 1875. A commons committee on reporting recommend continuance of Hansard's debates with improvement, May, 1879.

The publication of Hansard's parliamentary debates began 1803 and closed in 1888. Latterly a subsidy was granted. The publication of the debates was taken up by Messrs. Macrae, Curtice & Co., Feb. 1889; and continued by the Hansard Publishing Union, limited, 1889; the Union ordered to be wound up, 13 May. See Trials, 1892-93.
Mr. Thomas Curson Hansard, formerly editor of the "debates," aged 78, dies . . 12 Nov. 1891
Reports of parliamentary debates now printed and published by private firms who tender for the work.

* Very inaccurate reports of parliamentary debates were inserted in the Gentleman's Magazine and other periodicals in the middle of the last century. Miller, printer of the London Evening Mail, was arrested in the city of London, by order of the house of commons, for publishing the debates, but was discharged by the lord mayor, who for doing this was sent to the Tower, where he remained until the end of the session. No opposition was made to the publication of the debates in the next session, 1772.

REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE ACT FOR ENGLAND, passed 15 Aug. 1867; for Ireland and Scotland, 13 July, 1868; a new act passed, 6 Dec. 1884. See Reform.

The Representative, a daily Tory paper, was started by Mr. John Murray, the bookseller, in opposition to the Times, in 1826. Although he was assisted by Mr. Benjamin Disraeli and other eminent persons, the project was unsuccessful; the first number appeared 25 Jan., the last . 29 July, 1826

REPUBLICANS, see Democrats. The name adopted by the Northern party in the United States, N.A., opposed to the democrats in the South. It is stated that the first delegate-nominating convention in the United States that adopted the name Republican party, was held in Strong, Franklin county, Maine, 7 Aug. 1854. Sir Charles Dilke, M.P. professed himself a republican at public meetings and was much applauded, Nov. 1871, but at some places his appearance led to riotous proceedings. His motion for returns respecting the expenditure of the civil list by queen Victoria was negatived in the house of commons (2—276), 19 March, 1872. A national republican conference of delegates was held at Sheffield, 1 Dec. 1872, when a national flag was adopted.

REREDOS, the screen or decorated portion of the wall behind the altar in a church.

A highly sculptured reredos, designed by sir G. G. Scott, was erected in Exeter cathedral, by subscription . . 1873

Prebendary Philpotts the chancellor, and others who objected, brought their objections before the bishop's visitation court, on 7 Jan., it was decided that the bishop had jurisdiction in the matter, and he ordered the reredos to be removed, 15 April, 1874. Dean Boyd appealed to the court of arches, and sir R. Phillimore reversed the previous decision . . 6 Aug. 1874

Prebendary Philpotts appealed to the judicial committee of the privy council, who decided that the reredos should remain . 24 Feb. 1875

The magnificent reredos set up in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, was protested against as idolatrous by some of the London clergy, April, 1888. An action against the dean having been stopped by the bishop, the queen's bench division ordered the bishop to withdraw his veto upon the prosecution, 1 June, 1889. After further litigation, the house of lords sustained the bishop's veto . . . . . 20 July, 1891

RESERVE FORCES. In the summer of 1859, acts were passed to provide for the establishment of a military reserve force of men who had been in the service (not to exceed 20,000), and a volunteer reserve force of seamen not to exceed 30,000. These acts were consolidated and amended in 1867, 1882 and 1896. The reserve forces called out by proclamation, on account of possible war with Russia, 2 April, 1878. About 35,000 good soldiers appeared, and were commended. They were disbanded 31 Aug. 1878. Again called out on account of war in Egypt. 25 July, 1882, and prospect of war with Russia, 27 March, 1885. * Revised in relation to army, navy, and India.

The weekly instead of the quarterly publication of the public revenue and expenditure was begun by Mr Robert Lowe, the chancellor of the exchequer, 16 Feb 1870. By an act passed 31 July, 1868, revenue officers are permitted to vote for the election of members of parliament.

Above 100 statutes relating to inland revenue fell into disuse 1 Jan 1871.

The revenue friendly societies, and national debt act, 45 & 46 Vict., c. 72, passed 18 Aug. 1882 New revenue act passed, 1884.

REVEREND, an honorary appellation given to the clergy, since the middle of the 17th century.

In Tamworth parish register the minister is first styled "reverend," in 1657, occasionally afterwards; but regularly so after 1727. It first appears in the registry of All Hallows, Barking . 1732

The prefix on a family tombstone was refused to Mr. Keet, a Wesleyan preacher, by the bishop of Lincoln, but given by the archbishop of Canterbury 1874

On trial, Mr. Walter G. F Phillimore, the chancellor of Lincoln, decided against Mr Keet, who gave notice of appeal, 3 June. Sir R. Phillimore gave a similar decision in the court of arches, 31 July, 1875

On appeal to the privy council these decisions were reversed It was decided that there is no law or usage restricting the epithet to ministers of the Church of England, it is merely laudatory 21 Jan. 1876

REVIEWS. The Journal des Scavans, published on 5 Jan. 1665, by Denis de Salo, under the name of Hédouville, was the parent of critical journals. It was soon imitated throughout Europe, and was itself translated into various languages. George III. spoke of this publication to Dr. Johnson, in the private interview with which he was honoured by his majesty, in the library of the queen's house, in Feb. 1767. Boswell. The Bibliothèque Anglaise came out in 1716-27; the Revue Britannique, founded 1825, ceased Dec. 1901. REVISING BARRISTERS' COURTS, to examine the lists of voters for members of parliament, were instituted by the Reform Act of 1832.

REVISION, see under Bible. Advocates of the revision of the French constitution, chiefly Bonapartists or Jeromists, termed Revisionists, Feb. 1884.

REVIVALS on the subject of religion arose in the United States in 1857. In the autumn of 1859, they began in Scotland, the north of Ireland (particularly Belfast), and England. Many meetings were held for prayers and preaching throughout the week, as well as on Sundays. The "twelve days' mission," a series of revival services, took place in many London churches during advent, 1869.

Mr Moody, preacher (born 1837, died 22 Dec. 1899), and Mr Sankey, singer, American Revivalists, visited many towns in the United Kingdom, 1874-5. Their meetings in London began at the Agricultural-hall, 9 March, about 15,000 present; at the Queen's theatre, Haymarket, 12 April-31 May, farewell meeting, 12 July, 1875. Moody and Sankey again in London, 6 Oct 1881; 3 Nov. 1883-23 June, 1884. Revival in Wales, chiefly the result of the preaching of Evan Roberts, a young miner of N Wales; decrease of crime and drunkenness reported as an outcome of the movement, which spread throughout Wales in 1904-5. The Torrey-Alexander mission opened at the Albert-hall, London, 4 Feb., and at Brixton, 8 April, 1905. See Salvation Army.

REVOLUTIONARY TRIBUNAL, established at Paris, Aug. 1792.

Up to 27 July, 1794, when Robespierre was deposed, it had put to death 2774 persons, including queen Marie Antoinette, the princess Elizabeth, and a large number of nobility and gentry, male and female. The oldest victim was counsellor Dupin, aged 97; the youngest, Charles Dubost, aged 14. From 27 July to 15 Dec. 1794, only Robespierre and his accomplices (about 100) suffered by it.

Among the results of the Revolution of 1688 in Great Britain, were the toleration act, the establishment of the presbyterian kirk of Scotland, the power of granting supplies limited to the house of commons, the purification of the administration of justice, and unlicensed printing.

REVOLVERS, see Pistols.

REVUE DES DEUX MONDES, the French literary and historical periodical published on the 1st and 15th of each month, first appeared in 1831. It includes among its contributors the most eminent writers in France.

REYNARD THE FOX, "Reineke Fuchs," a satirical epic in low German, in which beasts are actors and speakers, was first printed as Reineke Vos, at Lubeck in 1498, and professes to be written by Hinreck van Alkmer. It has been frequently translated. Goethe's version in High (or literary) German hexameters appeared in 1794. Jacob Grimm has shown that the subject-matter of this "Thier-sage" or "beast-fable" is very ancient, many incidents being found in Pilpay and other oriental writers. The early French had a "Roman de Renart," and "Renart le Nouvel." A poem, entitled "der Reinaert," in Flemish, was known in the 11th century; Caxton's translation in English prose was printed 1481; a poetic English translation of Goethe's version, by T. J. Arnold, appeared in 1855.

RHÆTIA (or Rætia), an ancient Alpine country, comprising the modern Grisons, Tyrol, and part of Lombardy, inhabited by a wild rapacious people, after a long struggle was conquered by Drusus and Tiberius, B.C. 15.

RHÉ, Isle of, see Ré and Rochelle.

RHEA, see China Grass.

RHEGIUM (now Reggio), S. Italy, a Greek colony, flourished in the 5th century, B.C. It was held by the Campanian legion, 281-271, afterwards severely punished for its rebellion. Reggio was taken by Garibaldi, Aug. 1860.

RHEIMS (N. France). The principal church here, built before 406, rebuilt in the 12th century, is now very beautiful. The corpse of St. Remy, the archbishop, is preserved behind the high altar, in a magnificent shrine. The kings of France were crowned at Rheims; probably because Clovis, the founder of the French monarchy, when converted from paganism, was baptized in the cathedral in 496; the only kings not crowned here down to 1825, were Henry IV., Napoleon I., and Louis XVIII. Several ecclesiastical councils have been held here. The city was taken and retaken several times in the last months of the French war, 1814. University founded by cardinal Lorraine, 1547, suppressed about 1790. Strike of the workmen of Mr. Jonathan Holden, mill owner, a great benefactor to the town, May, 1890. Population, 1891, 104,186; 1901, 107,773.

RHETORIC. Rhetorical points and accents were invented by Aristophanes of Byzantium, 200 B.C. Rhetoric was first taught in Latin at Rome by Photius Gallus, about 87 B.C. He taught Cicero, who said "We are first to consider what is to be said; secondly, how; thirdly, in what words; and lastly, how it is to be ornamented." A regius professor of rhetoric was appointed in Edinburgh, 20 April, 1762, when Dr. Blair became first professor.

RHINE (Latin, Rhenus; German, Rhein; French, Rhin), a river, about 760 miles long, rising in Switzerland, receiving the Moselle, Main, Meuse, Neckar, and other rivers, terminating in many arms in Holland, and falling into the German ocean. On its banks are Constance, Basel, Strasbourg, Spires, Mannheim, Cologne, Dusseldorf, Utrecht, and Leyden. The possession of the banks of the Rhine has been the cause of many wars, and it was crossed by the French above twenty times in a century. In the beginning of the revolutionary war, Custine invaded Germany by crossing it in 1792; and at the close of the war in 1815, France retained the left bank, but lost it at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, 1870-1 (which see). A navigation treaty with other powers was signed by France, 17 Oct. 1868. A central committee for the navigation exists, formed by members for Alsace, Lorraine, Baden, Bavaria, Hesse, Holland, and Prussia. Very great damage (about 4,000,000*l.*) and loss of life, caused by the rising of the river through excessive rain, end of November and December, 1882; relieved by government grants.

Becker's German song "They shall not have it, the free German Rhine;" and Alfred de Musset's reply, in French, "We have had it, your German Rhine," appeared in 1841. Max Schneckenburger, author of "The Watch on the Rhine," died 1851. All were popular during the war, 1870-71.

RHODE ISLAND (N. America), settled by Roger Williams about 1636, was taken in the war of independence by the British, 8 Dec. 1776; but was evacuated by them, 25 Oct. 1779. Capitals, Providence and Newport. Population in 1880, 276,531; 1890, 345,506; 1900, 428,556; see United States.

RHODES, an island on the coast of Asia Minor, is said to have been peopled from Crete, as early as 916 B.C. The Rhodians were great navigators, and institutors of a maritime code afterwards adopted by the Romans. The city was built about 408 and flourished 300-200 B.C.; see Colossus. Rhodes, long an ally of the Romans, was taken by the emperor Vespasian, A.D. 71. It was held by the Knights Hospitallers from 1309 to 1522, when it was conquered by the Turks, who still retain it. The knights retired to Malta (which see). Rhodes suffered severely by an earthquake on 22 April, 1863.

RHODESIA, the name given (1895) to the territories subject to the S. Africa company (after the rt. hon. Cecil Rhodes, "the great empire builder") born at Bishop's Stortford, 5 July, 1853; (died 26 March, 1902), comprising an area of 750,000 sq. miles; chief towns, Bulawayo (capital of Matabeleland) and Salisbury. Rhodesia is divided into two parts: Northern Rhodesia, first opened to British influence by the late Dr. Livingstone, subdivided into North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia (called also Barotseland) and still occupied by native tribes living under their own chiefs. The headquarters of the administrator of N.-E. Rhodesia are at Fort Jameson, and of the administrator of N.-W. Rhodesia at Kalomo. Southern Rhodesia is governed by an executive council, composed of the administrator of S. Rhodesia and 4 members appointed by the British South Africa company, with the approval of the secretary of state for the colonies, and by a legislative council consisting of the administrator, the resident commissioner, and 14 other members, 7 of whom are appointed by the British S. Africa co. and 7 elected by the registered voters of Mashonaland and Matabeleland. The seat of government is at Salisbury, the capital of Mashonaland. Native affairs are administered, under the administrator, by a chief native commissioner in each province. About 1900 miles of railway are now (1905) open for traffic. Population (white) of S. Rhodesia, census 1904, 12,596, native, enumerated, 1905, 594,590. Revenue, 1905 (31 March), 453,173*l.*; expenditure, 590,139*l.* See Zambesi and Mashonaland, 1894.

RICHMOND (Surrey), anciently called Sheen, which in the Saxon tongue signifies resplendent. Here stood a palace in which Edward I and II. resided, and Edward III. died, 1377. Here also died Anne, queen of Richard II., 1394. The palace was repaired by Henry V, who founded three religious houses near it. In 1497 it was destroyed by fire; but Henry VII rebuilt it, and commanded that the village should be called Richmond, he having borne the title of earl of Richmond (Yorkshire) before he obtained the crown, and here he died in 1509. Queen Elizabeth was a prisoner in this palace for a short time during the reign of her sister. When she became queen it was one of her favourite places of residence, and here she died 24 March, 1603. It was afterwards the residence of Henry, prince of Wales. The beautiful park and gardens were enclosed by Charles I. 1,914 acres now open to the public. The observatory was built by sir W. Chambers in 1769. In Richmond, Thomson "sang the Seasons and their change;" and died 27 Aug. 1748.

RIGHTS, BILL OF. To the PETITION OF RIGHTS, preferred 17 March, 1627-8, Charles I. answered, "I will that right be done according to the laws and customs of the realm." Both houses addressed the king for a fuller answer to their petition of rights, whereupon he gave them an answer less evasive, "Soit droit fait comme il est désiré," 7 June, 1628. The petition thus became a statute 13 Car. I c. 1. An important declaration was made by the lords and commons of England to the prince and princess of Orange on 13 Feb. 1689, in an act "declaring the rights and liberties of the subject, and settling the succession of the crown." The Bill of Rights, virtually the same as the declaration, was passed by parliament. It totally abolished the dispensing power of the crown, Oct. 1689. See Claim of Right.

RIPON (Yorkshire), an ancient town. About 661 an abbey cell was built here by Eata. Ripon was made a bishopric by archbishop Wilfred, in 690, but did not endure so. It suffered much by the ravages of the Danes, the Normans (1069), and the Scots (1319 and 1323). The present see was erected 5 Oct. 1836, out of the archdeaconry of York in the West Riding. Income 4,200*l.* The cathedral was restored by sir G. G. Scott: the choir was reopened 27 Jan. 1869. The thousandth anniversary of its incorporation was celebrated 25-27 Aug. 1886. Population, 1881, 7,390; 1891, 7,512; 1901, 8,225.

RITCHIE'S ACT, see under Local Government.

RITUALISTS, a name given in 1866 to a party in the church of England, formerly termed Puseyites, who, by giving a more imposing character to public worship, by the use of coloured vestments, lighted candles, incense, &c., desired to revert to the practices of the church as set forth in the first prayer-book of Edward VI., and, as they contend, following the use of the early Christian church. An ecclesiastical exhibition was held during the church congress at York in Oct. 1866, but was not officially connected with it. The practices of the ritualists were censured in several episcopal charges in Dec. 1866; in two reports of the ritualistic commission, 19 Aug. 1867, and April, 1868, and by the judicial committee of the privy council on appeal, 23 Dec. 1868. See Church of England and Trials, 1867-9. At a general convocation of the American episcopal church at Philadelphia, 27, 28 Oct. 1868, after a warm discussion on ritualism, the discussion was adjourned. It was renewed at the convocation 10 Oct. 1874, and the ritualists were defeated by the evangelical party, a stringent canon on ceremonies being passed 27 Oct. The "Public Worship Regulation Act" was passed 7 Aug. 1874, for the repression of ritualism in England. Clerical declaration on ritual, see Times, 13 July, 1903. See Public Worship and Church of England 1903 et seq.

Royal commission "to inquire into the alleged breaches or neglect of the law relating to the conduct of divine service in the church of England, and to the ornaments and fittings of churches; and to consider the existing powers and procedure applicable to such irregularities, and to make such recommendations as may be deemed requisite for dealing with the aforesaid matters," rt. hon. sir M. RIVOLI (near Verona, N. Italy). Near here the Austrians defeated the French, 17 Nov. 1796; and were defeated by Bonaparte 14, 15 Jan. 1797. Massena was made duke of Rivoli for his share in the actions.

ROAD CLUB, established in the autumn of 1874 in London, by gentlemen interested in the revival of coaching.

ROAD MURDER. On the night of 29-30 June, 1860, Francis Savile Kent, four years old, was murdered, and his body hid in a garden water-closet at Road. His step-sister Constance Kent (aged sixteen), and the nurse Elizabeth Gough (the first suspected), were discharged for want of evidence. The coroner was severely blamed for charging the jury improperly, but the court of queen's bench, in Jan. 1861, refused to issue a writ for a new inquiry. Constance Kent, on 25 April, 1865, before sir Thomas Henry at Bow-street, and at her trial at Salisbury, on 21 July following, confessed herself to be guilty of the murder. Her punishment was commuted to penal servitude for life. Let out on ticket-of-leave, 18 July, 1885. Road is near Frome, Somerset.

ROADS, see Roman Roads. The first general repair of the highways of this country was directed about 1285. Acts were passed for the purpose in 1524 and 1555, followed by others in Elizabeth's and succeeding reigns. Roads through the Highlands of Scotland were begun by general Wade in 1726. Loudon M'Adam's roads were introduced about 1818. Wooden pavements were tried with partial success in the streets of London: at Whitehall in 1839, and in other streets in 1840; asphalte pavement soon after; wood paving came into general use in the latter part of the 19th century. An act "for the better management of the highways" was passed in 1862 after much opposition; another, 16 Aug. 1878; also regulated the use of locomotives on roads; whilst another in 1903 regulated the speed of motor cars. Steam road-rollers were tried in 1867; used in London 18 March, 1868: see Macadamising, Tolls, and Wooden Pavements. Committee on Highways appointed, 18 March, 1903, report issued, 29 Sept. 1903. Royal commission on London traffic, sir D. M. Barbour, chairman, appointed Feb. 1903; first report issued, July, 1905. Number of vehicles passing the Bank between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. stated to be 27,523.

ROANOAKE, an island off N. Carolina, U.S., discovered by sir Walter Raleigh, 1584, and settled by him, 1585, without success. Other settlers also failed.

ROASTING ALIVE. An early instance is that of Bocchoris, king of Egypt, by order of Sabacon of Ethiopia, 737 B.C. Lenglet. Sir John Oldcastle, lord Cobham, was thus put to death in 1418, and Michael Servetus for heresy at Geneva, 27 Oct. 1553; see Burning Alive, and Martyrs.

ROBBERS were punished with death by Edmund I.'s laws, which directed that the eldest robber should be hanged. Remarkable robbers in England were Robin Hood, 1189 (see Robin Hood), and Claud Du Val, "executed at Tyburn," says an historian quaintly, "to the great grief of the women," Jan. 1670. In Ireland, the famous Mac-Cabe was hanged at Naas, 19 Aug. 1691. Galloping Hogan, the rapparee, flourished at this period. Freney, the celebrated highwayman, surrendered himself, 10 May, 1749. The accomplished Barrington was transported, 22 Sept. 1790. See Trials.

ROBIN HOOD, captain of a band of robbers, in Sherwood forest, Nottinghamshire; traditionally reported to have been the earl of Huntingdon, disgraced and banished the court by Richard I. at his accession (1189). Robin Hood and Little John and their band are said to have continued their depredations till 1247, when Robin died. Stow. Lord Tennyson's drama, "The Foresters; Robin Hood and Maid Marian," first represented at New York on account of the American copyright law, end of March, 1892.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE," by Daniel De Foe; the first part appeared in 1719. See Juan Fernandez. Three old ladies, Mary Ann, Jane Amelia, and Sarah Frances De Foe, lineally descended from De Foe, pensioned by queen Victoria, May, 1877.

ROBURITE, a German explosive invented by Dr. Carl Roth, reported 1888.

ROCHDALE, Lancashire. A charter was obtained for a market by Edmund de Lacy, 1241, and the grammar school was founded 1564. Rochdale canal was opened 1804. The new town was commenced in 1805. Rochdale first sent a member to parliament in 1832. The woollen manufacture was carried on in the 16th century. The first cotton mill was erected in 1795. Theatre royal and opera house, built in 1867, destroyed by fire, 27 Jan. 1894. Population, 1881, 68,866; 1891, 71,458; 1901, 83,112.

ROCHEFORT (W. France), a seaport on the Charente. The port was made by Louis XIV. in 1666. In Aix-roads or Basque-roads, near Rochefort, capt. lord Cochrane attacked the French fleet and destroyed four ships, 11-12 April, 1809. Near Rochefort, the emperor Napoleon I. surrendered himself to capt. Maitland of the Bellerophon, 15 July, 1815.

ROCHELLE (W. France), a seaport on the Atlantic, belonging to the English for some time, but finally surrendered to the French leader, Du Guesclin, in 1372. As a stronghold of the Calvinist party, it was vainly besieged by the duke of Anjou in 1573; and was taken after a siege of thirteen months by cardinal Richelieu in 1628. The duke of Buckingham was sent with a fleet and army to relieve it; but the citizens declined to admit him. He attacked the isle of Rhé, near Rochelle, and failed, 22 July, 1627. He was repulsed 8 Nov. following. A conspiracy here in 1822 caused loss of life to sergeant Bories and others.

New harbour opened by president Carnot, 19 Aug. 1890

ROCHESTER, in Kent, the Roman Durobrivæ. The bishopric, founded by Augustin, 604, is the next in age to Canterbury. The first cathedral was erected by Ethelbert, king of Kent. St. Justus was bishop in 604. Alterations were made in the diocese in 1845, 1867, and 1905. Rochester is valued in the king's books at 358*l.* 3*s.* 4½*d.* per annum. Present income 3,800*l.* The cathedral reopened after repairs of the choir, 11 June, 1875; west front and towers restored, 25 July, 1894. The old castle and grounds were purchased for the public by the Corporation, 1883. The "ten churches fund" begun by the bishop, 1884. St. Bartholomew's hospital, founded by Gundulf for lepers, 1078, was refounded as a general hospital, 1859; near to it is an ancient Norman church. Watts' charity house, founded 1579 to lodge "six poor travellers, not being rogues or proctors," has been immortalised by Chas. Dickens. The Guildhall dates from 1687. Among other ancient buildings are Restoration house, where Charles II. slept in 1660; Satis house, the residence (1905) of the present bishop; the Cathedral grammar school, Henry VIII., and Eastgate house (see infra). James II. embarked at Rochester in his flight from England, 1688. Made a municipal borough by Henry II. Near to Rochester is Gadshill, formerly the residence of Chas. Dickens, who in "Edwin Drood," "Pickwick," and some of his other novels introduces Rochester. Since 1885, Rochester has returned one member to parliament instead of two Population, 1881, 21,307; 1891, 26,309; 1901, 30,622.

ROCHESTER, N. York, capital of Monroe county, 360 miles by rail N.W. of New York city, is situated on the Genesee river, which has here three perpendicular falls The city contains a state industrial school, a Roman catholic cathedral and numerous churches, a university, founded 1850, various hospitals, asylums, and libraries. A stone aqueduct, 850 feet in length, conveys the Erie canal across the river. Rochester is a port of entry, and carries on flour-milling and many other industries. It was settled in 1810, and incorporated, 1834.

Great fire in the business section of the city, estimated damage, 1,000,000*l* to 1,400,000*l*. 26 Feb. 1904

ROCKETS, destructive war implements, were invented by sir William Congreve about 1803. The carcase-rockets were first used at Boulogne, 8 Oct. 1806, when they set the town on fire, their powers being previously demonstrated in the presence of Mr. Pitt and several of the cabinet ministers, 1806. Improved rockets were made by Hales in 1846. Boxer's life-saving rope-carrying rocket, for communicating with stranded vessels, described in 1878. See Wrecks, March, 1892.

RODNEY'S VICTORIES. Admiral Rodney fought, near Cape St. Vincent, the Spanish admiral, Don Langara, whom he defeated and made prisoner, capturing six of his ships, one of which blew up, 16, 17 Jan. 1780. On 12 April, 1782, he encountered the French fleet in the West Indies, commanded by the count de Grasse, took five ships of the line, and sent the French admiral prisoner to England: Rodney was raised to the peerage, June, 1782.

ROGATION WEEK. Rogation Sunday, the Sunday before Ascension-day, received its title from the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday following it, called Rogation days, derived from the Latin rogare, to beseech. Extraordinary prayers and supplications for these three days are said to have been appointed in the third century, as a preparation for the devout observance of our Saviour's ascension on the next day succeeding to them, denominated Holy Thursday or Ascension-day. The whole week in which these days happen is styled Rogation week; and in some parts it is still known by the other names of Crop week, Grass week, and Procession week. The perambulations of parishes have usually been made in this week.

ROHAN, an illustrious family, descended from the ancient sovereigns of Brittany. Henri de Rohan, son-in-law of the great Sully, after the death of Henri IV. (14 May, 1610), became head of the Protestant party, and sustained three wars against Louis XIII. He eventually entered the service of the duke of Saxe-Weimar, and died of wounds received in battle in 1638. Of this family was the cardinal de Rohan; see Diamond Necklace.

ROHILCUND, a tract of country, N.E. India, was conquered by the Rohillas, an Afghan tribe, who settled here about 1747. After aiding the sovereign of Oude to overcome the Mahrattas, they were treated with much treachery by him, and nearly exterminated. Rohilcund was ceded to the British in 1801. After the great mutiny, Rohilcund was tranquillised in July, 1858.

ROLLS' CHAPEL (London), founded by Henry III., about 1233, for receiving Jewish rabbis converted to Christianity. On the banishment of the Jews in 1290 the buildings then called the Rolls, and the chapel, were annexed by patent to the office of the keeper or master of the rolls of chancery, from which circumstance they took their name. A number of public records from the time of Richard III., kept in presses in this chapel, have been removed to the Record Office (which see). The Rolls chapel was pulled down in July, 1892.

ROMAGNA, a province of the papal states, comprised in the legations of Bologna, Ferrara, Forli and Ravenna. It was conquered by the Lombards; but taken from them by Pepin, and given to the pope, 753. Cæsar Borgia held it as a duchy in 1501, but lost it in 1503. In 1859 the Romagna threw off the temporal authority of the pope, and declared itself subject to the king of Sardinia, who accepted it in March, 1860. It now forms part of the province of Emilia, in the new kingdom of Italy. Population, 1890, 1,218,392. See Rome.

ROMAN LAW, see Codes; ROMAN LITERATURE, see Latin.

ROMAN ROADS IN ENGLAND. Our historians maintain, but are mistaken, that there were but four of these roads. Camden. "The Romans," says Isidore, "made roads almost all over the world, to leave their marches in a straight line, and to employ the people;" and criminals were frequently condemned to work at such roads, as we learn from Suetonius, in his life of Caligula. They were commenced and completed at various periods, between the 2nd and 4th centuries, and the Roman soldiery were employed in making them, that inactivity might not give them an opportunity to raise disturbances. Bede.

1st, WATLING-STREET, so named from Vitellianus, who is supposed to have directed it, the Britons calling him in their language Gwetalin (from Kent to Cardigan Bay).
2nd, IKNIELD, or IKENILD-STREET, from its beginning among the Iceni (from St. David's to Tynemouth).
3rd, FOSSE, or FOSSE WAY, probably from its having been defended by a fosse on both sides (from Cornwall to Lincoln).
4th, ERMIN-STREET, from Irmansul, a German word, meaning Mercury, whom our German ancestors worshipped under that name (from St. David's to Southampton).

ROMAN WALLS. One was erected by Agricola (79 to 85) to defend Britain from the incursions of the Picts and Scots; the first wall extended from the Tyne to the Solway firth (80 miles); the second from the firth of Forth, near Edinburgh, to the firth of Clyde, near Dumbarton (36 miles). The former was renewed and strengthened by the emperor Adrian (121), and by Septimius Severus (208). It commenced at Bowness, near Carlisle, and ended at Wallsend near Newcastle. It had battlements and towers to contain soldiers. The more northern wall was renewed by Lollius Urbicus, in the reign of Antoninus Pius, about 140. Many remains of these walls still exist, particularly of the southern one; Dr J. C. Bruce's "Roman Wall," published 1853-1868.

ROMANCE, originally a composition in the Romance or Provençal idiom. The term in the middle ages was extended to narrative poetry in general. Heliodorus, a bishop of Tricca, in Thessaly, about 398, was the author of Æthiopica (relating to the loves of Theagenes and Charicleia), the first work in this species of writing. The first part of the "Roman de la Rose" was written by Guillaume de Lorres (1226-70); the second, a separate poem, by Jean de Meung (1285-1314), the Decameron of Boccaccio was published, 1358; Don Quixote, by Cervantes, 1605; Gil Blas, by Le Sage, 1715. Dunlop's "History of Fiction," published 1814. See English Language; "Reynard the Fox."

ROME. The foundation of the city, by Romulus, was laid on the 20th April,* according to Varro, in the year 3961 of the Julian period (753 years before the birth of Christ, and in the fourth year of the sixth Olympiad. Other dates given. Cato, 751; Polybius, 750; Fabius Pictor, 747; Cincius, 728 B.C.). The Romans conquered nearly the whole of the then known world. In the time of Julius Cæsar, the empire was bounded by the Euphrates, Taurus, and Armenia on the east; by Æthiopia on the south; by the Danube on the north, and by the Atlantic on the west. Numerous ecclesiastical councils have been held at Rome, from 197 to the present time. Population, 1872, about 240,000; 1881, 300,467; 1890, 423,217; 1901, 463,000; 1905, 500,000. Chiefly through the exertions of Mr. John Henry Parker of Oxford, the Roman exploration fund was established, for the preservation of ancient architectural remains. His "Archæology of Rome" (with many photographs) published, 1874-8. Professor J. H. Middleton's works on "Ancient Rome," published 1885, 1888, and 1892. The Italian government votes 1200*l.* a year for a similar purpose. The early history of Rome is legendary, and the dates purely conjectural. It has been greatly elucidated by the researches of B. G. Niebuhr, whose Roman history was published 1811 and 1827-30, and still further by Dr. Mommsen in his history of Rome, 1854 (died 1 Nov. 1903), and later by Ihne, Ranke, Bury, Shuckburg, Dyer, Villari, &c.

* In its original state, Rome was but a small castle on the summit of mount Palatine; and the founder, to give his followers the appearance of a nation or a barbarian horde, was obliged to erect a standard as a common asylum for criminals, debtors, or murderers, who fled from their native country to avoid the punishment which attended them. From such an assemblage a numerous body was soon collected, and before the death of the founder, the Romans had covered with their habitations the Palatine, Capitoline, Aventine, and Esquiline hills, with Mounts Cœlius and Quirinalis.

ROMILLY'S ACT, Sir Samuel, 52 Geo. III., c. 101 (1812) relates to charities.

The Romilly society, founded for the improvement of the criminal law, reform of prison regulations, abolition of cruel punishments, &c, inaugurated Essex hall, London, Lord Justice Vaughan Williams in the chair, 1 May, 1898, annual meetings.

RONCESVALLES (in the Pyrenees), where, it is said, Charlemagne's paladin, Roland or Orlando, was surprised, defeated and slain by the Gascons, 778. On 25 July, 1813, marshal Soult was defeated here by the British entering France.

RONDO, a short piece of music having one prominent subject to which returns are made; many composed by Beethoven, Chopin, and others.

RÖNTGEN RAYS, see Surgery, 1896. Prof. W. C. Rontgen while experimenting with a Crooke's vacuum tube, electrically excited, and enveloped in a black covering, observed that some rays proceeding from the tube passed through the black paper and affected a fluorescent screen at a distance of two yards, 8 Oct. 1895. See Vacuum.

The continued researches proved that many substances opaque to ordinary light were transparent to these rays, as flesh, wood, &c.; the shadows of such objects thrown on a screen can be photographed; the interior of a dead monkey was photographed with great distinctness, Lancet, March, 1896.

The movements of the bones in living animals were exhibited by these rays by means of a cinematograph, in 1897 et seq. These rays have the power of discharging electrified bodies.

The rays are much utilised in surgery; 416 cases at St. Thomas's hospital were reported in 1897; very successful in military surgery in 1898 et seq.

The Röntgen society founded, prof. Silvanus P. Thompson, president, June; first meeting in London, 5 Nov. 1897 (see Radiographs).

Experiments by dr. Heineke in Leipsig show röntgen rays exert a harmful effect on the internal organs of the body, reported, 9 Dec. 1903.

N-rays, "a supposed novel series of radiations, whose properties comprise ability to pass through aluminium, wood, and other substances, and the brightening of an electric spark while being non-fluorescent and without photographic action," stated to be discovered by prof. Blondlot, of Nancy, in the course of his researches on rontgen rays; the prix Leconte of 150,000 francs awarded to prof. Blondlot for his discovery by the Academy of Sciences, 1904

Existence of N-rays not generally accepted by English scientists; prof. Blondlot claims to have made over one hundred experiments, establishing their identity, 1905.

ROOF. The largest in the world was said to be that over a riding school at Moscow, erected in 1791, being 235 feet in span. The roof of the London (St. Pancras) station of the Midland railway, in Euston-road, London, N.W., is 240 feet wide, 690 feet long, 125 feet high. The extent of ground covered is about 165,000 square feet.

ROPE-MAKING MACHINE. One was patented by Richard March in 1784, and by Edmd. Cartwright, in 1792. Many improvements since.

ROQUE, see Croquet.

RORKE'S DRIFT, boundary of British territory of Natal, in South Africa and Zululand. Behind extemporised defences a handful of British soldiers, under lieuts. Chard and Bromhead, here successfully resisted a large Zulu army, and probably saved the colony, 22 Jan. 1879. See Zululand.

ROSAMOND'S BOWER. Rosamond was daughter of lord Clifford, and mistress of Henry II about 1154. A conspiracy against her was formed by the queen, prince Henry, and the king's other sons. Henry kept her in a labyrinth at Woodstock, where his queen, Eleanor, it is said, discovered her apartments by the clue of a silk thread, and poisoned her. Buried at Godstow church, from whence Hugh, bishop of Lincoln, had her ashes removed, 1191.

ROSARY, see Beads.

In a brief of pope Pius IX., 30 Sept 1852, it was asserted that 40 repetitions in a rosary of 40 beads of "Sweet Heart of Mary, be my salvation!" will obtain a large number of days of indulgence for souls in purgatory (23,300 days calculated).

ROSAS (N. E. Spain), Bay of, where a brilliant naval action was fought by the boats of the Tigre, Cumberland, Volontaire, Apollo, Topaze, Philomel, Scout, and Tuscan, led by lieut. John Tailour (of the Tigre), which ended in the capture or destruction of eleven armed vessels in the bay, 1 Nov. 1809; for which purpose lord Collingwood had organised the expedition commanded by capt. Hallowell. Rosas was gallantly defended by lord Cochrane, 27 Nov.; but surrendered, 4 Dec. 1809.

ROSBACH (Rosebecque), Flanders. Here Charles VI. of France beat the Flemings, who had revolted against their count, 27 Nov. 1382.—At Rosbach, in Prussia, a great battle was fought between the Prussians, commanded by Frederick the Great, and the combined army of French and Austrians, in which the latter were defeated with severe loss, 5 Nov. 1757.

"ROSCIUS, INFANT," Wm. Henry West Betty, born 13 Sept. 1791. After acting at Belfast, 16 Aug. 1803, and at other places, with much applause, he appeared at Covent-garden, 1 Dec. 1803, as Selim, in "Barbarossa," and is said to have gained in his first season, 17,210*l*.

After several years' retirement, he re-appeared, but soon after left the stage, not being successful. He retired on the fortune he had amassed, and died Aug. 1874

Mr. Thos. Henry Betty, his son, died, aged 77 bequeathing large sums to form eventually the "Betty's Fund for poor actors and actresses," and to the Royal Theatrical fund, &c. 7 Feb. 1897

ROSE, see under Flowers. The rose, a symbol of silence, gave rise to the phrase sub rosâ, "under the rose;" said, by Italian writers, to have risen from the circumstance of the pope's presenting consecrated roses, which were placed over the confessionals at Rome, to denote secrecy, 1526. The pope sent a golden rose to the queen of Spain, which was given to her with much solemnity, 8 Feb. 1868. A "national rose society" opened its first annual show, St. James's hall, 4 July, 1877; shows held annually at the Crystal palace.

The League of the Rose, under the patronage of the Comtesse de Paris, formed to promote the restoration of the monarchy in France, autumn 1888.

ROSEBERY ADMINISTRATION succeeded the fourth of Mr. W. E. Gladstone, who resigned 3 March, 1894; the ministry resigned in consequence of a minority on a vote of supply (132—125), virtually a vote of censure on the secretary of state for war (Mr. Campbell-Bannerman), who immediately resigned, 21 June. 1895.

ROSE'S ACT, 33 Geo. III. c. 54 (1793) brought benefit societies under the control of government.

ROSES, WARS OF THE, between the Lancastrians (who chose the red rose as their emblem) and the Yorkists (who chose the white rose), 1455-1485. It is stated that in the Wars of the Roses there perished 12 princes of the blood, 200 nobles, and 100,000 gentry and common people. The union of the roses was effected in the marriage of Henry VII. with the princess Elizabeth, daughter of Edward IV. 1486.

Richard II., who succeeded his grandfather Edward III in 1377, was deposed and succeeded in 1399 by his cousin Henry IV (son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, the fourth son of Edward III.), in prejudice to the right of Roger Mortimer (grandson of Lionel, duke of Clarence, Edward's third son), who was declared presumptive heir to the throne in . . 1385

Roger's grandson, Richard duke of York, first openly claimed the crown in 1449

Attempts at compromise failed, and the war began in 1455

The Lancastrians were defeated at St. Albans, the protector Somerset was slain, a truce was made, and Richard was declared successor to Henry VI 23 May, "

The war was renewed, and the Yorkists defeated the Lancastrians at Blore heath . 23 Sept. 1459

The Yorkists eventually dispersed, and the duke was attainted.

He defeated his opponents at Northampton, took Henry prisoner, and was declared heir to the crown, but fell into an ambuscade near Wakefield, and was put to death . . 31 Dec. 1460

His son (Edward) continued the struggle, was installed as king . . . . 4 March, 1461

Defeated the Lancastrians at Towton . 29 March, "

Was deposed by Warwick, who restored Henry VI Sept. 1470

Edward defeated the Lancastrians at Barnet, 14 April, and finally at Tewkesbury . 4 May, 1471

The struggle ended with the defeat and death of Richard III at Bosworth . . 22 Aug. 1485

ROSETTA (in Egypt), taken by the French in 1798; and by the British and Turks, 19 April, 1801. The Turks repulsed the British here, 22 April, 1807. Near Rosetta was fought the battle of the Nile, 1 Aug. 1798; see Nile. Mehemet Ali rendered great service to his country by constructing a canal between Rosetta and Alexandria.

The Rosetta Stone, discovered by the French in 1799, was brought from Rosetta in a French vessel, from whence it was taken by Mr Wm. R. Hamilton, who deposited it in the British Museum In 1841, Mr Letronne published the text and a translation of the Greek inscription. It is a piece of black basalt, about 3 ft. long and 2½ ft. wide, with an inscription in three languages, viz., hieroglyphics, modified hieroglyphics (demotic or enchorial), and Greek, setting forth the praises of Ptolemy Epiphanes (about 196 B.C.). It was studied by Dr. T. Young and especially by J F Champollion, whose works were published 1814-1845. Champollion's method was adopted by Rosellini, and extended by Lepsius, Bunsen, Birch, Brugsch, and others. Champollion discovered that the hieroglyphs represented sounds by an initial letter, and after studying the "Ritual of the dead," published a grammar and dictionary.

ROSICRUCIANS, a sect of mystical philosophers who appeared in Germany in the 14th century. It is asserted that their founder was a noble German monk named Christian Rosencreutz, born 1378, who travelled in Arabia, Egypt, Africa, and Spain; returned to Germany and founded the fraternity of the Rosy Cross, and died aged 102. The Fama Fraternitatis and the Confessio Rosæ Crucis, 1615, the latter attributed to Johann Valentin Andreas and others, are important works. They swore fidelity, promised secrecy, and wrote hieroglyphically, and affirmed that the ancient philosophers of Egypt, the Chaldeans, Magi of Persia, and Gymnosophists of the Indies, taught the same doctrine.

Mr. Arthur E. Waite's elaborate work "The Real History of the Rosicrucians" published in 1887.

ROSS, Cork (S. Ireland), a bishopric founded, it is supposed, by St. Fachnan, in the beginning of the 6th century. It was united to Cork in 1340, and Cloyne to both, by the Irish Church Temporalities act (1833); see Bishops; New Ross.

ROSTRUM (plural rostra), a beak, the name given to the prows of ships, which were affixed to the front of the platform (hence termed rostra), erected between the comitium and the forum in Rome, whence the tribunes addressed the people. The custom is said to have begun with the ships of Antium, taken during the Latin war, which ended 33 B.C.

ROTA CLUB, a society who met at Miles's Coffee-house in New Palace-yard, Westminster, during the administration of Oliver Cromwell; their plan was that all the great officers of state should be chosen by ballot: and that a certain number of members of parliament should be changed annually by rotation, from whence they took their title. Sir William Petty was one of the members in 1659. Biog. Brit.

ROTHESAY, capital of the Isle of Bute. The ruined castle, founded about 1098, was repaired by the marquis of Bute, 1871-77. After 1398, the eldest son of the Scottish sovereign was styled duke of Rothesay. The Glenburn hydropathic establishment destroyed by fire, estimated loss, 45,000*l*., 10 July, 1891. Population, 1881, 8,329; 1891, 9,034; 1901, 9,383.

ROTHSCHILD FAMILY. Meyer Amschel, or Anselm, was born at No. 148, Judengasse (Jew-lane), Frankfort, in 1743. In 1772 he began business as a money-lender and dealer in old coins, in the same house, over which he placed the sign of the red shield (in German, Roth Schild). Having had dealings with the landgrave of Hesse, that prince entrusted him with his treasure (said to have been 250,000*l*.) in 1806, when the French held his country. With this sum as capital, Anselm traded and made a large fortune, and restored the 250,000*l*. to the landgrave in 1815. At his death his sons continued the business as partners. His son, Nathan, began at Manchester in 1798, removed to London in 1803; and died immensely rich, 28 July, 1836. The baron, James, head of the family, died at Paris, 15 Nov. 1868.

Sir Nathaniel de Rothschild, son of Lionel, created a peer; takes his seat, 9 July, 1885.

Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, head of the Paris firm of Rothschild Bros, dies, aged 78, 26 May, 1905.
Baron Nathaniel Rothschild, head of the Vienna branch of the family, dies, aged 68, 13 June, 1905.

ROTTERDAM, the second city in Holland. Its importance dates from the 13th century. The commerce of Antwerp was transferred to it in 1509. In 1572, Rotterdam was taken by the Spaniards by stratagem, and cruelly treated. It suffered much from the French revolutionary wars, and from inundations in 1775 and 1825. Desiderius Erasmus was born here in 1467. The museum and picture-gallery of Rotterdam were destroyed at the fire of the Schieland palace, 16 Feb. 1864. Strike of dock labourers about 27 Sept.-14 Oct. 1889. Population, 1887, 193,658; 1890, 209,136; 1900, 332,185. See Danube, 1890 et seq.

ROUEN (N. France), an archbishopric, 260, became the capital of Normandy in the 10th century. It was held by the English kings till 1204; and was retaken by Henry V, 19 Jan. 1419. Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans, was burnt here, 30 May, 1431. It was taken by Charles VII. of France in 1449, and by the duke of Guise from the Huguenots, Oct. 1562 and 1591. Rouen, after slight conflicts, 4, 5 Dec. 1870, surrendered to general Von Göben, 6 Dec. It was ordered to pay a contribution of 17,000,000 francs. Population, 1886, 107,163; 1891, 109,541; 1901, 115,914.

ROUND. A species of musical canon in regular rhythm. Ancient rounds for six voices were composed in Italy, and introduced into England by the earl of Essex, about 1510. The first printed collection appeared in 1609. Warren's collection published 1763-94. Round, Catch, and Canon club founded in 1843.

ROUND-HEADS. In the civil war which began in 1642, the adherents of Charles I. were called Cavaliers, and the friends of the parliament Round-heads. The term, it is said, arose from those persons who had a round bowl or dish put upon their heads, and their hair cut to the edge of the bowl; see Cavaliers.

ROUNDWAY DOWN (near Devizes, Wiltshire). Here the royalists defeated the parliamentarians with great slaughter, 13 July, 1643.

ROVEREDO (Austrian Tyrol) was held by the Venetians from 1416 till 1609, when it was acquired by Austria. It was taken by Bonaparte and the French, 4 Sept. 1796, after a brilliant victory.

ROWING, see Boat Races.

On 16 Oct. 1873, Mr. Reginald Herbert undertook to row on the Thames, from Maidenhead to Westminster bridge (47 miles 3 furlongs), in twelve hours, for 100*l*. He did it in 10h. 21m. 19 sec.

ROWLAND HILL MEMORIAL FUND. See Mansion House. Mr. W. D. Keyworth was chosen to make a bust of sir Rowland Hill for Westminster abbey, March, 1881. A benevolent fund for the widows and orphans of postmen established 1882. A statue of him at the Royal Exchange uncovered by the prince of Wales, 17 June, 1882.

ROWTON HOUSES, buildings erected to afford respectable unmarried working-men cheap comfortable lodgings, with some of the advantages of the west-end clubs. The first in Bond-street, Vauxhall, was erected by lord Rowton, at a cost of 30,000*l*., to accommodate 470 persons; opened by his niece, Miss Berta Corry, 15 Dec. 1892. Lord Rowton died, aged 65, 9 Nov. 1903.

The scheme proved very successful; a company was started in March, 1894, the first directors being lord Rowton, chairman; Mr. R. E. Farrant, the hon. C. Ashley and Mr. Walter Long. A second Rowton house was erected in Calthorpe-street, King's-cross-road. The building contains 677 cubicles, with good beds and large dining-room, &c., May, 1896; a third house still larger (804 cubicles), opened at Newington Butts, 23 Dec. 1897; a fourth (800 cubicles) opened, Hammersmith-road, 30 Nov. 1899; a fifth, in Fieldgate-st., Whitechapel (816 cubicles), opened, 11 Aug. 1902; a sixth, the largest, at Camdentown (1,103 cubicles), completed, Dec. 1905.

ROXBURGHE CLUB was instituted in 1812 by earl Spencer, for the republication of rare books, or unpublished MSS., in memory of John duke of Roxburghe. See under Ballads.

ROYAL ACADEMY. A society of artists met in St. Peter's-court, St. Martin's-lane, about 1739, which Hogarth established as the society of Incorporated Artists, who held their first exhibition at the Society of Arts, Adelphi, 21 April, 1760. From this sprang the Royal Academy, in consequence of a dispute between the directors and the fellows. On 10 Dec. 1768, the institution of the present Royal Academy was completed under the patronage of George III.; and sir Joshua Reynolds, knighted on the occasion, was appointed its first president. Leigh. The first exhibition of the academicians (at Pall-Mall) was on 26 April, 1769, when 136 works appeared. In 1771 the king granted them apartments in old Somerset-house, and afterwards, in 1780, in new Somerset-house, where they remained till 1838, when they removed to the National Gallery. Among the professors have been Johnson, Gibbon, Goldsmith, Macaulay, and Hallam. Turner, the painter, gave funds to the academy for the award of a medal triennially for landscape-painting, which was awarded to Mr. N. O. Lupton in 1857. A commission of inquiry into the affairs of the academy, appointed in 1862, recommended various changes in July, 1863, which were carried into effect. The hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the academy was celebrated 10 Dec. 1868. The Royal Academy held its first exhibition in Burlington-house, Piccadilly, 3 May, 1869. The annual exhibition of pictures by the old masters, with some British, began 3 Jan. 1870. The money received has been devoted to the establishment of a professorship of chemistry and a laboratory, &c. In 1874 the exhibition included many of Landseer's pictures.

Sir Francis Chantrey, R.A., sculptor, died 25 Nov. 1841. At the death of his wife, Jan. 1875, in conformity with his will, 105,000*l*. was bequeathed to the Academy, and invested in Consols (now [1903] producing an income of about 2,100*l.* per annum), for the purchase of works of art for the nation, and other purposes. The collection, of some 110 pictures, since 1897 has been permanently located in the Tate gallery, Pimlico.

The court of appeal upholds Mr. justice North's decision that the works of sculpture purchased must be finished in marble or bronze, and not models, June, 1889.

The gallery containing the sculptures of John Gibson, bequeathed by him, was opened free, 27 Nov. 1896.

The number of the works of art exhibited in 1789 was about 620; in 1889, 2196, including sculptures.

Rembrandt exhibition, 95 oil paintings and collection of drawings, opened, 31 Dec. 1898.

10,000*l.* bequeathed by the late lord Leighton constituted a trust fund as "The Leighton Bequest," the interest to be devoted to the adornment of public places, &c.; announced, 11 Feb. 1899.

Adverse criticism respecting the choice of pictures purchased by the trustees of the Chantrey fund leads to the appointment of a select committee to consider the subject, 1904. Select committee's report recommends that all purchases be made by a committee to consist of the president of the Royal Academy, a royal academician appointed by the council, and an associate of the Royal Academy nominated by the associates, 1905.

The king accepts at the Royal Academy the picture of the opening of the first parliament of the Australian commonwealth, 4 July, 1904.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC was established in 1822, mainly by the exertions of lord Burghersh (afterwards earl of Westmorland, who died 16 Oct. 1859), and was incorporated by charter 23 June, 1830. The first concert took place 8 Dec. 1828. Its reconstruction was proposed in 1866, and afterwards effected. Sir George Macfarren principal, 1876; died, 31 Oct. 1887; succeeded by dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Feb. 1888; knight, Jan. 1895. The duke of Edinburgh, president, July, 1893 (died, 30 July, 1900); succeeded by the prince of Wales. Patron, the king.

The academy unites with the Royal College of Music in regard to local examinations, announced 13 Nov. 1889

ROYAL EXCHANGE (Cambium Regis), London. The foundation of the original edifice was laid by sir Thomas Gresham, 7 June, 1566, on the site of the ancient Tun prison. Queen Elizabeth opened it on 23 Jan. 1571, and her herald named it the Royal Exchange. Hume. It was totally destroyed by the great fire, Sept. 1666. Charles II. laid the foundation-stone of the next edifice, 23 Oct. 1667, which was completed by Mr. Hawksmoore, a pupil of sir Christopher Wren, in about three years; it was repaired and beautified in 1769. This also was burnt, 10 Jan. 1838. The present Royal Exchange, erected under the direction of Mr. Tite, was opened by queen Victoria, 28 Oct. 1844.—Basement of Lloyd's offices damaged by fire, 27 Dec. 1894. Improvement and enlargement of the chimes inaugurated, 1 July, 1895. Decorations: paintings by sir F. (alt. lord) Leighton and others, 1895 et seq.; a fresco unveiled 30 Sept. 1903; another, presented by 600 members of the Stock Exchange, representing the granting of a charter (27 July, 1694) for the foundation of the Bank of England, 18 July, 1904. Messrs. Smith's offices damaged by fire, 16 Jan. 1903. The ROYAL EXCHANGE, Dublin, commenced 1769, opened 1779.

ROYAL GEORGE, a man-of-war of 108 guns, lost off Spithead. While heeled over to repair a pipe, a sudden gust of wind washed the sea into her ports, and she went down. The rear-admiral Kempenfeldt, the crew, many marines, women, and Jews, in all about 600 persons, were drowned, 29 Aug. 1782. By the use of the diving-bell, the ship, embedded in the deep, was surveyed in May, 1817, et seq. Portions of the vessel and its cargo were brought up in 1839-42, under the superintendence of sir Charles Pasley, when gunpowder was ignited by the agency of electricity.

ROYAL GRANTS to members of the royal family.—

Queen Victoria, on July 2, applied to parliament for a grant to prince Albert Victor of Wales for his maintenance, and for one to the princess Louise of Wales on her marriage with the earl of Fife, a select committee was appointed consisting of 23 members (including Mr. Goschen, Mr. W. H. Smith, lord Hartington, Mr. J. Chamberlain, Mr. Gladstone, Mr John Morley, Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Burt, dr. Cameron, Mr. Parnell, and Mr. Sexton), 8 July, the committee first met 10 July, 1889

After several meetings at which there was much discussion on various propositions, a report was submitted to the house of commons, who eventually resolved, after several amendments had been rejected, that 36,000*l.*, out of the consolidated fund should be paid annually (through trustees) to the prince of Wales for the support and maintenance of his family, the same to continue till six months after queen Victoria's decease, 29 July, 1889. An act of parliament to this effect was passed . . . . 12 Aug. 1889

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY (London), see Humane Society.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, the earliest of the kind in London, was founded 9 March, 1799, by count Rumford, sir Joseph Banks, earls Spencer and Morton, and several other noblemen and gentlemen. It received the immediate patronage of George III., and was incorporated 13 Jan. 1800, by royal charter, as "The Royal Institution of Great Britain, for the diffusing knowledge, and facilitating the general introduction of useful mechanical inventions and improvements, and for teaching, by courses of philosophical lectures and experiments, the application of science to the common purposes of life." It was enlarged and extended by an act of parliament in 1810; the original plan, as drawn up by count Rumford, in 1799, having been considerably modified. The members are elected by ballot, and pay ten guineas on admission, and five guineas annually, or a composition of sixty guineas. "The Royal Institution, its Founder, and its first Professors," by Dr. Bence Jones, hon. sec., published 1871.

The HOUSE (in Albemarle-street, Piccadilly) was purchased in June, 1799, and the present front was added by subscription in 1838. The Lecture theatre was erected in 1800–1, under the superintendence of Mr. T Webster.

The Laboratory established in 1800; was rebuilt, with the modern improvements, 1872.

The LIBRARY was commenced in 1803, by the munificent subscriptions of the proprietors of the institution, It now comprises about 60,000 volumes Classified catalogues (by W. Harris) were published in 1809 and 1821; new ones (by B. Vincent) in 1857 and 1882.

The MUSEUM contains original philosophical apparatus of Young, Cavendish, Davy, Faraday, and De la Rue

The first LECTURE was delivered 4 March, 1800, by Dr Garnett, he being the first professor of natural philosophy and chemistry

In Aug he was succeeded by Dr. Thomas Young, so celebrated for his researches in optics, resulting in the discovery of the interference of light, and the establishment of the theory of undulation. His "Lectures on Natural Philosophy and the Mechanical Arts," first published in 1807, are still considered a text-book of physical science. His works on antiquarian literature (hieroglyphic inscriptions, &c.) are highly esteemed

In Feb 1801, Mr (afterwards sir Humphry) Davy was engaged as assistant lecturer and director of the laboratory, and on 31 May, 1802, he was appointed professor of chemistry His lectures were eminently successful, and his discoveries in chemistry and electricity have immortalised his name, and conferred honour on the institution By him the alkaline metals potassium and sodium, were discovered in 1807, the nature of chlorine was determined in 1810, and the safety-lamp invented in 1815.

William Thomas Brande succeeded sir Humphry Davy as professor of chemistry in 1813, and held that office till his resignation in 1852, since which time, till his death (Feb 1866), he was hon. professor. From 1816 to 1850 he delivered, in the laboratory of this institution, his celebrated chemical lectures to students.

In 1813 Michael Faraday (born 22 Sept. 1791), on the recommendation of sir H. Davy, was engaged as assistant in the laboratory, and in 1825 as its director, in 1827 he became one of the permanent lecturers of the institution. In 1840 he commenced those researches in electricity and magnetism which form an era in the history of science. In 1823-4 he discovered the condensability of chlorine and other gases; in 1831 he obtained electricity from the magnet; in 1845 he exhibited the two-fold magnetism of matter, comprehending all known substances, the magnetism of gases, flame, &c.; in 1850 he published his researches on atmospheric magnetism: died, 25 Aug. 1867.

John Tyndall, F.R.S., professor of natural philosophy, July, 1853, hon. professor, 9 May, 1887; died 4 Dec. 1893; eminent for his researches on magnetism, heat, glaciers, &c.; bequeathed 1,000l. to the Royal Institution, received Jan. 1896.

Lord Rayleigh, F.R.S., professor of natural philosophy, 9 May, 1887; is eminent for his researches on sound, light, &c.

Edward Frankland, F.R.S. (after sir), professor of chemistry 1863-8, eminent for his discoveries in organic chemistry; he died, 9 Aug. 1899.

James Dewar, F.R.S. (born 20 Sept. 1842), professor of chemistry, 9 April, and director of the laboratory, 7 May, 1877; eminent for his discoveries and researches in the liquefaction and solidification of gases at high temperatures, air, oxygen, hydrogen, &c., 1878 et seq.

In 1804, sir J. St. Aubyn and other gentlemen proposed to form a SCHOOL OF MINES at this institution; but the plan, although warmly supported by the members, was withdrawn for want of encouragement by the government and by mining proprietors.

The WEEKLY EVENING MEETINGS, on the Fridays, from January to June, as now arranged, commenced in 1826 Discourses (of which abstracts have been printed, 1851 et seq.) are given at these meetings by the professors of the institution and other eminent scientific men.

ENDOWMENTS. In 1833, John Fuller, esq., of Rosehill, endowed two professorships, of chemistry and physiology; the former bestowed on Mr Faraday for life, succeeded by Dr. Wm Odling, 1868-73; by Dr John Hall Gladstone, 1874, died 7 Oct. 1902, by James Dewar, 1877. The latter on Dr. Roget for three years, to be filled up afterwards by triennial election.—The Fullerian professors of physiology have been P M Roget, R. E. Grant, T R. Jones, W. B Carpenter, W W Gull, T. W. Jones, T. H. Huxley (twice), R. Owen, J. Marshall, Michael Foster, Wm. Rutherford, Alfred H. Garrod, and E. A Schäfer (1878-81), J G. McKendrick, 1881-4; A. Gamgee, 1884; G. J Romanes, 1888, Victor Horsley, 1891; Charles Stewart, 1893; Augustus D. Waller, 1897; Edwin Ray Lankester, 6 Jan. 1898; Dr. Allan Macfadyen, Jan. 1901; Louis C. Miall, 1904.—In 1838, Mrs Acton gave 1000*l* to be invested for paying every seven years 100 guineas for the best essay on the beneficence of the Almighty, as illustrative of a department of science; which have been awarded in 1844 to Mr G Fownes; in 1851 to Mr T Wharton Jones; in 1858 no award was made, in 1865 to Mr. George Warington, in 1872 to Rev George Henslow and B Thompson Lowne; in 1879, to Mr G S Boulger; in 1886, to Prof. (aft. sir) G. G Stokes, Pres. R.S.; Miss Agnes M. Clerke, 1893; sir Wm. and lady Huggins, 1900.

The "Fund for the Promotion of Experimental Research" was founded on 6 July, 1863, by sir Henry Holland, Professor Faraday, sir R. I. Murchison, Dr Bence Jones, and others

Many donations received, 1863 et seq.; since 1892 liberal donations have been received to support prof. Dewar's researches connected with low temperatures: Mr. Thomas G. Hodgkins, of Long Island, New York, 100,000 dollars; Goldsmiths' company, 1,000*l*., Nov. 1892; again 1,000*l*., Nov. 1899. The earl of Derby bequeaths 2,000*l*., 21 April, 1893 et seq.; Mr. Ludwig Mond, 1887–93, 1,540*l*.; others since.

In 1843 the establishment of a school of practical chemistry in the institution approved by profs. Faraday and Brande was proposed but failed.

On 2 July, 1894, the scheme was revived by Mr Ludwig Mond, F.R.S. and M.R.I., who presented to the institution the house adjoining, with a proposal for its transformation into a laboratory, to be termed the DAVY-FARADAY RESEARCH LABORATORY. He supplied the funds necessary for the incidental expenses of the work, and also gave an endowment sufficient to maintain a staff of professors and assistants, and to supply everything necessary for the prosecution of scientific research, especially in pure chemistry and physical science. The laboratory is an adjunct to the Royal Institution, and is open, conditionally, to independent private research. The conveyance and deed of trust dated 8 June, 1896. The laboratory is subject to a committee appointed by the managers of the institution, the first directors being lord Rayleigh and prof James Dewar. Dr. Alexander Scott appointed superintendent, 1896. The laboratory was opened by the prince of Wales, after an historical address by Dr. Ludwig Mond, followed by experiments in liquid air, by prof. Dewar, 22 Dec. Times, 23 Dec. 1896.

The first officers of the institution were sir Joseph Banks, president, till the charter was granted, afterwards the earl of Winchilsea; Mr. (afterwards sir Thomas) Bernard, treasurer; rev. Dr. Samuel Glasse, secretary.—Algernon duke of Northumberland, K.G., elected president, 1842; succeeded by sir Henry Holland, in 1865 (died 27 Oct. 1873); by Algernon George, duke of Northumberland, K.G., 1873 (died 2 Jan. 1899); by his son, Henry George, duke of Northumberland, 6 March, 1899. W. Pole, esq., treasurer, elected 1849, succeeded by Wm. Spottiswoode, esq., in 1865, by George Busk, esq., 1873; by Henry Pollock, esq., 1886; by sir James Crichton Browne, 1889. The rev. John Barlow, secretary, elected 1842, succeeded by Henry Bence Jones, M.D, 1860, by Wm Spottiswoode, 1873; by Warren de la Rue, 1879; by sir Wm. Bowman, Bart., 1882, by sir Frederick Bramwell, Bart., 1885; by sir Wm. Crookes, 1900. Librarians: Wm. Harris, 1803-23; S. Weller Singer, 1826-35; Wm. Mason, 1835-48; Benjamin Vincent, 1849-89 (hon. librarian, 1889; died 3 May, 1899); Henry Young, 1889. 21 eminent foreign scientific men were elected honorary members, 4 May, 1891, in relation to the Faraday centenary, which see.

Centenary celebrations: 26 eminent foreign scientists elected honorary members, 1 May, 1899; banquet to the foreign delegates at the Merchant Taylors' hall, the prince of Wales, the dukes of Cambridge and Northumberland, the lord chancellor and others present, 5 June; the prince of Wales presides at a commemorative lecture by Lord Rayleigh on the "Discoveries of Thos. Young," 3 p.m., and presents diplomas to the foreign scientists, 4 p.m.; the lord mayor holds a reception in the evening, 6 June; at the second lecture (the duke of Northumberland in the chair), prof. Dewar produced liquid hydrogen, which see, in substantial quantities at about 21° absolute temperature, and by it solidified liquid oxygen and air, and exhibited a succession of beautiful experiments before lords Kelvin, Rayleigh, and a brilliant audience, Friday eve, 7 June, 1899.

Historical apparatus, &c., was exhibited in the upper library, 5–7 June, 1899.

Bust of sir Frederick Bramwell unveiled by the duke of Northumberland, 17 Jan. 1902.

Michael Faraday relics, bequeathed by Mr. Thos. Deacon, of Newcastle-on Tyne, received, Jan. 1902.

ROYAL SOCIETY (London).

In 1645 several learned men met in London to discuss philosophical questions and report experiments; the Novum Organon of Bacon, published in 1620, having given great impulse to such pursuits. Some of them (Drs. Wilkins, Wallis, &c.), about 1648-9, removed to Oxford, and with Dr. (afterwards bishop) Seth Ward, the hon. Robert Boyle, Dr. (afterwards sir) W. Petty, and several doctors of divinity and physic, frequently assembled in the apartments of Dr. Wilkins, in Wadham college, Oxford. They formed what has been called the Philosophical Society of Oxford, which only lasted till 1690. The members were, about 1658, called to various parts of the kingdom, on account of their respective professions; and the majority coming to London, constantly attended the lectures at Gresham college, and met occasionally till the death of Oliver Cromwell, 3 Sept. 1658; see Societies, and Scientific Papers. "Record of Royal Soc." issued 1897.

The society was organised in 1660, and constituted by Charles II. a body politic and corporate, by the appellation of "The President, Council, and Fellowship of the Royal Society of London, for improving Natural Knowledge," 22 April, 1662.

Henry Oldenburg, the first secretary, an eminent philosopher, a native of Bremen, a friend of Milton, Boyle, Wilkins, Wallis, and Petty, died Sept. 1677.

Evelyn records the first anniversary meeting, St. Andrew's-day, 30 Nov. 1663.

The Philosophical Transactions begin 6 March, 1664-5.

In 1668 Newton invented his reflecting telescope (now in the possession of the society), and on 28 April, 1686, presented to the society the MS. of his Principia, which the council ordered to be printed. This was done under the superintendence and at the expense of Halley the astronomer, at that time clerk to the society.

The society met for some years at Gresham College, and afterwards at Arundel House (1666), where it came into possession of a valuable library, presented by Mr. Howard, grandson of its collector, the earl of Arundel After various changes the fellows returned to Gresham College, where they remained till their removal to Crane-court, in a house purchased by themselves, 8 Nov. 1710.

The Croonian lecture was founded in 1701; the Bakerian lecture by Henry Baker, 1774.

The first Copley medal was awarded to Stephen Gray in 1731; the royal medal to John Dalton, 1826; the Rumford medal (instituted in 1797) to count Rumford himself in 1800.

The society remove to apartments granted them in Somerset-house, 1780; to apartments in Burlington-house, Piccadilly, 1857

Parliament votes annually 4000*l.* to the Royal Society for scientific purposes; raised to 5,000*l.* in 1895.

Regulations made by which only fifteen fellows are to be annually elected, who pay ten pounds on admission, and four pounds annually, or a composition of sixty pounds, March, 1847. In consequence, the number of fellows was reduced from 839 in 1847, to 626 in 1866; to 567 in 1875; to 552 in 1877; to 523 in 1888; 511 in 1893; 430 in 1905.

The entrance fee abolished, and the annual payment reduced to 3*l.*, announced, Nov 1878.

The "Royal Society Scientific Fund" was founded in imitation of the "Literary Fund" in 1859, see Scientific Fund.

The Davy medal (which see) first awarded, Nov 1877.

The Darwin medal (see Development) first awarded, 1890.

The Croonian lecture given by prof. Virchow, of Berlin, 16 March, 1893.

Sir Wm. Mackinnon bequeaths over 16,000*l.* to the society, announced Dec. 1897.

The "Hughes" medal for original discovery in physical science, particularly electricity and magnetism (from a bequest by prof. David Edw. Hughes), first awarded to Joseph John Thomson, Nov. 1902.

The Royal Society entertains, at a banquet at the hotel Cecil, delegates to the triennial conference of the International Association of Academies, 24 May, 1904.

Anonymous donor presents 1,000*l.* to the society for the advancement of science, Nov. 1904.

RUBICON, a small river flowing into the Adriatic sea, separated Cisalpine Gaul from Italy proper. Roman generals were forbidden to pass this river at the head of an army. Julius Cæsar did so, Jan. 49 B.C., and thereby began a revolt and deadly civil war.

RUBIDIUM, an alkaline metal, discovered by Bunsen by means of the spectrum analysis, and made known in 1861.

RUBRICS, directions in church offices, often printed in red. New ones for the English service agreed to by convocation, 4 July, 1879.

RUBY MINES OF BURMAH. Tavernier (middle of 17th cent.) describes Burmah as a place where rubies and other precious stones are largely obtained, a country difficult of access Similar accounts were given by Father Giuseppe d'Amato, about 1830. The largest stones were royal property. Mr. Bredemeyer had charge of these and other mines in 1868. Revenue about 1855, from 12,500*l.* to 15,000*l.* per annum. These mines are now British property (see under Burmah, 1885), and for the use of them a revenue is paid by the Shan tribes, 1887. An agreement respecting them made between the Indian Government and Messrs. Streeter & Co. of London, announced May, 1887; suspended July, 1887. Working licences issued to persons on the spot, 1887. Lease for seven years to the Streeter Syndicate signed at the India office, 22 Feb. 1889; formation of a company headed by Messrs. Rothschild, March et seq., 1889. Visit of sir Lepel Griffin to the mines, satisfactory to the company, reported March, 1890. Lt.-governor, sir Hugh Shakespear Barnes, April 1903, sir H. Thirkell White, Jan. 1905.

RUFFLES became fashionable about 1520; and went out about 1790.

RUGBY SCHOOL (Warwickshire), was founded in 1567 by Lawrence Sheriff, a London tradesman; its arrangements were affected by the Public Schools act 1868. Dr. Thomas Arnold, the historian, entered on the duties of head-master here in August, 1828, and under him the school greatly prospered. He died 12 June, 1842. His successors were Drs. Tait, Goulburn, Temple, Hayman, Jex Blake, Percival and H. A. James (since 1895). See New Rugby.

Dr. H. Hayman was opposed by the masters of the school, and after much dissension and discussion, was dismissed by the trustees, Dec. 1873, and Dr Jex Blake elected in his room, Feb 1874. Vice-Chancellor Malins decided against Dr. Hayman in his attempt to set aside his dismissal, but expressed his own opinion on "the grievous hardship of Dr. Hayman's case," 21 March, 1874.

Mr. Disraeli, the premier, presented Dr. Hayman to the living of Aldingham, Lancashire, April, 1874; he died, aged 81, 11 July, 1904.

Home mission, in addition to the Fox memorial mastership in India, established in connection with Rugby, 1889.

RUHMKORFF'S INDUCTION COIL, see Induction.

"RULE, BRITANNIA." The words are by James Thomson (altered by Mallet); the music, ascribed to Dr. Arne, is said by Schœlcher (in his life of Handel) to have been taken from an air in Handel's "Occasional Oratorio" composed 1746, but the song and music were really printed in Dr Arne's masque of "Alfred," 1740. Grove.

Long-lost score of Wagner's "Rule, Britannia," overture, composed as a tribute to the British nation, discovered by Mr. Cyrus Gamble at Leicester, May, 1904.

RULE-OF-THE-ROAD, see Seas.

RULING MACHINES, used for ruling paper with faint lines, for merchants' account-books, &c. They were invented by an ingenious Dutchman, resident in London, in 1782, and were subsequently greatly improved by Woodmason, Payne, Brown, and others. They were improved in Scotland in 1803 Herr F. A. Nobert devised a ruling machine in 1845 for the production of microscopical test plates, diffraction gratings, and micrometers, specimens of which were exhibited in 1851. The test plates contain bands of lines in a graduated series of fineness from $\frac{1}{1000}$ to $\frac{1}{10000}$ of a Paris line.

RUSSELL TRIAL. William, lord Russell's trial for complicity in the Rye-house plot was marked by a most touching scene. When he requested to have some one near him to take notes to help his memory, he was answered, that any of his attendants might assist him; upon which he said "My WIFE is here, and will do it for me." He was beheaded in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, 21 July, 1683. Lady Russell survived him forty years, dying 29 Sept. 1723, in her eighty-seventh year. His attainder was reversed, 1 Will. III. 1689.

RUSSIA, the eastern part of ancient Sarmatia. The name is generally derived from the Roxolani, a Slavonic tribe. Ruric, a Varangian chief, appears to have been the first to establish a government, 862. His decendants ruled amid many vicissitudes till 1598. The progress of the Russian power under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world. The established religion of Russia is the Greek church, with toleration of other sects, even Mahometans. By an imperial ukase, in 1802, six universities were established, viz., at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Wilna, Dorpat (in Livonia), Charcov, and Kasan; but literature made little progress till the 19th century, the native publications being very few, and the best books being translations. The Russian language, though not devoid of elegance, is, to a foreigner, of very difficult pronunciation; the number of letters and diphthongs is forty-two. The Anglo-Russian Literary Society, with library, &c., set up at the Imperial Institute, 1893. The population of the empire in 1867, 82,159,630; in 1872, about 85,685,945; in 1877 (estimated), 86,952,347; in 1885, 108,843,192; 1st general census of the empire, total, 129,211,113, 9 Feb. 1897; 106,265,000 European, including Asiatic Russia, 141,000,000 (estimated), 1903. By the first Russian budget (1862), the estimated revenue was 34,500,000*l.*; expenditure, 37,850,000*l.*; 1892, revenue, 118,025,000*l.*; expenditure, 112,549,000*l.*; 1905 revenue estimated 197,704,561*l.* (ordinary), 275,000*l.* (extraordinary); expenditure 191,606,557*l.* (ordinary), 7,856,868*l.* (extraordinary). Public debt 1904, 707,851,930*l.* Imports, 1904, 58,360,000*l.* exports, 95,500,000*l.* Besides about 500 cathedrals, about 35,000 churches (Greek church, which see) Total armed strength of Russia, estimated at 3,460,000, 1903; 4,500,000, 1905. Railways, 1893, 19,441 miles; 1903, 40,836 miles open.

* The directions given by the czar for carrying out his will are as follows:—

"I. To grant the population the immutable foundations of civic liberty, based on real inviolability of person, and freedom of conscience, speech, union and association.

"II. Without deferring the elections to the state duma already ordered to call to the participation in the duma, as far as possible in view of the shortness of time before the duma is to assemble, those classes of the population now completely deprived of electoral rights, leaving the ultimate development of the principle of the electoral right in general to the newly-established legislative order of things.

"III. To establish it as an immutable rule that no law can come into force without the approval of the state duma, and that it shall be possible for the elected of the people to exercise a real participation in the supervision of the legality of the acts of the authorities appointed by us.

RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.—The war between Japan and Russia was due to three principal causes: the rights of the Japanese in Manchuria, the independence of Corea; and the independence of China, all these interests being imperilled by the rapid extension of the Russian power. The conflict between China and Japan, 1894-95, resulted in the recognition by China of the independence of Corea, and the cession to Japan of Port Arthur and the Liao-tung peninsula, the latter advantage was, however, lost to Japan by the action of Russia, supported by France and Germany, on the ground that its possession by the Japanese would "constitute a perpetual menace to the capital of China, and render the independence of Corea illusory." Japan failed in her attempt to obtain pledges from Russia that neither Port Arthur nor the Liao-tong peninsula would be occupied by the forces of that power; assurances were, however, given "that Russia had no designs whatever on Manchuria"; but Russia refused to embody these assurances in a treaty on the ground that to do so would be an imputation on her bona fides. In 1898, Russia obtained from China a lease over Port Arthur and Ta-lien-wan, together with railway concessions (granted 23 March); Russian forces were landed (28 March), the Trans-Siberian railway was rapidly extended south to Port Arthur, fortifications were erected, garrisons established, and Manchuria treated as if it were virtually a Russian province. In return for her support given to China after the relief of Pekin, 1900, Russia sought, but unsuccessfully, to obtain a convention securing her special rights in Manchuria, and ultimately agreed to evacuate two provinces of Manchuria on 8 Oct. 1903. The promised evacuation was not carried out, and on 30 Oct. 1903, Russian troops re-occupied Mukden, and a great number of troops were sent into Manchuria. This action of Russia in maintaining her occupation of Manchuria, notwithstanding her treaty with China and the repeated assurances given to the powers by Russia, together with aggressive action on the Ya-lu in Corean territory, caused great apprehension to Japan, as threatening the independence of Corea and the safety of Japan, especially if Manchuria were annexed by Russia. In a despatch dated 28 July, 1903, M. Kurino, the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg, was instructed by baron Komura, Japanese foreign minister, "to approach the Russian government in a spirit of conciliation and frankness, with a view to the conclusion of an understanding" on these questions, and "to a definition of their respective interests in those regions." The Japanese proposals were stated in the following terms in a despatch from Tokio, dated 3 Aug. 1903:—

I. A mutual agreement to respect the independence and territorial integrity of the Chinese and Corean empires, and to maintain the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations in those countries.

II. Reciprocal recognition of Japan's preponderating interests in Corea and Russia's special interests in railway enterprises in Manchuria, and of the right of Japan to take in Corea and of Russia to take in Manchuria such measures as may be necessary for the protection of their respective interests as above defined, subject, however, to the provisions of Article I

III. Reciprocal undertaking on the part of Russia and Japan not to impede the development of those industrial and commercial activities respectively of Japan and Russia in Corea and of Russia in Manchuria, which are not inconsistent with the stipulations of Article I.

IV. Reciprocal engagement that in case it is found necessary to send troops by Japan to Corea, or by Russia to Manchuria, for the purpose either of protecting the interests mentioned in Article II., or of suppressing insurrection or disorder calculated to create international complications, the troops so sent are in no case to exceed the actual number required, and are to be forthwith recalled as soon as their missions are accomplished.

V. Recognition on the part of Russia of the exclusive right of Japan to give advice and assistance in the interest of reform and good government in Corea, including necessary military assistance.

The following counter proposals were submitted on behalf of Russia, 3 Oct. 1903.—

I Mutual engagement to respect the independence and territorial integrity of the Corean empire.

II. Recognition by Russia of Japan's preponderating interests in Corea, and of the right of Japan to give advice and assistance to Corea tending to improve the civil administration of the empire without infringing the stipulations of Article I

III Engagement on the part of Russia not to impede the commercial and industrial undertakings of Japan in Corea, nor to oppose any measures taken for the purpose of protecting them, so long as such measures do not infringe the stipulations of Article I.

IV. Recognition of the right of Japan to send for the same purpose troops to Corea, with the knowledge of Russia, but their numbers not to exceed that actually required, and with the engagement on the part of Japan to recall such troops as soon as their mission is accomplished.

V Mutual engagement not to use any part of the territory of Corea for strategical purposes, nor to undertake on the coasts of Corea any military works capable of menacing the freedom of navigation in the straits of Corea.

VI. Mutual agreement to consider that part of the territory of Corea lying to the north of the 39th parallel as a neutral zone, into which neither of the contracting parties shall introduce troops.

VII. Recognition by Japan of Manchuria and its littoral as in all respects outside her sphere of interest.

The proposal of Russia that Manchuria should be regarded as outside the Japanese sphere of interest was, in view of the important political and commercial interests of Japan in that country, rejected by Japan 30 Oct. 1903; other amendments, including one relating to a neutral zone, in Manchuria as well as in Corea, were proposed by Japan Russia, in response to the protest of the Japanese government respecting the delay of the Russian government in replying to its communication, reaffirmed the proposals of 3 Oct., but omitting Article VII., 11 Dec. 1903. In reply, 21 Dec. 1903, the Japanese government stated that Russia's exclusion of Manchuria from the negotiations nullified them entirely, the negotiations having been expressly undertaken to remove every cause for misunderstanding respecting both Corea and Manchuria; Russia was asked to reconsider the question; the neutral-zone clause to be omitted. The Russian government reply, 6 Jan. 1904, proposing to insert the following article in the agreement, "Recognition by Japan of Manchuria and its littoral as being outside her sphere of interests, while Russia within the limits of that province will not impede Japan or other powers in the enjoyment of rights and privileges acquired by them under existing treaties with China, exclusive of the establishment of settlements." This article was subject to the understanding that the articles respecting a neutral zone, and the prohibition of Corean territory for strategical purposes, were conceded by Japan. The final proposals of the Japanese government were presented to Russia, 13 Jan. 1904, and comprised the following modifications of the Russian terms:—

I The elimination from Article V. of the words "not to use any part of the territory of Corea for strategical purposes."

II The elimination from Article VI as to a neutral zone.

III. The acceptance of the final Article concerning Manchuria, provided that Russia agreed to respect the territorial integrity of China in Manchuria; not to impede Japan or other Powers, within the limits of Manchuria, in the enjoyment of rights and privileges acquired by them under the existing treaties with China; to recognise Corea and its littoral as being outside the Russian sphere of influence.

IV The recognition by Japan of Russia's special interests in Manchuria, and of the right of Russia to take measures necessary for the protection of those interests.

Owing to the dilatory tactics of Russia the patience of the Japanese government became exhausted, and becoming convinced that no hope existed of a peaceable settlement of the questions at issue, and having regard also to the preparations being made with both her army and navy by Russia, the Japanese government at Tokio announced, 6 Feb. 1904, through their minister at St. Petersburg, the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Russia. Dr Morrison, correspondent of the Times at Pekin, after visiting Dalny and Port Arthur, by permission of the Japanese headquarters, records his opinion that the surrender of Port Arthur by gen. Stossel was not justified by the condition of the fortress, and strongly condemns the Russian capitulation in view of the fact that 25,000 able-bodied soldiers, well clad and well nourished, and capable of making a sortie, were found by the Japanese in the fortress, that there was ample food for three months; that there was fuel in abundance, 70,000 tons of coal being stored in the dockyard, besides large quantities of firewood; that there was no serious failure of ammunition; that the number of buildings destroyed or injured in Port Arthur was comparatively small, the Japanese having directed their fire on the docks, workshops, and the ships in the harbour. Of the 14,000 cases in the hospital from all classes of the population, only a small proportion were wounded In Dr Morrison's opinion, "no more discreditable surrender has been recorded in history." He states that the heart and soul of the defence was gen. Koudrachenko, who was killed 18 Dec 1904, and that but for him gen. Stossel would have capitulated some weeks earlier . 25 Jan 1905

* Official statement of the captures at Port Arthur: prisoners, 41,641 combatants (15,307 sick or wounded); 528 guns (serviceable); 906,734 rounds of gun ammunition; 36,598 small arms; 5,436,240 rounds of small arm ammunition; 1,475,000 lbs. of flour, 123,000 lbs. of barley; 23,333 lbs. of Indian corn, 2,250 lbs. of rye; 1,000,000 lbs. of bread; 58,000 lbs of canned beef; 990,000 lbs. of salt; 33,300 lbs. of sugar.

BATTLE OF MUKDEN.—The Japanese forces comprised the third army, under gen Nogi, on the left (looking northward), the second army, under gen Oku, to the right of the third army; the fourth army, under gen Nodzu, in the centre, the first army, under gen Kuroki, on the right, and the right flank detachment of reservists under gen Kawamura The Japanese line extended nearly 100 miles from W to E, under the direction of marshal Oyama The Russian forces comprised the second army under gen Kaulbars (looking southward); the centre under gen Bilderling, and the first army under gen Linevitch, with a detachment under gen. Rennenkampf, the whole commanded in chief by gen. Kuropatkin.

The general idea of the Japanese operations was the threatening of the Russian left under gen Linevitch, the real object the attack on the Russian right and an extended out-flanking movement Gen Kuropatkin (whose forces were about 400,000 men and 1,500 guns, with a strongly entrenched position on the S and S.E. of Fushan, 26 miles east of Mukden), misled by the Japanese attack on his left, where his strongest forces were placed, failed to realise the true Japanese objective, until too late to readjust his forces. (For convenience of reference this battle, one of the greatest of modern times, is divided into 5 sections, representing the successive stages of the conflict.)

I The Japanese commence offensive operations on the Russian left by the advance of gen Kawamura over the frozen roads and rivers, 19 Feb.; he gains the Ching ho-cheng defile, the Tai tse river having been crossed, and a fierce conflict waged for two days with the Russians, who are driven out of their entrenchments, 24 Feb.; Japanese first army, under gen. Kuroki, moves forward from the Pen-hsi-hu district upon Kao tu-ling, and forces the Russians from their advanced positions about 10 miles N. and N.W. of Pen-hsi-hu; the fourth army, under gen. Nodzu, advances on the Sha-ho, gaining ground and threatening the Russian position, with the result that gen. Kuropatkin's attention was directed to the defence of his centre and left . 19–28 Feb. 1905

II. Gen. Oku, with the Japanese second army, advances and deploys between the Sha-ho and the Hun; gen. Nogi, with the third army on the left of gen. Oku, rapidly marches between the Hun and the Liao in a northerly direction, overcoming all the counter-attacks of the Russians, 28. Feb. gen. Kuropatkin becomes aware of this movement, 1 March, but measures taken by him proved to be inadequate and too late, his forces being driven back on the night towards Mukden; gen. Nogi begins his turning movement on the west, between the Hun and Liao rivers, marching rapidly in a northerly direction, 26 Feb.; advances at first without encountering opposition, marches nearly due N. to Hsin-min-tun, 33 miles west of Mukden, 1 March; swinging round, gen. Nogi marches eastward on a front of 15 miles, keeping touch with gen. Oku, at Likwan-pau, and pushing towards the railway; second Russian army, under gen Kaulbars, is forced to face westward on a line running from Machiapu to N.N.E; the fourth and first Japanese armies, under generals Nodzu and Kuroki respectively, make sustained efforts to prevent the Russian troops from withdrawing in the centre and the left to meet the decisive attack . . . . 28 Feb.–4 March, 1905

III. Russian army by 5 March was held fast in the centre, driven back on the left and completely turned on the right, gen. Kuroki having forced the left of the Russian entrenchments on the Sha-ho, 5 March; Russian reserves attack gen Oku and penetrate a short distance along the Hsin-min-tun-road, but are then repulsed, 5 March; gen. Nodzu dislodges the Russians from their earthworks S. of the Sha-ho, 2–6 March; gen Nogi's line extends its envelopment of the Russian forces to the N. of Mukden, the fortified positions of Machuntun and Tita, S and S.E. of Fushan, reached by gen. Kawamura, 28 Feb, are the scene of a desperate conflict, gen. Kuropatkin bringing up his reserves to these positions, after 8 days of fierce fighting the Japanese take Machuntun, 8 March. gen Kuropatkin decides to withdraw his centre and left behind the Hun and attack generals Oku and Nogi with all available forces from the armies of generals Kaulbars and Bilderling, 8 March, railway N. of Mukden cut by the Japanese under gen Nogi . . . . 5–8 March, ,,

IV Russian first army under gen. Linevitch effects its retreat to the line of the Hun without serious loss, and takes up a defensive position there, situation of the Russian army at Mukden becomes most critical, owing to the exhaustion of the second Russian army under gen Kaulbars, and the arrival at Mukden of the third army under gen. Bilderling, which causes a great accumulation of troops in a confined space and their exposure to the concentrated fire of the Japanese, who draw in upon the town from all sides except the N.E.; a gallant attempt is made by gen. Kuropatkin, who leads an attack of 65 battalions, checking the advance of generals Oku and Nogi, 9 March; gen. Nodzu, having crossed the Sha-ho, sweeps on to the Hun, and penetrates the Russian line; Kuisan, E. of Mukden, occupied by the Japanese on the north, while gen. Nogi fights to establish himself across the line of the Russian retreat, 9 March, gen Kuropatkin, to avoid the destruction or capture of the second and third Russian armies, gives the order for a general retreat, 9 March; Tita taken by the Japanese, 9 March, and the Russians in this part of the field fly to the N. of Fushan, 8–9 March, ,,

V. General Nodzu crosses the Hun, 10 March; Japanese occupy Mukden, 10 March; a large number of the Russian troops, owing to the enveloping character of the Japanese attacks, are unable to escape; gen. Nogi occupies the line of the Puho directly across the main line of retreat and astride all the roads leading from Mukden to the N; the remnant of the Russian army escapes over the hills in disorder, gen. Linevitch alone retaining his formations, and showing a bold front against gen Kuroki, 10 March; Fushan position carried by the Japanese, and the Russians retire towards Tie-ling, 10 March, parties of Russians in the adjacent villages and positions around Mukden continue to offer resistance, but are driven from all the country 26 miles N. of Mukden, and the Russians, broken and routed, flee in great disorder to Tie-ling, 12 March . . 10–12 March, ,,

Battle of Tsu Shima.—This, the greatest naval battle since Trafalgar (21 Oct. 1805), was fought when the Russian Baltic fleet, under adm Rozhdestvensky, entering the Straits of Tsu Shima, between Corea and Japan, was attacked by the Japanese fleet under adm. Togo, and practically annihilated. A fog at first prevailed, when adm. Rozhdestvensky's main fleet, steaming in two columns, the battleships to starboard and cruisers to port, drew up to Tsu Shima in the forenoon of 27 May The fog cleared in the afternoon, when the Russian fleet was sighted by the Japanese scouts. Immediately on receiving the report that the Russian fleet was in sight the combined squadrons of the Japanese started for attack, and met the Russian squadron near Okino Shima, to the S.E. of Tsu Shima. The battle began between 2 and 3 p.m., a strong breeze blowing and a high sea running. Before the engagement commenced adm. Togo signalled from the flagship Mikasa to the Japanese fleet: "The fate of the Empire depends on this effort. Let every man do his utmost." Although inferior in the number of their battleships the skilful tactics and superior range of their guns gave the Japanese the superiority, and enabled them to inflict a crushing defeat on the Russians. The battle lasted until the afternoon of 28 May, and included a general engagement, and a torpedo attack on the night of 27 May, breaking up the defeated Russian fleet. The Knias Souvaroff, the flagship of adm. Rozhdestvensky, was blown up; the admiral himself, seriously wounded, was rescued by a Russian torpedo-boat destroyer (afterwards captured), and taken prisoner; adm. Folkersahm was killed in the conning tower of the Oslyabya; and rear-adm. Nebogatoff was taken prisoner; 21 of the ships of the Russian fleet were sunk, viz., the battleships Knias Souvaroff, Borodino, Oslyabya, Alexander III., Navarin, and Kissoi Veliky; the cruisers Dmitri Donskoi, Admiral Nakhimoff, Svietlana, Vladimir Monomakh; a coast defence ship the Admiral Ouchakoff; the special service ships Russi Ural, Anastay, Kamtchatka, and the Ilutiah; and 3 torpedo-boat destroyers. 5 Russian ships were captured—the battleships Nikolai I. and the Orel; the coast defence ships Admiral Apraxine and Admiral Seniavin; and 1 torpedo-boat destroyer. 9 Russian ships escaped; 5 cruisers, of which number the Aurora, Jemchug, and Oleg (with adm. Enquist on board wounded) escaped to Manilla, and were interned; the Almaz succeeded in reaching Vladivostok; the Izumrud was wrecked in Vladimir bay; a special service ships escaped to Shanghai, 1 torpedo-boat destroyer to Shanghai, and another to Vladivostok. The Russian loss is estimated at 4,000 killed or drowned; 7,282 officers and men taken prisoners. The Japanese in the engagement lost 3 torpedo boats, 116 officers and men were killed and 538 wounded; the Japanese flagship Mikasa sustained the heaviest losses, 27–28 May, 1905

PEACE TREATY signed . . . . 5 Sept. ,,

* The following are the principal articles of the Treaty of Peace:—

Article II.—His majesty the emperor of Russia recognises the preponderant interest, from political, military, and economic points of view, of Japan in the empire of Corea, and stipulates that Russia will not oppose any measures for its government, protection, or control that Japan will deem necessary to take in Corea in conjunction with the Corean government; but Russian subjects and Russian enterprises are to enjoy the same status as the subjects and enterprises of other countries.

Article III.—It is mutually agreed that the territory of Manchuria shall be simultaneously evacuated by both Russian and Japanese troops. All rights acquired by private persons and companies shall remain intact.

Article IV.—The rights possessed by Russia in conformity with the lease to Russia of Port Arthur and Dalny, together with the land and waters adjacent, shall pass over entirely to Japan, but the properties and rights of Russian subjects are to be safeguarded and respected.

Article V.—The Russian and Japanese governments engage themselves reciprocally not to put any obstacles in the way of the general measures, which shall be alike for all nations that China may take for the development of the commerce and industry of Manchuria.

Article VI.—The Manchurian railway shall be operated jointly between the Russians and the Japanese at Kouangtchengtze. The respective portions of the line shall be employed only for commercial and industrial purposes. In view of Russia keeping her line with all the rights acquired by her convention with China for the construction of the railway, Japan acquires the mines in connection with such section of the lines which falls to her. The rights of private parties or private enterprises, however, are to be respected. Both parties to this treaty remain absolutely free to undertake what they may deem fit on the expropriated ground.

Article VII.—The Russians and the Japanese engage to make a junction of the lines which they own at kouangtchengtze.

Article VIII.—It is agreed that the lines of the Manchurian railway shall be worked with a view to ensuring commercial traffic between them without obstruction.

Article IX.—Russia cedes to Japan the southern part of Saghalin Island as far north as the fiftieth degree of north latitude, together with the island depending thereon. The right of free navigation is assured in the bays of La Perouse and Tartary.

Article XI.—Russia shall make an agreement with Russian and Japanese armistice commissioners meet at Sha-ho-tsu and sign the protocol providing for the cessation of hostilities between the two armies in Manchuria . . 13 Sept. 1905

RUSSO-TURKISH WAR.* The Russian and French governments having each taken a side in the dispute between the Greek and Latin churches as to the exclusive possession of the Holy Places (which see) in Palestine, the Porte advised the formation of a mixed commission, which decided in favour of the Greeks, and a firman was promulgated accordingly, 9 March, 1853: to this decision the French acceded, although dissatisfied.

The Russians make further claims, and prince Menschikoff (who arrived at Constantinople 28 Feb 1853), by various notes (between 22 March and 18 May), demands that a convention should be signed by the sultan granting to the czar such a protectorate over the Greek Christians in Turkey, as the sultan considered inimical to his own authority . . 22 March-18 May, 1853

Article XIII.—The Russians and Japanese reciprocally engage to exchange prisoners of war, paying the real cost of the keep of the same, such cost to be supported by documents.

* In 1844, when the czar was in England, he conversed with the duke of Wellington and lord Aberdeen (whom he had known many years) respecting the dissolution of the Turkish empire, and on his return he embodied his views in a memorandum drawn up by count Nesselrode, which was transmitted to London, but kept secret till March, 1854. In January and February of that year the czar had several conversations on the subject with the British envoy at St. Petersburg, sir G. H. Seymour, in one of which (Jan. 14) he compared Turkey to a "sick man" in a state of decrepitude, on the point of death, and made proposals to the British government as to the disposal of his property. He stated frankly that he would not permit the British to establish themselves at Constantinople; but said in another conversation, he would not object to their possessing Egypt. The purport of these conversations was conveyed in despatches to lord John Russell, who replied that the British government declined to make any provision for the contingency of the fall of Turkey. The czar made similar proposals to the French government with the same result.

RUSTCHUK, Turkish town on the Danube, one of the "quadrilateral" fortresses lost to Turkey with Bulgaria by treaty of Berlin, 13 July, 1878.

RUTHENIUM, a rare metal, discovered in an ore of platinum by M Claus, in 1845.

RUTHERFURD'S ACT, LORD (13 & 14 Vict. c. 36), for simplifying law proceedings in Scotland, passed 1850.

RUTHVEN, RAID OF, a term applied to the seizure of the person of James VI of Scotland by William Ruthven, earl of Gowrie, and other nobles, in 1582, to compel the king to dismiss his favourites, Arran and Lennox. Ostensibly for this, Gowrie was judicially put to death by his two opponents in 1584.

RYE-HOUSE PLOT, a plot (some think pretended) to secure the succession of the duke of Monmouth to the throne in preference to the duke of York (afterwards James II.), a Roman catholic. Some of the conspirators are said to have projected the assassination of the king, Charles II., and his brother. This design is said to have been frustrated by the king's house at Newmarket accidentally taking fire, which hastened the royal party away eight days before the plot was to take effect, 22 March, 1683; see Newmarket. The plot was discovered 12 June following. Lord William Russell on 21 July, and Algernon Sidney on 7 Dec following, suffered death for being concerned in this conspiracy. Both were illegally convicted. The name was derived from the conspirators' place of meeting, the Rye-house at Broxbourne, Hertfordshire.

RYSWICK (Holland), where the celebrated peace was concluded between England, France, Spain, and Holland, signed, by their representatives, 20 Sept., and by the emperor of Germany, 30 Oct. 1697.

S.

SAALFIELD (Saxony, N. Germany). Here the Prussians, under prince Louis of Prussia, were defeated and their leader slain by the French under Lannes, 10 Oct 1806.

SAARBRÜCK, the Roman Augusti Muri or Saræ pons, an open town on the left bank of the Saar, in Rhenish Prussia, founded in the tenth century, long subject to the bishops of Metz, afterwards ruled by counts (about 1237), and by the house of Nassau about 1380. It was captured by the French and retaken by the Germans 1676, reunited to France 1794-1814, and ceded to Prussia, 1815. On 2 Aug 1870, it was bombarded by the French under Frossard (between 11 and 1 in the daytime), and the Prussians in small force were dislodged, and the town occupied by the French general Bataille. The mitrailleuses were said to be very effective. On the 6 Aug the Prussian generals Goeben and Von Steinmetz, with the first army, recaptured Saarbruck, after a sanguinary conflict at the village of Spicheren. The loss was great on both sides. The French general François was killed, and the 2nd corps under Frossard nearly destroyed. The French retreated to Metz.

SABÆANS, the ancient inhabitants of Yemen, in S. Arabia, in the Old Testament called Sheba, Gen. x 28, Job vi 19, &c. The queen of Sheba is mentioned as having visited Solomon. The Sabæans were a wealthy and powerful people, carrying on an extensive trade of commodities as gold, ivory, spices, &c., obtained from India and Africa. In the 8th cent. B.C. "the people of Saba" paid tribut to Tiglath-Pileser and Sargon, kings of Assyria. A Roman expedition, under Ælius Gallus, unsuccessfully invaded the country of the Sabæans, 24 B.C. Their religion included the worship of the sun and moon, and other deities.

SABBATARIANS. Traces exist of Sabbatarii, or Sabbathaires, among the sects of the 16th century on the continent. Upon the publication of the "Book of Sports" in 1618, a violent controversy arose among English divines on two points: first, whether the Sabbath of the fourth commandment was in force among Christians, and secondly, whether, and on what ground, the first day of the week was entitled to be distinguished and observed as "the Sabbath." In 1628, Theophilus Brabourne, a clergyman, published the first work in favour of the Seventh-day or Saturday, as the true Christian Sabbath. He and several others suffered great persecution for this opinion; but after the restoration there were three or four congregations observing the last day of the week for public worship in London, and seven or eight in the country parts of England. In 1851 there were three Sabbatarian or Seventh-day Baptist congregations in England; but in America (especially in the New England states) they are more numerous.—Joseph Davis suffered imprisonment in 1670. He and his son bequeathed property to maintain the sect; and litigation respecting its disposal was settled by vice-chancellor Stuart in conformity with their intentions in June, 1870. Very few Sabbatarians then remained. The rev. Wm. Mead Jones, an eminent seventh-day Baptist in London, a profound scholar; died 22 Feb. 1895.

SABBATAI ZEVI, a false prophet, and the founder of a sect of semi-Christians and semi-Jews in the middle of the 17th cent. He announced the beginning of a Messianic reign, and it is said that in 1664 he had some 80,000 followers. He was put to death by the sultan of Turkey in 1677.

SABBATH, Heb. from shabath, "to rest." In the Decalogue the Sabbath is commanded to be observed as a day of rest for man and beast, the reason assigned being that God "rested the seventh day" from his labours in the work of creation; see Gen ii.; Exod xx. 8, Isaiah lviii 13; and as a commemoration of the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage in Egypt, Deut v 15. The observance of the Sabbath by the Jews is first mentioned after the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt, but no direct evidence of its having been kept in patriarchal times is to be found in the Pentateuch (which see), although the formula "Remember" with which the fourth commandment begins might seem to imply that the observance of the Sabbath was familiar to the Israelites, but had fallen into neglect. In the later history of the Jews after the captivity the Sabbath was kept with great strictness, and the sanctity of the day guarded by many stringent rules. The Mishna, for example, enumerates 30 principal works which are forbidden on the Sabbath, and to each of these are attached several minor ones which might lead to breaking of the Sabbath. To such a degree was the holiness of the seventh day esteemed by the Jews that when Jerusalem was stormed by Ptolemy I on a Sabbath the inhabitants would not stir to defend themselves. The early Christian Church observed the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and thus gradually took the place of the Jewish Sabbath. The earliest law by which the observance of the first day of the week was ordained is the edict of Constantine, 321. The religious solemnization of the seventh day was not peculiar to the Jews. Prof. Sayce, "Ancient Empires of the East," states:—"In Babylonia and Assyria the week of seven days was an Accadian or Babylonian invention, the days of the week being dedicated to the moon, sun, and five planets. The 7th, 14th, 21st, and 28th days of the lunar month were kept like the Jewish Sabbath, and were actually so named in Assyrian. They were termed ûmu nefafi in Accadian, rendered 'days of completion (of labour)' in Assyrian: the Assyrian Sabattu or 'Sabbath' itself being further defined as meaning 'completion of work' and 'a day of rest for the soul.'"—See Sunday.

SABBATH SCHOOLS, see Sunday Schools.

SABBATICAL YEAR, a Jewish institution, 1491 B.C. Exodus xxiii. During every seventh year the very ground had rest, and was not tilled; and every forty-ninth year all debts were forgiven, slaves set at liberty, and estates, &c., that were before sold or mortgaged, returned to their original families, &c.

SABELLIANISM, from Sabellius (of Ptolemais in Egypt), who flourished in the 3rd century, and who taught that there was but one person in the Godhead, the other persons of the Trinity being but different names of the same person. This doctrine was condemned at a council at Rome, 260.

SABINES, an ancient people of central Italy, from whom the Romans, under Romulus, took away their daughters by force, having invited them to some public sports or shows on purpose. When the Sabines determined to revenge this affront, the women became mediators to their fathers in behalf of their husbands, the Romans, and a lasting peace was made between them, 750 B.C. The Sabines, who had supported the Samnites in their war with Rome, were thoroughly defeated by M. Curius Dentatus, and their lands annexed 290 B.C., and eventually the Sabines were combined with the Roman people.

SACCHARINE, see Benzole.

SACCHAROMETER, an instrument for determining the amount of sugar in solutions. Soleil, an optician, of Paris, in 1847 made use of rotary polarised light for this purpose in a saccharometer, since improved by Duboscq.

SACHEVEREL RIOTS, see Riots, 1710.

SACRAMENT (from sacramentum, an oath, obligation, also mystery). The Christian sacraments are baptism and the Lord's Supper. The council of Trent, in 1547, affirmed the doctrine of the schoolmen that there are seven sacraments, baptism, the Lord's Supper, confirmation, penance, holy orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. The name was given to the Lord's Supper by the Latin fathers. The wine was restricted to the clergy about the beginning of the 12th century. Communion in one kind only was authoritatively sanctioned by the council of Constance, 15 June, 1415. Henry VII. of Germany was poisoned by a priest by the consecrated wafer, 24 Aug. 1313. The sacramental wine was poisoned by the gravedigger of the church at Zurich, by which sacrilegious deed a number of persons lost their lives, 4 Sept. 1776. In 1614 members of both houses of parliament were ordered to take the sacrament, as a guard against the introduction of Roman Catholics. In 1673 the Test act was passed; repealed in 1828; see Transubstantiation.

"Society of the Blessed Sacrament" (English churchmen), London, founded, 1860; "Confraternity of the Blessed Sacrament," founded 1862, the two united, 1867

SACRAMENTARIANS, followers of Zwingli (1487 1531), who differed from the Romanists and Lutherans in regard to the sacrament.

SACRAMENTO, ST., a Portuguese settlement in S. America, claimed by Spain in 1680, but relinquished in 1713; several times seized; ceded in 1777; acquired by Brazil in 1825, see California.

SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST. The publication of translations of the sacred books of the religion of the Brahmans, Buddhists, and Mohammedans, and of the followers of Khung-fu-tze and Lao-tze, edited by professor Max Müller, began in 1879. About 30 volumes have been published.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, see Music.

SACRED HEART OF JESUS; a form of devotion said to have been instituted in England in the seventeenth century, and much promoted by Marguerite Marie Alacoque, an enthusiastic French visitation nun who lived at Paray-le-Monial. She asserted that Christ had appeared to her, and taken out her heart, placed it in his own, glowing in flame, and then returned it. She died in 1690. Many churches have been dedicated to the Sacred Heart; the most splendid is that erected on Montmartre, in Paris, 1874-91, at the cost of about 1,000,000*l*. The festival of the Sacred Heart is held on Friday (in England, the Sunday) after the octave of Corpus Christi. A cloistered order of nuns of the Sacred Heart was founded by father Varin and Mme. Barat in Paris, in 1800; it has numerous houses in Europe, America, and Australia The chief of these in England is at Roehampton, and in Ireland at Roscrea.

Marguerite Marie Alacoque's book "Dévotion au Cœur de Jesus," published in 1698, much advocated by father Joseph Gallifet about 1726; and introduced into France, by request 1765
A pilgrimage from England, specially blessed by the pope, and headed by the duke of Norfolk, went to the shrine of Marguerite, at Paray-le-Monial, and returned 1-6 Sept 1873

The pope dedicated the universal church to "the Sacred Heart" . . . . 15 June, „

SACRED WARS.—I. Declared by the Amphictyons against Cirrha, near Delphi, for robbery and outrage to the visitors to the oracle, 595 B.C. Cirrha was razed to the ground, 586.—II. Between the Phocians and Delphians for the possession of the temple at Delphi, 448, 447.—III. The Phocians, on being fined for cultivating the sacred lands, seized the temple, 357. They were conquered by Philip of Macedon, and their cities depopulated, 346. See Crusades.

SACRIFICE was offered to God by Abel, Gen iv. 4. Sacrifices to the gods were introduced into Greece by Phoroneus, king of Argos, 1773 B.C. Human sacrifices had their origin among primitive tribes. All sacrifices to the true God were to cease with the sacrifice of Christ, 33 A.D. Heb x. 12-14. Pagan sacrifices were forbidden by the emperor Constantius II. 341. See Lang's "Myth, Ritual and Religion," and Tylor's "Primitive Culture."

SACRILEGE. In 1835, the punishment (formerly death) was made transportation for life By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 96, s. 50 (1861), breaking into a place of worship and stealing therefrom was made punishable with penal servitude for life.

SACRIPORTUS (Latium, Italy). Here Sylla defeated the younger Marius and Papirius Carbo with great slaughter, B.C. 82, and became dictator, 81.

SADDLES. In the earlier ages the Romans used neither saddles nor stirrups. Saddles were in use in the 3rd century, and are mentioned as made of leather in 304, and were known in England about 600. Side-saddles for ladies were introduced by Anne, queen of Richard II. in 1388. Stow.

SADDUCEES, a Jewish sect, said to have been founded by Sadoc, a scholar of Antigonus, about 200 B.C., who, misinterpreting his master's doctrine, taught that there was neither heaven nor hell, angel nor spirit, that the soul was mortal, and that there was no resurrection of the body from the dead. The Sadducees rejected the oral law, maintained by the Pharisees. See Matt. xxii. 23; Acts xxiii. 8.

SADLER'S WELLS (N. London), so called after Mr. Sadler, who built an orchestra to entertain the invalids who used the waters medicinally, 1683. In time the orchestra was enclosed, and the building became a place for dramatic performances. The theatre was opened in 1765. Eighteen persons were trampled to death at this theatre, on a false alarm of fire, 18 Oct. 1807; see under Theatres. Now (1905) a music-hall.

SADOWA, see Koniggratz.

SAFES. A National Safe Company, London, opened vaults for storage of valuables, 1876.

SAFETY LAMP. One was invented in 1815 by sir Humphry Davy, to prevent accidents which happen in coal and other mines. The safety-lamp is founded on the principle that flame, in passing through iron-wire meshes, loses so much of its heat as to be incapable of igniting inflammable gases. The father of all safety-lamps was Dr. Reid Clanny, of Sunderland, whose invention and improvements are authenticated in the Transactions of the Society of Arts for 1817. The "Geordy," constructed by George Stephenson, the engineer, in 1815, is said to be the safest. A miner's electric light, by MM. Dumas and Benoit, was exhibited in Paris on 8 Sept. 1862. On 14 Aug. 1867, safety-lamps were rigidly tested by several mining engineers, and serious doubts thrown upon their complete efficacy. Col. Shakespear's safety lamp (light extinguished by opening) exhibited at Royal Institution, &c., May, 1879. Messrs. Fleuss and Foster's new safety mining lamp approved, Jan. 1884.

Mr. J. Wilson-Swan's electric safety lamp, weighing 64 lb. exhibited at Aberdeen meeting of British Association, Sept. 1885.

Mr. Charles D. Aria's safety lamp reported successful; the supply of mineral oil is isolated from the burner, 1889.

The Thornbury miners' lamp (patented 16 Feb 1889) tried at Aldwarke Main Collieries by Mr. C. E. Rhodes, and subjected to experiments by prof. Dewar and sir Frederick Abel, who declare that this lamp fulfils the conditions required by the royal commission in 1886. Paraffin and other mineral oils may be used in this lamp, reported Nov. 1889.

SAFFRON (saffran, French; saffrano, Italian), the flower of crocus, was first brought to England in the reign of Edward III. by a pilgrim, about 1339, probably from Arabia, as the word is from the Arabic zaphar. Miller. It was cultivated in England in 1582.

SAGAS. Early Icelandic tales, dated from the 10th century, see Eddas.

SAGE (Sauge, French; Salvia, Latin), a wholesome herb. Mortimer. The Mexican sage, Salvia mexicana, was brought from Mexico, 1724. The blue African sage, Salvia africana, and the golden African sage, Salvia aurea, were brought to England from the Cape of Good Hope in 1731.

SAGUNTUM, or ZACYNTHUS, now Murviedro, in Valentia, E. Spain, renowned for the dreadful siege it sustained, 219 B.C. The citizens, after performing incredible acts of valour for eight months, chose to be buried in the ruins of their city rather than surrender to Hannibal. They burnt themselves, with their houses, and the conqueror became master of a pile of ashes, 218 B.C.

SAHARA, a great sandy desert, North Africa, south of Barbary States. A project for making an inland sea here was entertained in 1883, and the construction of a railway was proposed in Algeria, Oct. 1890. A large natural reservoir of water at El Golea in the desert, was discovered early 1891. M. Foureau's 12 years' exploration, rich in scientific results, see French West Africa, 1898–1900. M. Blanchet's mission meets with many disasters; he dies, Oct. 1900. Twat, the region between Algeria and the Sudan, includes 3 districts, Gurara, Twat, and Tidikelt, occupied by the French; see Algeria and Morocco, 1900.

Surveys for the Trans-Saharan telegraph line, to link up Timbuctoo with Algiers, and eventually to reach lake Tchad, completed by M. Etiennot, inspector of posts and telegraphs in Algeria, announced . . . . . Sept. 1905

SAIGON, French colony in Cochin China, founded in 1860, after a defeat of the Chinese, 17 Feb. 1859.

SAILORS' HOME, in Well-street, London Docks, established by Mr George Green, 1830; opened, 1835. In one year it admitted 5,444 boarders, who, besides home, had evening instruction, the use of a savings' bank, &c. Similar institutions have since been established in ports in the United Kingdom and abroad. Sailors' orphan girls' school and home, Hampstead, established 1829. Sailors' and Firemen's Union, see Shipping. The Passmore Edwards Sailors' Palace, Limehouse, opened by the prince and princess of Wales; an "Ocean library" inaugurated 19 May, 1903.

SALADO, a river, S Spain; see Tarifa.

SALADS are stated to have been in use in the middle ages, lettuces are said to have been introduced into England from the Low Countries, 1520-47.

SALAMANCA (W. Spain), taken from the Saracens 861. The university was founded 1240, and the cathedral built 1513. Near here the British and allies, commanded by lord Wellington, totally defeated the French army under marshal Marmont, 22 July, 1812. The loss of the victors was most severe, amounting in killed, wounded, and missing, to nearly 6,000 men. Marmont left in the victor's hands 7,141 prisoners, 11 pieces of cannon, 6 stands of colours, and 2 eagles. This victory was followed by the capture of Madrid. Population, 1887, 22,199.

SALAMIS (near Athens). In a great sea-fight here, 20 Oct. 480 B.C., Themistocles, the Greek commander, with only 310 sail, defeated the fleet of Xerxes, king of Persia, which consisted of 1,000 sail.—Near Salamis, in Cyprus, the Greeks defeated the Persian fleet, 449 B.C.; and Demetrius Poliorcetes defeated the fleet of Ptolemy and his allies, 306 B.C.

SALASSI, a turbulent Alpine tribe, were thoroughly subdued by Terentius Varro, 25 B.C., and a Roman colony established in their territories (now Aosta).

SALDANHA BAY, S. Atlantic Ocean; northward of the Cape of Good Hope. Here on 17 Aug. 1796, a Dutch squadron, under admiral Lucas, was captured by vice-admiral sir George Keith Elphinstone, without resistance; sir George was created lord Keith.

SALENCKEMEN, on the Danube Here a victory was gained by the imperialists, under prince Louis of Baden, over the Turks, commanded by the grand vizier Mustapha Kiuprigli, 19 Aug. 1691.

SALERNO (Salernum, S. Italy), an ancient Roman colony Its university, with a celebrated school of medicine, reputed to be the oldest in Europe, was founded by Robert Guiscard the Norman, who seized Salerno in 1077 Salerno suffered much in the wars of the middle ages.

SALIQUE or SALIC LAW, by which females are excluded from inheriting the crown of France, is said to have been instituted by Pharamond, 424, and ratified in a council of state by Clovis I., the real founder of the French monarchy, in 511. Henault. This law, introduced into Spain by the Bourbons 1700, was formally abolished by decree 29 March, 1830, and on the death of Ferdinand VII. his daughter succeeded as Isabella II, 29 Sept. 1833; see Spain By this law also Hanover was separated from England, when queen Victoria ascended the English throne, 1837.

SALISBURY (Wilts), founded in the beginning of the 13th century, on the removal of the cathedral hither from Old Sarum National councils or parliaments were repeatedly held at Salisbury, particularly in 1296, by Edward I; in 1328, by Edward III, and in 1384 Henry Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was executed here by order of Richard III., in 1483 —On SALISBURY PLAIN is Stonehenge (which see) This plain was estimated at 500,000 acres On it were so many cross roads, and so few houses to take directions from, that Thomas, earl of Pembroke, planted a tree at each milestone from Salisbury to Shaftesbury, for the traveller's guide. The autumn military manœuvres took place on Salisbury Plain, Aug, Sept. 1872; again 31 Aug. 1898, and since, see under Army.—The first seat of the BISHOPRIC was at Sherborne, St. Aldhelm being prelate, 705. Herman removed the seat to Old Sarum, about 1072, and the see was removed to Salisbury by a papal bull, in 1217 It has yielded to the church of Rome one saint and two cardinals. The building of the cathedral commenced 28 April, 1220, and was completed in 1258. This edifice is reckoned one of our finest ecclesiastical erections Its spire, the loftiest in the kingdom, was considered in danger in April, 1864, and subscriptions were begun for its immediate repair. The choir was re-opened, after restoration by sir G G. Scott, 1 Nov. 1876; spire and turrets restored under sir Arthur Blomfield, March, 1898. SALISBURY'S ACT, see Artisans.

SALLEE, a port of Morocco, long a haunt for pirates, destroyed by the British in 1632, and about 300 captives released.

SALLENTINI, allies of the Samnites, the only Italian tribe not subject to Rome, were overcome in war in 267 and 266 B.C., and Brundisium, their port, taken.

SALMON FISHERIES. The laws relating to them were consolidated and amended in 1861, and the report of a commission of inquiry (including sir Wm. Jardine) was published, in Feb. 1862. An act restricting the capture of salmon at certain times, passed in 1863, was amended in 1869-1870, and 1873. During the "salmon fence," 14 Sept. to 1 Feb., it is unlawful to catch fish of the salmon kind.

SALMON OVA, packed in boxes with moss, charcoal, and ice, to retard development - a plan suggested and proved practicable by Mr E. H. Moscrop in 1863—adopted successfully by Mr J A Youl, who sent ova to Australia in the "Norfolk" . 1864

Salmon introduced into the Thames, at Teddington, 1901, and Feb. . . . . "
Danubian salmon eggs, brought from Austria, successfully hatched out at Mr. W. Gilbey's fish hatchery at Denham, near Uxbridge; the first time the Danubian salmon has been successfully hatched in England, reported . . . May, 1905

SALONICA, see Thessalonica.

SALT (chloride of sodium, a compound of the gas chlorine and the metal sodium) is procured from the rocks in the earth, from salt-springs, and from sea-water. The famous salt-mines of Wielitzka, near Cracow in Poland, have been worked 600 years. The salt-works in Cheshire, called the WICHES (Nantwich, Northwich, and Middlewich), were of great importance in the time of the Saxon heptarchy. The salt-mines of Staffordshire were discovered about 1670 Salt duties were first exacted in 1702; they were renewed in 1732; reduced in 1823; and in that year were ordered to cease in 1825 During the French war the duty reached to 30*l.* per ton. For the salt-tax in France see Gabelle. The government salt monopoly in India was abolished in May, 1863, by sir C. Trevelyan. Since 1797 salt has been largely employed in the manufacture of chloride of lime or bleaching powder (by obtaining its chlorine), and soap (by obtaining its soda). On this are based the chemical works of Cheshire, Lancashire, and other places See under Alkalies.

Much distress in the salt districts of Cheshire through the subsidence of land, 1887-8. The proprietors of the Cheshire salt mines combined to form a "trust" or syndicate in the autumn of 1888; central office, Northwich; the trade being nearly ruined by great competition, first meeting 27 Sept. 1888.
Great advance in the price of salt Oct. 1888.
A "salt museum" presented to the town of Northwich by Mr. Brunner, M.P., March, 1889.
Salt exported from the United Kingdom: 1876, 865,804 tons; 1880, 1,051,240 tons; 1885, 921,869 tons; 1890, 726,021 tons; 1896, 660,935 tons; 1900, 547,395 tons; 1901, 617,203 tons; 1904, 622,429 tons.

SALT LAKE, see Mormonites.

SALT-PETRE (from sal petræ, salt of the rock), or Nitre, is a compound of nitric acid and potash (nitrogen, oxygen, and potassium), and hence is called nitrate of potash. It is the explosive ingredient in gunpowder, many detonating powders, and lucifer matches. Boyle in the 17th century demonstrated that salt-petre was composed of aqua fortis (nitric acid) and potash; the discoveries of Lavoisier (1777) and Davy (1807) showed its real composition. Its manufacture in England began about 1625. During the French revolutionary war, the manufacture was greatly increased by the researches of Berthollet.

SALUTE AT SEA. It is a received maxim at sea, that he who returns the salute always fires fewer guns than he receives, which is done even between the ships of princes of equal dignity; but the Swedes and Danes return the compliment without regarding how many guns are fired to them. The English claim the right of being saluted first in all places, as sovereigns of the seas; the Venetians claimed this honour within their gulf, &c. The admiralty issued a code of rules for salutes, Dec. 1876. See Flag, and Naval Salute.

SALVADOR, SAN, one of the Bahamas, and the first point of land discovered in the West Indies or America by Columbus. It was previously called Guanahani, or Cat's Isle, and Columbus (in acknowledgment to God for his deliverance) named it San Salvador when he first saw it, 11 Oct. 1492. The capital, San Salvador, was destroyed by an earthquake, 16 April, 1854, and is now abandoned.

SAMOS, an island on the W coast of Asia Minor. Colonised by Ionians about 1043 B.C. The city was founded about 980. Polycrates, ruler of Samos (532-22 B.C.), was one of the most able, fortunate, and treacherous of the Greek tyrants, and possessed a powerful fleet. He patronised Pythagoras (born here) and Anacreon. Samos was taken by the Athenians, 440; and, with Greece, became subject to Rome, 146. It was taken by the Venetians, A.D. 1125, who here made velvet (samet), and became subject to the Turks, about 1459. Population, 1891, 44,953; 1900, 54,830. Capital Vathey (population, 1900, 25,000).

It was made a principality under Turkish suzerainty by sultan Mahmoud in 1832.

SAMPFORD COURTENAY (Devon). Here John, lord Russell, defeated the Cornish and Devonshire catholic rebels, the middle of Aug. 1549.

SANCTUARIES, see Asylums. Privileged places for the safety of offenders are said to have been granted by king Lucius to churches and their precincts. St. John's of Beverley was thus privileged in the time of the Saxons. St. Burian's, in Cornwall, was privileged by Athelstan, 935; Westminster, by Edward the Confessor; St. Martin's-le-Grand, 1529. Being much abused, the privilege of sanctuary was limited by the pope in 1503 (at the request of Henry VII.), and much reduced in 1540. In London, persons were secure from arrest in certain localities: these were the Minories, Salisbury-court, Whitefriars, Fulwood's-rents, Mitre-court, Baldwin's-gardens, the Savoy, Clink, Deadman's-place, Montague-close, and the Mint. This security was abolished 1697, but lasted in some degree till the reign of George II. (1727).

SANDALS, see Shoes.

SAND-BLAST. Gen. B. C. Tilghman, of Philadelphia, has invented a method of cutting stone or hard metal by a jet of quartz sand impelled by compressed air or steam. A hole of 1¼ inch diameter and 1¼ inch deep was bored through a block of corundum, nearly as hard as diamond, in 25 minutes. The invention was submitted to the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, 15 Feb. 1871. It may be employed in the arts, for etching, glasswork, &c.

SANDWICH (Portus Rutupensis, Kent). It suffered by Danish invaders in 851, 993, and 1014, but was rebuilt by Canute, and became prosperous; it became chief of the cinque ports about 1066. It contributed 22 ships and 504 mariners to Edward III.'s French expedition. It was taken and plundered by the French under Brézé in Aug. 1457. Flemish silk and woollen manufactories were settled here by Elizabeth in 1561. Disfranchised 1885. Pop., 1881, 2,846; 1891, 2,796; 1901, 3,000.

SANDWICH ISLANDS or HAWAII ARCHIPELAGO, a group in the Pacific Ocean, discovered by captain Cook in 1778; but thought now to have been discovered by Juan Galtan, a Spaniard, about 1542. In Owhyhee or Hawaii, one of these islands, he fell a victim to the sudden resentment of the natives, 14 Feb. 1779. Those people made great progress in civilisation, and embraced Christianity before any missionaries were settled among them. Population in 1884, 80,578; 1890, 89,990; 1905, 154,000 (including about 25,000 Chinese, 60,000 Japanese, and 28,000 whites). Capital, Honolulu, population 39,305. SANITATION, the preservation of health. Strict cleanliness is enjoined in the law of Moses, 1490 B.C. Great attention has been paid to the public health in France since 1802. Tardieu published his "Dictionnaire de Hygiène," 1852-54. Sanitary commissions were appointed in 1838 and 1844. To Dr. Southwood Smith is mainly attributable the honour of commencing the agitation on the subject of public health in England about 1832; his "Philosophy of Health" having excited much attention. Subsequent to 1838 he published numerous sanitary reports, having been much employed by the government. Professors of hygiene are now appointed. International conferences, the first at Paris, 1851, are held at intervals. See Health, Public Health, and Hygiene (Congresses).

SANSKRIT, the language of the Brahmans of India, spoken at the time of Solomon, has been much studied of late years. Sir Wm. Jones, who published a translation of the poem Sakuntalá, in 1783, discovered that a complete literature had been preserved in India, comprising sacred books (the Vedas), history and philosophy, lyric and dramatic poetry. Texts and translations of many works have been published by the aid of the East India Company, the Oriental Translation Fund, and private liberality. The professorship of Sanskrit at Oxford was founded by colonel Boden. The first professor, H. H. Wilson, appointed in 1832, translated part of the Rig-veda Sanhitá, the sacred hymns of the Brahmins, and several poems, &c. Professor Monier Williams (elected 1860, knt. 1886, died 11 April, 1899) published an English and Sanskrit dictionary, 1851. Professor Max Müller published his history of Sanskrit Literature in 1859, and edited the original text of the Vedas (he died 28 Oct. 1900). Philologists have discovered an intimate connection between the Sanskrit, Persian, Greek, Latin, Teutonic, Slavonian, Celtic, and Scandinavian languages. Prof. Buehler, eminent Oriental scholar, professor of Sanskrit at Vienna, drowned in the lake of Constance, 8 April, 1898; Dr. Peter Peterson, of Bombay, an eminent Sanscritist, dies Sept. 1899. SAPPERS AND MINERS, a name given in 1812 to the non-commissioned officers and privates of the corps of Royal Engineers. Brande.

SAPPHIC VERSE, invented by Sappho, the lyric poetess of Mitylene. She was equally celebrated for her poetry, beauty, and a hopeless passion for Phaon, a youth of her native country, on which last account it is said she threw herself into the sea from Mount Leucas, and was drowned, about 590 B C. The Lesbians, after her death, paid her divine honours, and called her the tenth muse. Some consider the story fabulous.

SAPPHIRE, a precious stone of an azure colour, and transparent; in hardness it exceeds the ruby, and is next to the diamond. One was placed in the Jewish high priest's breast-plate, 1491. Thamas Kouli Khan is said to have possessed a sapphire valued at 300.000*l.*, 1733 Artificial sapphires were made in 1857 by M Gaudin Equal parts of alum and sulphate of potash were heated in a crucible. Mr. Pierpont Morgan presents two sapphires, one reported to be the largest and the other the most beautiful in the world, to the Nat. Hist. museum, New York, July, 1902

SARABAND. A stately dance invented by Sarabanda, a dancer of Seville, in the 16th century.

SARACENS, a name of doubtful origin, popularly applied in the middle ages and since to the Arabs, Moors, and other Mahometans who conquered the East, Spain, Sicily, and parts of Africa, and resisted the Crusaders. See Mahometanism.

SARAGOSSA (N.E Spain), anciently Cæsarea Augusta, founded 27 B C , was taken by the Goths, 470, by the Arabs, 712; by Alfonso of Spain, 1118. Here Philip V. was defeated by the archduke Charles, 20 Aug. 1710. On 17 Dec 1778, 400 of the inhabitants perished in a fire at the theatre. Saragossa, after successfully resisting the French in 1808, was taken by them after a most heroic defence by general Palafox, 20 Feb 1809. The inhabitants, of both sexes, resisted until worn out by fighting, famine, and pestilence Population, 1887, 92,407; 1900, 100,000.

SARAH SANDS, see Wrecks, 1857

SARATOGA (New York State, N. America). Here general Burgoyne, commander of a body of the British army, after a severe engagement with the Americans at Germanstown, in which he was victorious, 3, 4 Oct., being surrounded, surrendered all his army (5791 men) to the American general Gates, 17 Oct. 1777. This was the greatest check the British suffered in the war.

SARAWAK, see Borneo.

SARDINIA, an island in the Mediterranean, successively possessed by the Phœnicians, Greeks, Carthaginians (about 500 B.C.), Romans (238), Vandals (A.D. 456), Saracens (720-40), Genoese (1022), Pisans (1165), Aragonese (1352), and Spaniards. From settlers belonging to these various nations the present inhabitants derive their origin. Victor Amadeus, duke of Savoy, acquired Sardinia in 1720, with the title of king; see Savoy. Population of the Sardinian dominions in 1858, 5,194,807; of Sardinia alone, 1887, 723,833; 1901, 789,314 The king of Sardinia was recognised as king of Italy by his parliament in Feb. 1861; see Italy.

SARDIS, see under Seven Churches.

SARMATIA, the ancient name for the country in Asia and Europe between the Caspian Sea and the Vistula, including Russia and Poland. The Sarmatæ or Sauromatæ troubled the early Roman empire by incursions. After subduing the Scythians they were subjugated by the Goths, in the 3rd and 4th centuries. They joined the Huns and other barbarians in invading Western Europe in the 5th century.

SARNO (S Italy). Near this river, Teias, king of the Goths, was defeated and slain by Justinian's general Narses, March, 553.

SARUM, OLD (Wiltshire), an ancient British town, the origin of Salisbury (which see). Although completely decayed, it returned two members to parliament till 1832.

SASSANIDES, descendants of Artaxerxes or Ardishir, whose father, Babek, was the son of Sassan. He revolted against Artabanus, the king of Parthia; defeated him on the plain of Hormuz, 226; and re-established the Persian monarchy. This dynasty was expelled by the Mahometans, 652; see Persia.

SATAN, see Devil Worship.

SATIRE. About a century after the introduction of comedy, satire made its appearance at Rome in the writings of Lucilius, called the inventor of it, 116 B.C. Livy. The Satires of Horace (35 B.C.), Juvenal (about A.D. 100), and Persius (about A.D. 60), are the most celebrated in ancient times, and those of Churchill (1761) and Pope (1729), in modern times. Butler's "Hudibras," satirizing the presbyterians, first appeared in 1663. Satire Menippée, a celebrated satirical pamphlet, partly in verse and partly in prose, attacking the policy of the court of Spain and the league, written in the style of the biting satires of the cynic philosopher Menippus. The first part, "Catholicon d'Espagne," by Leroy, appeared in 1593, the second, "Abrégé des Etats de la Ligue," by Gillot, Pithou, Rapin, and Passerat, appeared in 1594. Bouillet.

SATRAPIES, divisions of the Persian empire, formed by Darius Hystaspes about 516 B.C.

SATTARA (W. India) was long a flourishing state, founded by Sevajee about 1646; subjugated by the Mahrattas about 1749, conquered by the British, 1818; ruled by a rajah under the protection of the company. The last rajah died without issue in 1848, when the country was annexed.

SATURDAY (the last, or seventh day of the week, the Jewish Sabbath, see Sabbath). It was so called from an idol worshipped on this day by the Saxons, and according to Verstegan, was named by them Sateine's day. Pardon. It is more probably from Saturn, dies Saturni Saturday Review, an independent literary weekly journal, was first published, 3 Nov. 1855. See Hospital and Lifeboat.

SATURN, the planet, ascertained to be about 900 millions of miles distant from the sun, and its diameter to be about 77,230 miles. One of the 10 satellites was discovered by Huyghens (25 March, 1655); four by Cassini (1672-84); two by sir William Herschel (1789), one by Bond and Lassell (1848), and one by prof. Pickering in Arizona, U S. (18 March, 1899). The 10th satellite was discovered by prof Pickering, 29 April, 1905. The ring was observed by Galileo, about 1610, its annular form determined by Huyghens, about 1655 Cassini discovered that the ring consisted in fact of two concentric rings, the inner brighter than the outer, in 1675. An inner ring was detected in 1850 by Dawes in England (29 Nov.), and by Bond in America. The ring, or series of concentric rings, is now considered to be composed of a multitude of small satellites.

SATURNALIA, festivals in honour of Saturn, father of the gods, were instituted long before the foundation of Rome, in commemoration of the freedom and equality which prevailed on the earth in his golden reign. Some, however, suppose that the Saturnalia were first observed at Rome in the reign of Tullus Hostilius (673-640 B.C.), after a victory obtained over the Sabines. whilst others suppose that Janus first instituted them in gratitude to Saturn, from whom he had learned agriculture. Others assert that they were first celebrated after a victory obtained over the Latins by the dictator Posthumius, when he dedicated a temple to Saturn, 497 B.C. During these festivals no business was allowed, amusements were encouraged, and distinctions ceased.

SAVAGE CLUB, instituted by various literary men, in 1857, facetiously terming themselves "savages," on account of their freedom from conventionalism. Mr. W. E. Gladstone was present at the 22nd anniversary, 14 June, 1879, and the king, then prince of Wales, was a visitor in 1882.

SAVAGE ISLAND was discovered by capt. Cook in 1774, and so named because of the fierce attack made by the natives on his party. The island has long been a field of missionary enterprise; the inhabitants, about 5,000, are now Christians, and it was ceded to Great Britain by the Samoa agreement, Nov. 1899.

SAVANDROOG or SEVERNDROOG (Mysore, S. India), a strong fortress, was captured by the British, 2 April, 1755, and 21 Dec. 1791.

SAVANNAH, a city and port of Georgia on the river Savannah, U.S.A., founded in 1733, and incorporated, 1789; it was taken by the British in the American war in 1778, and by gen. Sherman, the northern general, 21 Dec. 1864. Pop. 1880, 30,709; 1890, 43,189; 1900, 54,244.

SAVINGS' BANKS. The first of these was instituted at Berne, in Switzerland, in 1787, by the name of caisse de domestiques, being intended for servants only; another was set up in Basel, in 1792, open to all depositors. The rev. Joseph Smith, of Wendover, began a Benevolent Institution in 1799, and in 1803-4, a "charitable bank" was instituted at Tottenham by Miss Priscilla Wakefield. The rev. Henry Duncan established a parish bank at Ruthwell in 1810. One was opened in Edinburgh in 1814. The benefit clubs, among artisans, having accumulated stocks of money for their progressive purposes, a plan was adopted to identify these funds with the public debt of the country, and an extra rate of interest was held out as an inducement; hence were formed savings' banks to receive small sums, returnable with interest on demand.

Rt hon Geo Rose developed the system, and brought it under parliamentary control, 1816

In 1840 there were 550 banks, 766,354 depositors, amount, 22,060,904*l*

Acts to consolidate and amend previous laws relating to savings' banks were passed in 1828 and 1847, extended to Scotland in 1835, again consolidated and amended in 1863, 1880, and 1887

On 20 Nov. 1851, the number of savings' banks in Great Britain and Ireland was 574, besides above 20,000 friendly societies and charitable institutions The depositors (in the banks) were 1,092,581, while the societies embraced a vast but unknown number of persons. the amount of deposits was 32,893,511*l*

SAVONA (a manufacturing town, N. Italy, long held by the Genoese) was captured by the king of Sardinia in 1746; by the French in 1809, and annexed; restored to Sardinia at the peace. Pope Pius VII was kept here by Napoleon I., 1809-12 Soap is said to have been invented here, and hence its French name savon.

SAVOY, the ancient Sapaudia or Sabaudia, formerly a province in N. Italy, east of Piedmont It became a Roman province about 118 B.C The Alemanni seized it in A.D. 395, and the Franks in 490. It shared the revolutions of Switzerland till about 1048, when Conrad, emperor of Germany, gave it to Humbert, with the title of count. Count Thomas acquired Piedmont in the 13th century. Amadeus, count of Savoy, having entered his dominions, solicited Sigismund to erect them into a duchy, which he did at Cambray, 19 Feb. 1416. Victor-Amadeus, duke of Savoy, obtained the kingdom of Sicily from Spain, by a treaty, in 1713, but afterwards exchanged it with the emperor for the island of Sardinia, with the title of king, 1720. The French subdued Savoy in 1792, and made it a department of France, under the name of Mont Blanc, in 1800. It was restored to the king of Sardinia in 1814; but with Nice annexed to France in 1860, in accordance with a vote by universal suffrage, 23 April, 1860. The annexation was censured in England.

DUKES OF SAVOY.
